

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE ANCHOR.

The anchor here illustrated is one of the series of funeral designs by C. H. Fox, Columbia avenue and Twenty-first street, Philadelphia. This is a good example of the cheap design, so frequently demanded where the affections are strong and the purse light. It may be made up either in white or in pink and white, as the taste dictates. It cannot be recommended from an artistic standpoint. My recollection is that Mr. Fox shuddered when exhibiting this design. PHIL.

SOME WINDOWS.

Appropriate Backgrounds.

Reviewing, for a moment, the classification of window designs—landscape, water and special design—we shall be able to see at once when it is necessary to put in extra work and thought on the proper material for the background. Beyond doubt the appropriate setting for a landscape window is the very material that would be found in the natural spot which it is designed to reproduce, as moss, grass, lichens, leaves, logs, bark, tree trunks, ferns, etc. For a water window, nobody with sense would think of introducing any material except rocks, sand, water plants and all such objects as are found in these localities naturally. Special design windows are the place, and the only place, for fabrics like chiffon and ribbon. Ribbon should not be used in rustic effects, like twig baskets, any more than a fine vase should be set against a stump, or ice cream be served with salted peanuts. To anyone who thinks at all about the common sense part, these little proprieties will occur, and require no debate as to their adoption.

It is often quite a help to introduce some object as a center to tie to in a decoration, although a poor fad to indulge in too often. It may or may not be much in evidence in the finished picture. As a rule, it is best to keep the object largely hidden or inconspicuous.

Various Designs in Roses.

Given several dozen roses, carnations, peonies or several hundred cornflowers, peas or daisies; problem, to find a suggestive plan for display. What do roses do in their habitat? For one thing, some of them climb. Then provide something for them to climb upon, as a trellis, arch, arbor, garden gate or wall. The first three may be made of bronzed or greened poultry wire. If an arbor is attempted, let it be placed so that the observer may look through, and not at the side. Bring the entrance close to the glass, and make the arbor as deep as the window will allow. Fill in underneath with primroses, cinerarias, begonias, or other low-growing plants, whichever happen to be in season. Use long-stemmed, full-blown roses, set in slender vases close to the sides of the arbor, inside or out.

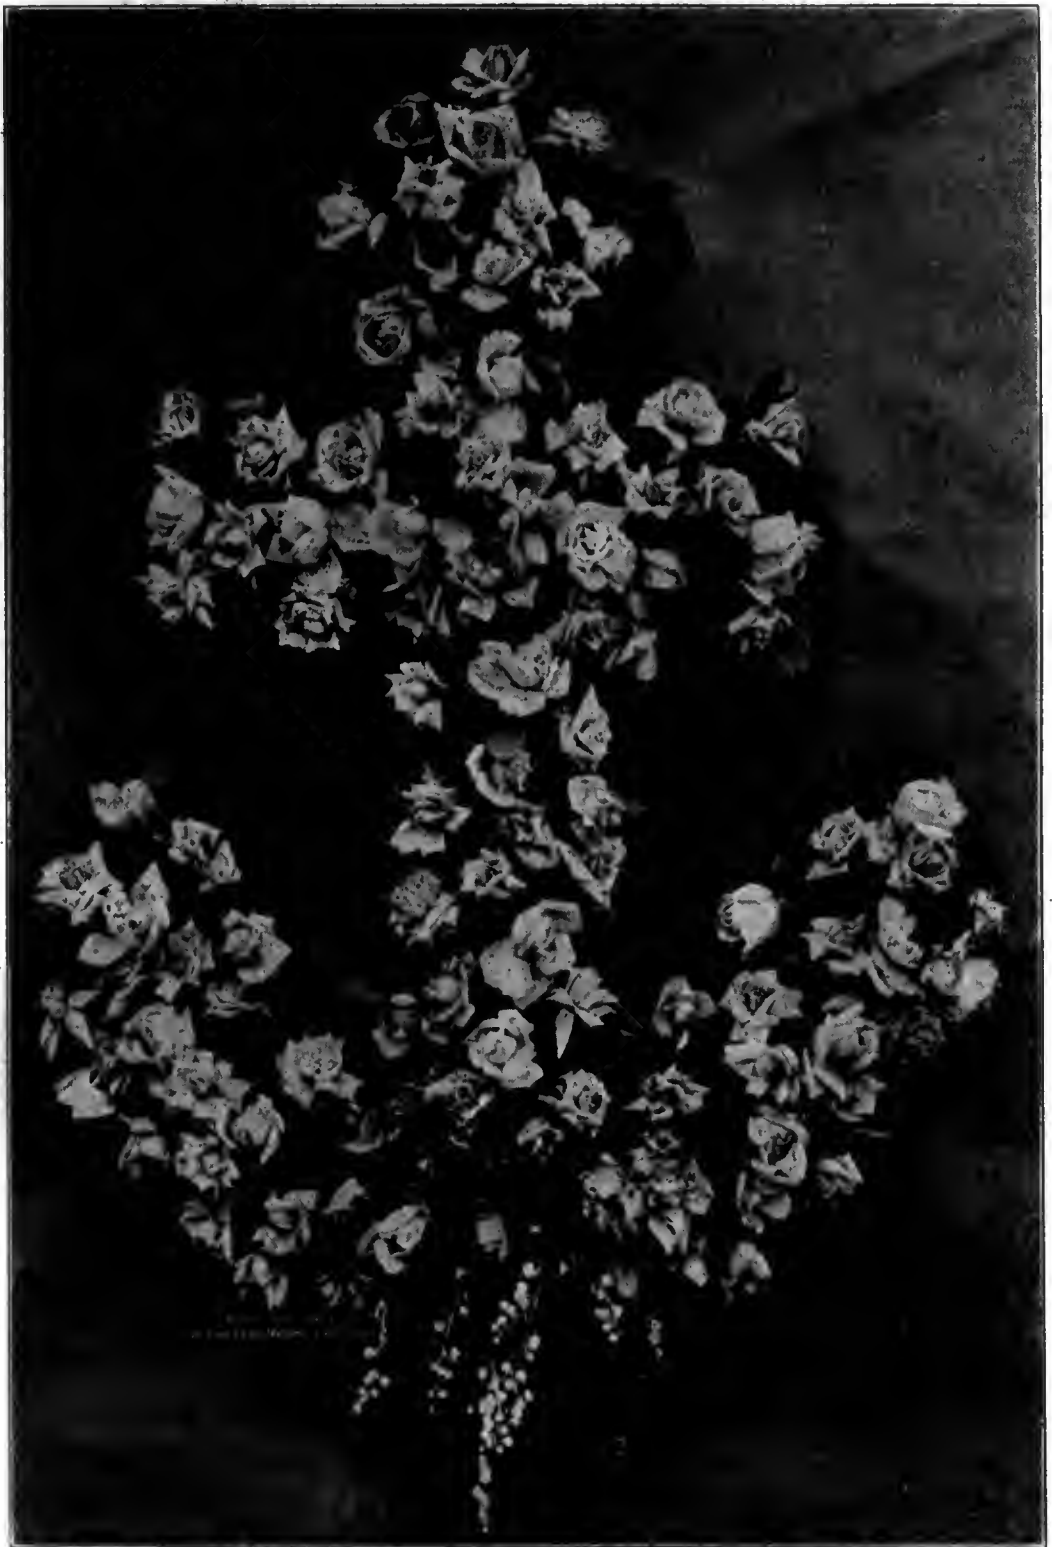

Weave stems in and out of the meshes and see that the lower ends reach the water. Trim the arch irregularly and not very heavily, and bank ferns or jars of short-stemmed roses around the base, covering the vases and pots with moss, but not with artificial pot covers. Here the other. A trellis the shape of a ladder or a tennis racket can be made and trimmed in the same fashion. Roses so placed and left undisturbed will last several days, even though nearly full blown when first put in.

Another plan for using roses in somewhat of a natural fashion is the making of a hedge by loosely arranging a number of low bowls of roses in a thick line resembling a hedge. Conceal the vases behind some cut foliage or low plants. Place a few vases of long-stemmed roses or other graceful flowers behind the hedge and let some fall over the hedge, while others stand high to resemble plants growing in a garden beyond.

Roses on Columns.

Another: Cluster a number of vases and every other place, always be careful about the coloring.

Roses on Arches and Trellises.

A more simple design of the same description can be made of one or two arches set side by side or one behind of long and short-stemmed roses mixed, and loosely placed in vases about the bases of two columns. On the top of each column place a basket of loosely arranged roses, some of which fall nearly far enough down to touch those clustered below. Cover or bank up the vases as in the preceding decorations. This should always be done when simulating growing plants.

Now, what is one way of displaying carnations to good advantage? After a little study of the flowers and the habits of the plant we receive the impression that we are in the company of some demure, old-fashioned body, in contrast with the traditional stateliness of the rose. A flower lover was once heard to remark that he always liked a carnation, for it is "such a neat flower."

A Scene in an Old Garden.

In the grandmothers' gardens the pinks grew in clumps and we naturally associate them with the old-time ribbon-grass and growing next to the garden walks. Try this for a carnation window sometime. The mechanical contrivance will be much like the foregoing. Leave plenty of space between the clumps, be generous with foliage, and the only lack will be a gentle breeze to set the flowers swinging.

Peonies grow with a wealth of dark, rich foliage. Arrange sparsely, with no other flowers, ranging the colors carefully from the rich red down through the rose-pinks to the lightest tints, called by courtesy white. Darkest colors should be placed nearest the light side of the window. The light ones will show themselves from the back of the window.

a few hundred extra carnation plants, the flowers of which will add materially to the year's revenue.

"This is propagation month and an opportune time for those interested to give their experiences through the Review and tell how to root 100 per cent of the geranium cuttings from outdoor-grown wood."

SOIL FROM MUM BENCHES.

Will soil taken from mum benches grow good geraniums for spring sales? I grow about 20,000, in 4-inch. Or can soil of mum benches be used again next year by heaping it outdoors, adding several layers of good cow manure and allowing it to remain outdoors all winter? I have plenty of well prepared soil outdoors, but thought of saving time and labor by using indoor mum soil, which was well prepared, mulched and fed with manure water. H. J. H.

Soil taken from chrysanthemum benches, piled up and allowed to freeze, is quite good enough for spring geraniums. A sprinkling of bone meal, added at the time of using, will be of great benefit.

New soil is preferable for mums, but by carefully adding potash and bone meal to the old soil and turning it over a few times in spring before using it again, good stock can be produced. This old soil will naturally require more feeding than new soil, both by way of mulching and liquid feeding. RIBES.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—On the testimony of three physicians, August 22, a jury in the probate court decided that John W. Krumm is insane. A guardian was appointed and he was committed to a hospital. Mr. Krumm had not been rational since he suffered a stroke of apoplexy more than two months ago.

PROPAGATING GERANIUMS.

The Use of Outdoor Wood.

At the recent meeting of the Iowa State Florists' Association, William Trillow, of Des Moines, made a brief talk on a subject of his own selection, "Propagation of Geraniums from Cuttings Taken from Outdoor Plants." Mr. Trillow said that his reason for choosing this subject was not so much to impart information as to get it, as his own success had not been especially gratifying. The substance of his talk and the discussion which followed it was about as follows:

"My observation is that writers do not devote as much attention to the geranium as they should. The propagation of carnations, roses, chrysanthemums, etc., is hashed over at conventions and in trade paper articles several times a year, while the old-fashioned geranium is hardly taken any notice of. Some say that anybody can grow geraniums. That is true under normal conditions; anyone with ordinary knowledge of the business can root ninety-five per cent of the geranium cuttings from wood grown under glass, but it is unusual for the best of growers to get more than fifty to sixty per cent from wood taken from plants grown out-of-doors. My own experience has been about this proportion."

In the discussion which followed, J. S. Wilson, now located in Des Moines, said that from fifty to sixty per cent was as much as he could get until he hit upon the plan of potting the cuttings on a bench exposed to full sunlight, giving one soaking of water and not giving any more unless they became dust-dry.

J. T. Temple, of Davenport, suggested the same treatment, while Mr. Polland, of Eldora, Ia., says his plan is to dibble the cuttings in shallow flats of soil and sand, watering thoroughly and placing in full sunlight on a level place outdoors. He says by this method he can root ninety-five to 100 per cent. He says that, with the exception of the first watering, they get no more moisture except that which they may get from rain and dew.

"To the man with a small greenhouse, growing and selling a general line at retail," says Mr. Trillow, "I think the geranium is just as much a bread and butter plant as the rose or carnation, and the greater percentage we can root from outdoor wood in the fall saves that much extra labor in the winter, besides making better plants for spring sales. True enough, these can be grown rapidly indoors during the winter, and every cutting will root, but the same space that it takes to grow them in will grow

MILDEW ON ROSES.

Enclosed you will find a branch of Bridesmaid rose with some kind of foreign substance on it. Can you tell us what it is? This is the first time we have seen anything of this kind. This and one other branch of the same kind are the only ones we have found so far.

D. P. V.

These plants are affected with mildew, a common trouble at this season.

Dust the foliage with flowers of sulphur, choosing a bright day for the operation. Close the ventilators to cause the temperature to rise to 95 degrees, to liberate the fumes, taking care not to let it remain so very long, as it may cause burning. Repeat this once a week. When firing commences, paint the pipes with the following mixture, of about the consistency of paint: Sulphur, two parts; air-slaked lime, one part; water sufficient, and close the house for an hour or so during the coldest part of the night. Repeat until the trouble disappears. RIBES.

CULTURE OF BEAUTY ROSES.

We wish to ask a few questions about Beauties, as we have never grown any before. We have 3-inch Beauties, planted July 29, good plants in solid benches, grown as follows: First we put in some good hard clay, about three inches; then about two inches of rough cinders for drainage, and then four inches of good rose soil. We have a concrete wall twelve inches high, which leaves about three inches of space to fill in with soil later. Should we cut back the young stock to make them break from the bottom? If so, how soon could we expect to cut Beauties? What treatment should they have from now on until spring? Should we put side ventilation in the house? When should we dry them off to carry them over for another year? Any information will be greatly appreciated. U. G.

Beauties handled as these have been should under favorable conditions give a good cut for the holidays or sooner. In order to have nice, bushy plants, the tops should be cut back to a good ripe eye. This rose, being a rank feeder, requires mulching earlier than most other roses, and toward spring, when the days begin to lengthen, it can stand a lot of liquid feeding.

There is really no necessity for side ventilation, if the top ventilation is ample.

Carrying Beauties over a second season is not a profitable experiment, except under the care of an expert, and even then it is risky.

In the meantime cultivate once a week; keep all weeds in subjection, give plenty of water and air and keep the house clear of insects and fungous pests.

MOULTON ROSE AS A BEDDER.

The accompanying illustration shows a bed of the rose, Miss Kate Moulton, originated by John Monson, of the Minneapolis Floral Co., Minneapolis, photographed at Elitch's Gardens, Denver, by J. H. Langer for the Denver Post.

This presents a circular bed of twenty-five Moulton roses, which has been a mass of bloom during the whole summer. It is the most attractive bed among a number of fine collections of blooming plants, and enthusiasts in floriculture are delighted with this addition to outdoor blooming roses.

It is found that the Colorado climate is peculiarly adapted to this rose, and the growth of stem and perfection of flower are seen better here than at its birthplace in Minnesota. M. E. M.

THRIPS IN ROSEBUDS.

We inclose a few samples of rosebuds that are blasted, and should be pleased to learn the cause of their acting in this way. We are cutting them from stock carried over from last year and have the glass shaded with a light coat of white-wash. The plants are in a healthy condition and are producing good stock, but about five per cent are like these samples. J. H. C.

These buds are badly infested with thrips, one of the worst pests that can get into a rose house and very difficult to eradicate. It is usually introduced into the house with manure that has been neglected by being overrun with weeds.

Keep the walks, the space beneath the benches and the soil on the benches clear of weeds, as these are the breeding places. Fumigate lightly and persistently with tobacco, to which has been added some red pepper.

It is a mistake to have shading on the glass. This is bound to make both buds and foliage soft and an easy prey to any trouble. Sunshine and light are the life of the rose. RIBES.

DISBUDDING ROSES.

Will you please tell me something about disbudding roses? When two or three leaves are cut from the top of a long ground shoot, how many of the shoots that follow are to be left, and which ones? When a lot of blind wood comes, is that to be left on? E. E. G.

The method of disbudding, as practiced by experts where teas or hybrid teas are concerned, is to cut off about half of the flower stem. This is done with the object of leaving only the best and most mature eyes to form the future flower stem.

With young plants it is not good policy to denude the plant of too much foliage at one time, as this has a tendency to weaken the plant and cause a crop of blind wood.

The shoots which follow this cutting back most invariably are flower stems, and, if the stock is vigorous and well attended to by way of feeding, watering and ventilating, will produce a good crop before Thanksgiving. RIBES.

AFTERTHOUGHTS.

Seated alone, on a swiftly moving, west-bound train, with every revolution of the wheels bearing me nearer home and its multitudinous duties, I was in a mood to think back over the few days just past and remember some of the delights of them.

Mighty Niagara! Who can tell of thy varying moods, under sunny skies or gray, enveloped in mist or spanned by a rainbow, whose end could never be reached, so hazardous were the attempt? It seems to me I saw Niagara from every point of vantage, caught its ever-changing aspect, listened to the voice of the Infinite as it rolled on its thunderous way, seething and sobbing, moaning and tossing, until after a mighty crescendo it died away to a faint diminuendo on its way down the gorge. But not for long, for again the Master Organist changes the stops and we see it seething, foaming, tumbling, hastening on, its mighty diapason now changed to a vex humana, and we almost hear it say, "Come on with us; we're only playing. The rocks will do you no harm."

Resisting the call of the siren, we follow the tumultuous stream until it speeds out majestically below the pine-clad hills, where sleeps the hero of Queenstown Heights. And we can scarcely believe we are looking at the same river, so changed is it in every way. Frowning cliffs, bare and rugged, have given way on one side to the army of pines marching up and down, and on the other side fields and orchards meet our gaze.

Then beautiful Toronto. What a model of the city beautiful was the portion of it that we saw! Ivy-covered churches, whose chimes pealed merrily out and whose spires pierced the blue of the sky. Velvet lawns, surrounding magnificent residences that seemed to fit that particular part of the picture. Busy men and women, but none too busy to be courteous to strangers.

And on our homeward way, as we stopped over at Detroit, we should have felt repaid had we heard nothing else than the sermon, whose central thought keeps repeating itself to us. However, friends took us in charge and we indeed saw the beauties of boulevard, avenue, park, river and islands.

As the train sped on between fields of tasseled corn or roadways paved with gold, I felt as though "truly our lines are fallen in pleasant places," and the joys of this trip will serve as bright memories throughout the year's work, whatever and wherever it may be.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Cinerarias.

With the arrival of cooler nights the little cinerarias are now making much more rapid growth. We have moved our earliest batch into 4-inch pots. These will give excellent stock for blooming early in the new year. The later sowings have just been transplanted and can be grown along cool during the winter, so as to make salable plants during March and April. The only place for cinerarias for the next two months is a coldframe, where they can be afforded lath shade covering on bright days, the plants being exposed to the heavy night dews, which seem much to their liking. Some tobacco stems are renewed once a fortnight among the pots, so that green aphids can get no foothold. Keep a sharp lookout for green caterpillars on the cineraria foliage. A day's neglect in hand-picking may mean that your entire batch of plants will be destroyed.

Hydrangeas.

It is time to lift and pot hydrangea plants which have been growing in the open ground during the summer. Do not be afraid to shake a good portion of the soil away from the roots; so long as you keep the latter intact, you are all right, for with a slight shade for a few days and frequent light sprayings the roots will soon find their way around the sides of the pots. Press the soil firmly in the pots and stand the plants in an open, sunny spot after the first week, so that the sun can warm the pots and make root action active. By keeping the soil moist it is surprising how fast the pots will fill with roots.

Plants you have grown along from spring cuttings should receive their final shift at once. Give them all possible light and sun. They will do better outside than under glass for a few weeks longer. If you want some plants for early forcing, these, being well potted, can gradually have their water supply reduced from this time, to ripen the wood well.

Genistas.

Use the shears on the genistas to keep them shapely. It is true there are some growers who seem to prefer naturally grown plants, but nine-tenths of your customers will prefer a plant with a nice, round, shapely head to one with two or three long shoots. We hope you have not made the mistake of planting out your genistas, for these plants lift poorly. If you want some nice little plants in 3-inch or 4-inch pots for spring sales, put in a batch of cuttings now. Many customers take a liking to these miniature specimens. They are certainly pretty and invariably sell well.

Calceolaria Rugosa.

Plants of Calceolaria rugosa do not commence to make suitable propagating wood until cool weather, usually by the first week in September. If your stock plants were headed back, they will by this time have sent out a crop of nice succulent cuttings, which will root freely in a coldframe or greenhouse with a north aspect. Calceolarias are always impatient of heat, so do not attempt rooting them in bottom heat or a steamy propagating house. For late spring and Memorial day trade, Calceolaria rugosa is becoming increasingly popular.

Bedding Geraniums.

The first week in September is sufficiently early to start the propagation of geraniums in the southern states. The time might well be delayed a week or ten days with advantage. Geraniums root much better in cool than warm weather. The percentage of loss is usually heavy if an outdoor temperature of 90 degrees in the shade arrives after the cuttings are inserted. Cuttings from the open ground are much softer and more liable to damp off than those produced under glass. If you have an abundance of stock to choose from, reject those with thick, soft, fleshy shoots, preferring those with shorter and wirier wood. As to making your cuttings, they will root whether cut under a pair of leaves or not, but our experience has been that the percentage of damping off has been much heavier from those not cut directly below the leaves. You can easily prove this for yourself by trying a batch under each method.

If you can give them the necessary space and want first-class plants for spring sales, put each cutting singly in 2-inch pots of sandy loam and stand on the bench of a house where the cuttings can have the fullest sunlight. Shade at any time is unnecessary and harmful for geranium cuttings. It superinduces a soft, flabby growth and stock grown in this way becomes an easy prey to blight. In making your cuttings, trim off the side scales clean and cut off all leaves larger than a half-dollar in size. Remember that your young stock will make leaf growth rapidly and, unless they are well trimmed off at the start, they will soon become crowded.

If lack of space makes it impossible to give the cuttings individual pots, place them in well drained flats of sharp sand. One 30x12x4 will hold 150 to 200 cuttings. After one thorough soaking, allow the sand or soil to become fairly dry before applying any more water.

There are this season many complaints of plants being badly affected with blight. It is much better not to propagate from such stock. There are a number of reliable geranium specialists who will sell you clean stock at low rates. Get in new stock now and, if you want to keep fully up to date, try one or two of the newer varieties of merit.

Amaryllis.

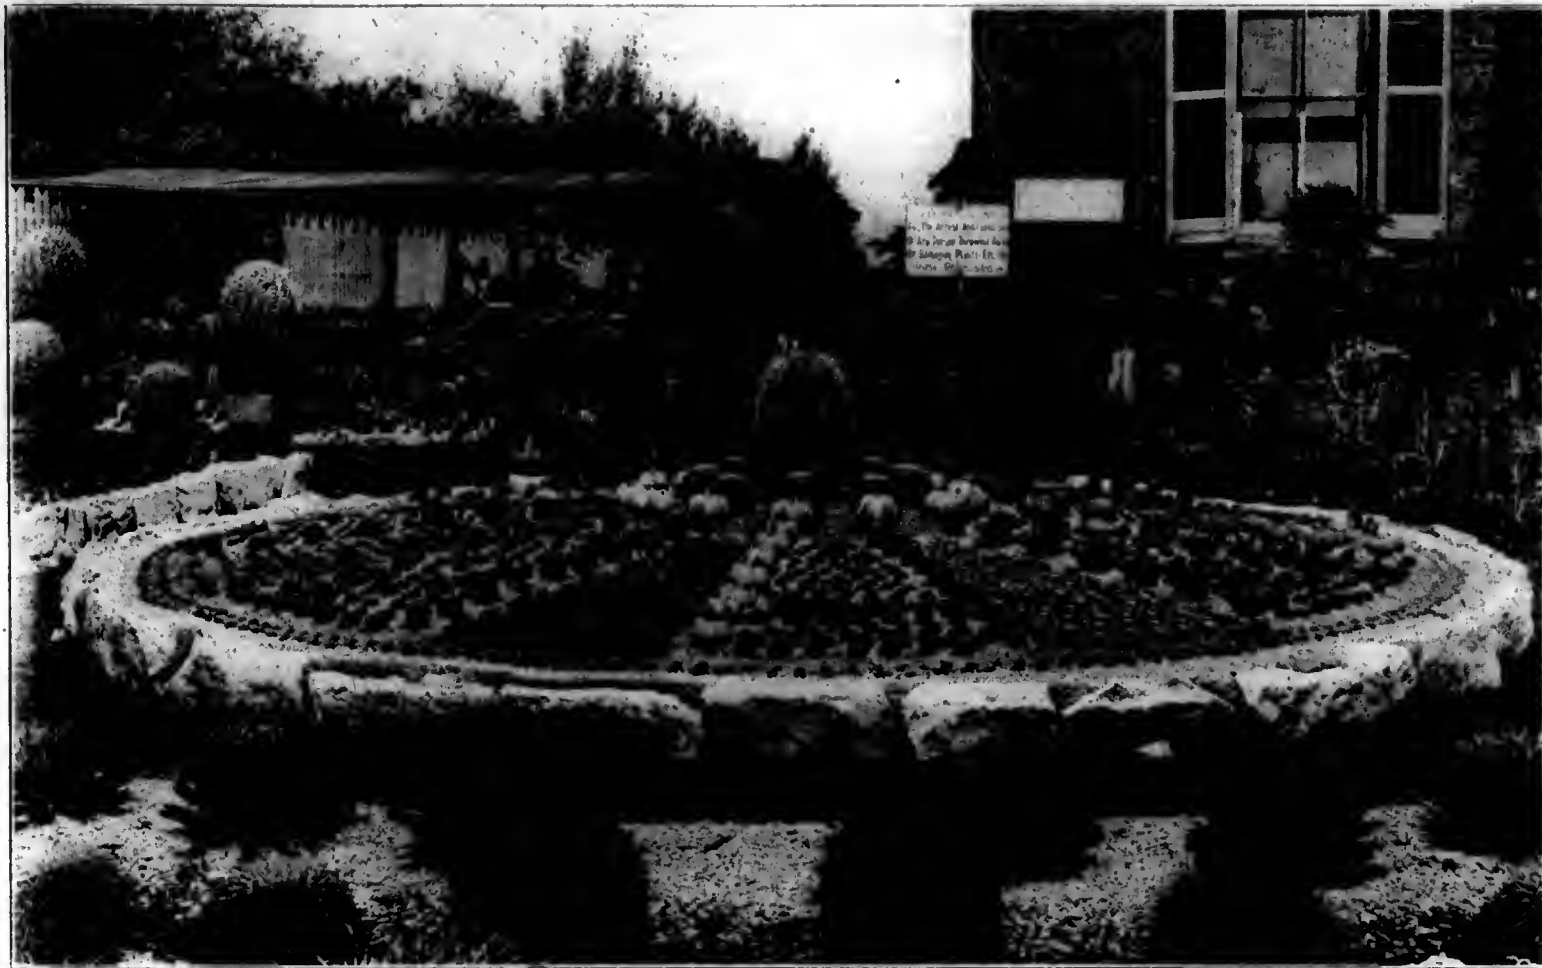

It is time to gradually reduce the water supply on amaryllis, and within a couple of weeks they may be laid under a bench in a greenhouse where they will be tolerably dry. Failing such a location, stand them on a bench in your potting-shed, where they can be out of the way. With seedlings there must be no resting period until the plants bloom. This may take place in eighteen months or it may be three years. Keep them potted and growing along. If a good batch is needed and you can plant them in a piece of bench in a carnation temperature, you will be surprised at the remarkable growth they will make in one season. When benched they should be spaced sufficiently far apart so that they can remain undisturbed until they flower.

Freesias.

It is time to get in another good-sized batch of freesias. It is well to make successional plantings once in two weeks until the beginning of October. The earliest lot will now have made considerable growth. Except for the damage caused by drenching rains, these would be better outdoors for a few weeks. Sash protection should be afforded during heavy cloud-bursts. Keep the surface soil loosened and allow the soil to dry out well before soaking it. An excess of moisture in hot weather will start rotting of the stems.

Lilies.

Pot the lily bulbs as soon as received. It is poor policy to leave them packed tightly in boxes, where they will probably make a network of roots if left a few days. Easter comes eight days earlier in 1909 than in 1908. There is still ample time to pot up bulbs for that great festive occasion, but if you have potted good bulbs now there will be less trouble retarding these for Easter than in forcing late potted ones for the same holiday. The early potted lot of Harrisii are rooting freely, and here and there shoots are appearing. Do not be in too big a hurry about rushing these into the greenhouse. Let the pots become well filled with roots and be sure not to overwater. Too much moisture in the early stages of growth is responsible for much of the so-called disease.

The Madonna lily, L. candidum, wants potting as soon as it is received, as leaf growth is already appearing on some of the bulbs when received. Stand the pots outside in full sun and leave them there until there is quite sharp frost. Of the several types of this useful lily on the market, the broad petaled French is the best.

Ventilation.

Quite cool nights are probable during September. The majority of country florists do not want to start fire heat yet a while, and there is really no need of it, unless roses or plants of a tropical nature are grown. With the latter a warming of the pipes in damp weather and on cool nights will be helpful. It is poor policy to close down the ventilators tight as soon as cool nights arrive. This causes a damp and musty atmosphere, one much more harmful to plant life than if a few inches of top and bottom air were left on. Avoid late syringing overhead now, so that foliage and paths will be dry at nightfall, unless you are using fire heat.

A UNIQUE DISPLAY.

Much emphasis has of late been put upon the desirability of every florist maintaining a first-class display on his home grounds. It has been pointed out that a neat, well-kept place is a model for all the neighborhood, but that neglected surroundings are a positive obstacle to floricultural progress. It has been said that the florist's own place stands in the same position as the cobbler's wife, who must go with ragged shoes while other people's footwear gets mended, but this should never be. The grounds around a greenhouse establishment doing a retail business are the show window of that place—and who of the downtown retailers would think of neglecting the show window? It always is fixed up as well as the skill of the owner will admit.

A. G. Greiner, at St. Louis, believes in making a show on his home grounds, even though only a small part of his trade is local. His specialty is the cactus and he makes a unique display, as may be seen from the accompanying illustration reproduced from a recent photograph. Mr. Greiner's stock of cacti is said to be the largest commercial collection of these plants in the United States, and the planting on his home grounds attracts a great deal of attention from the public.

SPANISH IRIS.

Can Spanish iris bulbs be successfully grown a second time, or would you advise growing them a second time after having failed with them the first time, and how can they be grown successfully?

F. J. K.

The bulbs of Spanish iris are of no value a second season for forcing, but will last for several years outdoors in your state (Virginia). For indoor culture put the bulbs in flats four inches deep as soon as received. A flat 12x30x4 will hold 100 bulbs. After planting place in a frame or cool pit, but do not cover with ashes or soil, as you would tulips or narcissi. Give them a light position all the time to prevent them from becoming drawn. In January you can place in a house where the night temperature runs from 45 to 50 degrees, but on no occasion let it be any warmer, as these bulbs will simply not stand forcing such as you would give the general run of Dutch bulbs. An abundant supply of water, occasional doses of liquid manure and a position well up to the light are necessary for first-class flowers. These may be had from March to June, according to the time they are housed. They can also be planted in benches in a cool house, but flats are to be preferred, as they can be moved around at will.

For outdoor culture, plant in November, just before the ground freezes, and give a covering of leaves or straw when the surface is hard frozen. If you plant in September, when you get the bulbs, they will make considerable growth above ground before winter, although severe cold does not seem to injure such growths materially.

ROOT LOUSE ON ASTERS.

My asters have been a failure. The green root louse killed them. Is there any preventive for another year?

P. S.

Give the plants, if possible, a new piece of land another year, where asters have not previously been grown. Give the ground a liberal dressing of air-slaked lime; plow it and leave rough over winter. In early spring give a good coating of manure to the land and harrow it in. Once the root lice have secured a good start in a bed of growing plants, it is difficult to eradicate them. Scattering tobacco dust around the stems and hoeing it in has proved beneficial. Liquid tobacco extract will kill the pests, but it is a slow job to apply it, besides being quite expensive if your field is a large one.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Root Lice.

I was interested in an article published in the REVIEW of July 30, concerning "Root Lice on Asters." I think L. J. B. might find something of interest to him concerning this subject in Circular No. 86, on "Corn Leaf-aphis and Corn Root-aphis," published by the United States Department of Agriculture. Last year I tried late fall plowing, as suggested in the circular, and have not been bothered by any root lice this season.

C. R. CRANSTON.

THE SHREWSBURY FLOWER SHOW

A Great English Exhibition.

This exhibition, which is conceded to be the largest and most successful flower show in the world, held its thirty-third annual show August 19 and 20, and your humble scribe, being a Shropshire man by birth, made a point of being present and received much profit and pleasure thereby. The second day was very wet, but notwithstanding this, I understand that some 80,000 people paid for admission, the attendance every year running from 110,000 to 120,000 for the two days of the show.

In an attempt to find the cause of the popularity of the show, I had several talks with W. W. Naunton, who has been honorable secretary continuously since 1875. From him I found out that upward of forty judges were engaged, to complete the work quickly this year; that many entries were refused on account of lack of space, and that even then it took ten large tents to hold the horticultural side of the fete, I would say that the groups and principal plant classes were won by J. Cypher, of Cheltenham, who has for many years held an unbroken record in this line. His plants of Ixora Duffii and I. Williamsii Italica profusa and Erica Eweriana were simply marvelous and the groups, in which there was keen competition, were an object lesson to every lover of the beautiful.

Sweet Peas.

Perhaps the feature of the show was the display of sweet peas. It would seem that Shropshire is the center of sweet pea growing, though I have seen sweet peas in all parts of England during the last month that positively beggar description. It is, of course, known to every grower that peas need a cool, deep, moist soil, with lots of water, and these conditions we cannot get in America, so we can never hope to attain the same results. Eckford's exhibit contained some wonderful flowers of Spencer, St. George, Evelyn Hemus, Pink with Blackmore & Langdon a good second. The former had a wonderful variety called Lady Cromer in his exhibit, which was a feature. It was a lovely shade of pink, and individual flowers were nine inches across. As showing how quickly the public jump at a sterling novelty in this line, I was assured that 500 plants of this variety were sold on the first day at two guineas each, or $10. No wonder the trade is anxious to exhibit at Shrewsbury. C. Small, Pink Pearl and W. Sparshott were also splendid varieties.

Dahlias were a grand feature, the cactus section being particularly beautiful. There, again, the cooler climate of England helps the grower and probably we shall never see such flowers in America as were staged at Shrewsbury.

American Carnations.

American carnations were well shown by Messrs. Cutbush, of Highgate, Hugh Low and several others. A chat with Mr. Cutbush reveals that White Perfection is the finest white in England today. Other varieties that do finely are Winsor, Lady Bountiful, Beacon, Robert Craig and, of course, Enchantress. The English variety Britannia was well shown.

Gladioli.

Gladioli were staged in quantity, the finest being set up by Kelway & Son, of Langport. I am not an expert on gladioli, but I thought these spikes were certainly the finest I ever saw. Many of the colors were new to me. Dorothy Kelway is a lovely blush; The Sirdar, dark crimson; Golden Measure and Golden Ray, two fine yellows. Baron Goldstein and Painted Lady were the most prominent. Whether our more brilliant sunshine would not bleach these lovely colors is an open question, but they are worth trying.

Herbaceous Plants.

Herbaceous plants were staged by a number of exhibitors and, needless to say, all in splendid condition. Space forbids a mention of all, but in this section I noticed a grand new oriental poppy, in the collection of Amos Perry, Enfield, called Mrs. Perry. This was a lovely shade of salmon pink, the individual flowers being eight inches across.

Early Flowering Chrysanthemums.

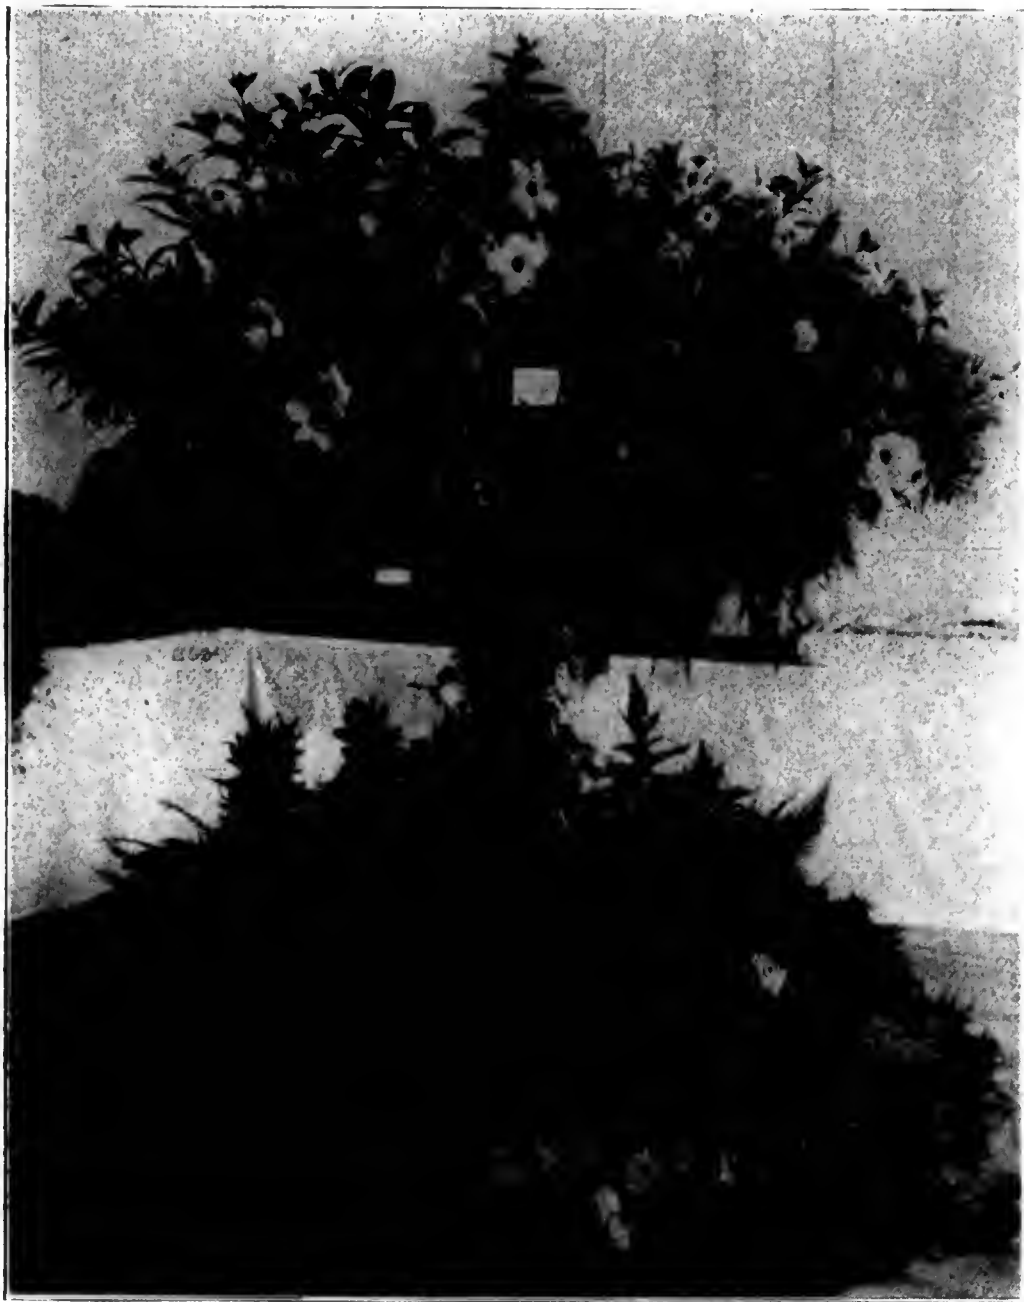

Early flowering chrysanthemums are not encouraged to any great extent by the management, as they think there is no need for them so early in the season, but there were many vases on exhibition, nevertheless. Mrs. Sydenham, Nina Blick, Mattie, Hector, A. Willis, Goacher's Crimson, Estelle, Polly, Stella, Well's Scarlet, Caledonia and The Champion were perhaps the best.

It was too late to see roses at their best, though many were staged. The Dicksons, between them, captured most of the competitive classes. I noticed several fine vases of the new Mrs. Jardine on exhibition, and also Richmond, though the latter was rather single.

The baskets of cut flowers and epergnes, and made-up work of every description, were of marvelous beauty and grace. I presume they represented the best work of the finest floral artists of the country and they were an education in themselves.

Fruits.

The fruit classes, while they were beautifully staged, were disappointing to exhibits. Much of the success of the show is undoubtedly due to the outside attractions that are provided, these taking the form of horse leaping contests, balloon ascensions, trapeze performances, fireworks, and splendid music.

Groups of Plants.

Confining myself, as I must, to the Pearl, John Ingman (the most striking of the lot) and Nancy Perkins.

H. Jones, of Ruabon, staged the finest flowers of the show and captured most of the prizes.

Double Tuberous Begonias.

Double tuberous begonias were a great feature, T. S. Ware gaining first award me as regards quality, when I reflected that this was the representative show of the country. The grapes were not so large in either berry or bunch as I had anticipated. I had anticipated that American grown peaches and nectarines would show more color than English fruits, but I had expected to see finer grapes at such a show as Shrewsbury.

Vegetables.

In the vegetable classes, which were well filled, were some marvelous displays. E. Beckett, who has been known for many years as an expert in this line, stood head and shoulders above his competitors. Such peas and onions and runner beans I had only dreamed of.

In conclusion I would say that some day we may get such a show in America as has been staged in Shrewsbury this week, but I fear the present generation of flower lovers will not see it. Thirty-three years of successful effort have accomplished much and Shrewsbury is to be congratulated.

BULB GROWING IN VIRGINIA.

[A synopsis of a paper by James Guille, of Portsmouth, Va., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, September 1, 1908.]

Perhaps there are few among you who have any idea to what gigantic proportions the work of growing bulbs in Virginia has now extended, or of the effect it is likely to have, in the near future, on the bulb growing industry of the United States, for, if we keep on as we have commenced, it will not be many years before a large proportion of the money now spent in Europe for bulbs will remain in this country.

I shall first try to give you our reasons for starting bulb-growing here, and also why we chose Portsmouth as our starting point.

History of the Industry.

Our firm has for years been doing a large business with America, from the old country, but the great difficulty of transportation and trouble with customs prohibited any great extension in that line, for anyone who has had the handling of bulbs through the customs house knows the great trouble, delay and expense incurred in getting bulbs through. I have known part of my consignments to be delayed one week in the New York customs house for examination, and, as is usual in such cases, the bulbs retained were generally the ones that we wanted most. Then there is often a dispute as to valuation.

I well remember a case which happened to us a year prior to my coming over. Our firm came across a good lot of grandiflorus in France, which the growers were anxious to sell, and for which they accepted a rather low price. We ordered them sent to the United States, to our representative in New York, with invoice, but when these bulbs were examined the customs officers thought that they were undervalued, and not only did they increase the valuation but I believe they fined us as well. As our people are nearly 4,000 miles away, by the time these matters were laid before them it was too late to protest, as I believe all protests must be entered before the expiration of ten days.

Then in transportation, though I believe the companies do all they can (possibly) for us, there is always the danger of heating if the bulbs are not properly packed. Besides, it was practically impossible to handle small orders, as the freight was prohibitive on less than ton lots.

Feeling certain that the United States, with their vast resources, could give us the accommodation we were looking for, our firm decided to try to grow bulbs here. We know that bulb growing has been tried in Petersburg, but we were not exactly satisfied with the results, more especially as it was nearly impossible to lift the bulbs in the summer, owing to the land baking and getting nearly as hard as stone.

Advantages in the South.

On coming a little farther south, we found land nearly the same as that in Holland. For miles around the land does not rise more than ten feet above high water mark. It is also light and sandy, thus allowing us to lift our bulbs at any time during the season.

Owing to the low situation, the bulbs are always resting on a cool bottom, for PROPAGATING SAND.

Can you give me instructions as to the best way of washing and baking sand for propagating use? We will use six or eight wagon-loads of sand for this purpose. We have to make a long haul on same, and I wish to know if it would be safe to use the same sand several seasons by baking it. This would save hauling new sand every year. As I plan to use the sand over several times, I think it would be worth while to wash it in the start or get washed sand. I will thank you for any suggestions or advice in this line.

H. R. M.

While it is better to use fresh sand each year, it would be possible for you to use it several seasons. After your propagating for the season is over, clean out the sand and lay it outdoors on concrete or shutters to prevent dirt getting mixed in it. Let the sun bake it well and keep turning it over to give it a thorough drying out. If much dirt has got mixed in the sand, use a hose with a good water pressure. Screw on a brass rose and, after spreading the sand out thinly, give it a thorough drenching with a little slope to the ground. You will see plenty of dirt wash away. Give it an occasional stir-up to make sure the cleaning is well done. If you do not want to go to the trouble of cleaning the sand out and have steam on your place, sterilize the sand to kill all germs and larvæ. Then stir it over well and drench with the hose, allowing the sun to bake it well afterwards. It will pay to clean out the sand each season, in order to see that the drainage below it is good.

to have drainage in the bottom and where does the surplus water go when watering plants? The ground slopes a little north and the lot runs north and south. Would the boiler have to be in a pit? I intend to have the house heated with hot water.

How are the posts to be set—in the ground and cemented for the outside of the greenhouse, or is it best to have a sill and put studding to nail the boards on for the wall? We have zero weather and sometimes 8 degrees below for a few days, but not often, but I would like to be on the safe side.

In the semi-solid beds do any of the pipes for heating go under the beds or only by the wall and paths? Of course, I mean the return pipes. Would you advise me to have a valve to shut off some of the heat when it is not very cold, or how do you regulate the heat to make the desired temperature?

What is to be done with the soil after it has been used? Can it be put on the ground and made use of outside for a year and then do for the benches again? Is lime injurious to most plants, or can you wash the benches with lime before putting in the soil each season?

Can you tell me of a boiler that could keep an even temperature at night without being up firing, or, in other words, keeping a night fireman?

M. C. J.

This is a sort of omnibus bill and takes in about the whole business, from A to Z. I will answer your questions, not in rotation as they appear in your letter, but as you will meet them in your building operations, etc. I would advise you to build your house as you intended to build it—six feet from ground to eaves and about twelve feet to the ridge—and put about three feet of glass in the walls, just below the eaves. This will give your house fully ten per cent more efficiency if running north and south, and even more if it were to run east and west. I would advise you to build your house twenty feet six inches wide, inside measurement, and arrange the beds as follows: Begin on either side with a walk eighteen inches wide; next a bed, four feet six inches; next a walk, two feet; next a bed, four feet six inches; next a walk, two feet; next a bed, four feet six inches, and an 18-inch walk against the other side. That will give you three beds of the latest approved width and enough walks to get around them, in working, to the best advantage. Two of the walks will be two feet wide and in these you will do the main work, such as wheeling soil, etc. The walks against the sides of the house are for such work as cutting blooms, pulling weeds, disbudding, etc. Eight-foot beds are entirely too wide to work to advantage and are considered a nuisance by up-to-date growers. This arrangement also gives a better circulation of air to all the plants, as well as better light.

The semi-solid beds, such as we build, are from twelve to eighteen inches high. We set posts in the ground four feet apart, and nail the boards which constitute the sides of the beds against the inside of these posts. That is, the posts stand in the walk and are not touched by the cinders or soil in which we plant. Fill in with cinders to within four inches of the top and then fill up level with the sides with your soil for planting.

No pipes are put under these beds. The pipes are hung overhead and against

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.*The Question of Fall Mulching.

For about two months after housing, our attention should be given almost wholly to preparing the plants for the strain of winter forcing. To be sure, there is more or less call for the divine flower during the chrysanthemum season, but the demand is limited and the price low. Besides, there are always those who imagine they can eat the cake and have it, too.

It seems to be the opinion of some that a fall mulch is one of the necessary factors in growing carnations and I will not say but that, under certain circumstances, it might be advisable. However, with present-day methods, it seems a needless outlay of time.

It is not enough that we grow superior blooms, but we owe it to ourselves to produce them at the lowest possible figure and be in position to supply in quantity at the season of high prices. To do this, one cannot cut large quantities during the fall months and expect to be in crop at the holidays. Neither can the plants be highly fed while undergoing the change from outdoor plants to greenhouse ones, and go into winter quarters in condition to make good.

A Plausible Reason for Mulching.

The idea of fall mulching originated, it is said, from the observance of small white rootlets on the soil surface soon after reestablishment of the plants, thus leading to the supposition that the carnation was a natural surface feeder.

Now, I am one of those who never had any sympathy with such theory, believing, as I do, that careless watering, insufficient depth of soil and improper mechanical condition or quality of soil are the causes which lead these rootlets to seek the surface. Given good soil, of a depth to allow establishment of a normal root system, with sufficient water to maintain even moisture through the whole, and you will see little evidence of surface feeding.

It seems to me a false economy to scrimp in depth of soil, for at no late day an extra amount will be needed in the form of mulch, consuming much more time to apply than when filling benches.

The Use of Bone Meal.

Our custom has been at bench-filling time to use only a small portion of the bone meal to be employed, but as soon as the plants are well under way, we top-dress with the remainder and rake it in lightly.

By the way, notwithstanding the statement recently given to the press that bone meal is not needed by the carnation grower, do not under any circumstances attempt to do without it. I have visited growers who declared they did not use it and they grew first-class blooms, too, but there was something that they could not, or at least did not, explain. This bone meal question was tried out some years ago by the chrysanthemum growers, and they still continue its use.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

A BEGINNER IN CARNATIONS.

I am going to build a greenhouse, 20x108 feet, and will use it mostly for carnations. I read in the REVIEW of July 2 about the semi-solid beds, but do not understand them exactly. Do you mean that you level the ground and put in cinders and four inches of good soil to put the carnations in?

How high would the house be to the eaves and how high to the ridge? How many pipes would I need to heat a house like mine? I was thinking of having three benches and two walks, with the benches on the sides four feet wide and the middle bench eight feet wide, in a house six feet to the eaves and twelve feet to the ridge. But, as I understand, the semi-solid beds would be lower and the house could be made lower.

I have been growing flowers to sell for a long time, but have never had a greenhouse. What size of boiler would I need to heat my house and what rise would the flow pipe require in the 108 feet?

In the raised benches is it necessary the walls, and some are laid in the walks a few inches above the ground. You will need at least twelve 2-inch hot water pipes with a low-pressure system, but if you use a pump to accelerate circulation you could cut out at least two of them. With the small amount of glass that you will have, however, I would prefer having a boiler pit and depend on gravity for circulation. Pumps, etc., are all right on larger systems and where a night man is employed, but not on a small system like yours. Raise up from the boilers to the highest point and drop all the way around and back to the boiler. A great deal of drop is not required; two per cent is plenty and less will do. Of greater importance is that the drop be regular, with no dips in the pipe which will form pockets and retard circulation. Put valves on every line of pipe, so that you can cut off any or all of them as may be found necessary to regulate the temperature.

There are boilers made with magazine-feed arrangements. Some are advertised in the REVIEW. I have had no personal experience with any of them, but there is no reason why they should not work successfully. You would do well to install a thermostat system as well. As to the size of boiler you will need, the makers can inform you more intelligently than I could.

For the posts of your greenhouse get red cedar if you can, and nail your side wall boards to them. No sill is necessary at all. Set the posts in the natural soil and tamp it firmly, so they will not allow the walls to spread.

Any excess of water applied to the beds in watering will go down into the cinders. That is what they are there for partly—to afford sufficient drainage. There should not be much of this, however, because when water passes through the soil and runs away it carries plant food with it. Even a heavy watering should be only enough to wet the soil through and no more.

The soil should be changed every season, and should not be re-used for several years at least, and if possible, never. Lime is usually beneficial to plant growth and will seldom do any harm if used intelligently. Under certain conditions it can be made to do harm, and it should not be applied indiscriminately. A hot lime wash applied to the benches before filling them is a good thing.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Since last report the market has experienced a condition hardly paralleled in recent years. Summer dullness is always looked for, and just as regularly experienced, but it is rarely that a condition such as has existed in the last week has been possible. There has been no market price to anything. Values have been lost sight of, and the bulk of business done has been forced. Under these conditions both grower and buyers have suffered. With the existing demand, roses have been more than plentiful. The stock coming in is, of course, anything but prime, but for ordinary needs at this season there is little room for complaint. Carnations do not seem to amount to anything. Few of good quality are offered, and the general arrivals command only small prices. Asters sell well when they are good, but poor stock is overloading the market. Dahlias have made their appearance and find a ready sale. There is a poor grade of gladioli this season, with little demand. Tuberoses have begun to arrive and sell fairly well.

Various Notes.

ously ill with what is thought to be sciatic rheumatism, which has caused him a great deal of suffering.

James Glass, one of Baltimore's prominent florists, has returned from a trip to Ireland.

Chas. Seybold, superintendent of Carroll park, won the diamond medal for highest individual score at bowling at the convention.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club is talking of inviting the S. A. F. to meet in Baltimore in 1910.

The members of Ebenezer Church, Chase, Md., under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, will hold their second annual harvest home festival and dahlia show in R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co.'s warehouse at Cowenton, September 22 to 26, 1908.

Q.

THE CORNER LOCK.

Otto G. Koenig, of St. Louis, says that the disposal of the hotbed frames after they were through with them in spring always was a problem until F. L. Dubrava came to their rescue with the corner lock device exhibited by Mr. Koenig at the S. A. F. convention at Niagara Falls. Before they used this invention the hotbed frames were made with posts set in the ground, the sides being knocked off and stacked up when not in use, but with this corner lock device no posts are necessary. The accompanying illustration shows a frame with three corners fast in the locks, the lock for the fourth corner being set beside the frame. This lock slips onto the corner without effort and may be screwed up with the fingers tight enough to do the work. When the season for the use of frames has ended it is the work of but a moment to unscrew the locks, when the frame falls apart and may be stacked away and the ground left entirely clear.

The judges at Niagara Falls considered the device worthy of high commendation and a patent has been applied for.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The last week in August, according to the wholesale and retail critics, will hold the record for dullness of all the years since the horticultural historians began their weekly statements of facts concerning the ups and downs of the cut flower industry. With the clear and cool weather of Saturday, following days of rain and chill, came the first signs of the fall revival and that not in any increase in prices, but in a larger demand for stock and a lesser surplus than usual when the day's requirements had been satisfied. But Monday was hot and dull again and improvement can hardly be hoped for before the frosts have banished the outdoor supplies, and the turmoil and uncertainty of the election are over. Nevertheless, the outlook is optimistic. The general confidence of grower and wholesaler is unabated and a great season is evidently anticipated by all.

Roses of every kind are now abundant. Thousands of Richmonds last week could not be cleared at any reasonable figure, and one distributor declared there was no demand for red roses whatever, and he could not give them away. Quality is rapidly improving, but prices do not keep pace and large quantities can be bought at low rates. At times, the best selected Brides and Maids would bring no more than $2 per hundred.

The outdoor stock is as abundant as ever, hydrangeas, asters and gladioli especially. Some grand asters are arriving from Rochester and other western cities. No chrysanthemums of similar size can compare with them. These command good prices, some as high as $3 per hundred. From Dutchess county comes the complaint of drought and smaller aster shipments than usual.

One of the violet growers who was in the city Saturday from Rhinebeck, says the violet stock is generally good this season. The number of new greenhouses is few, and the prospect is encouraging for better prices during the approaching season.

Never were there so many gladioli as this year. The quantity arriving daily shows no diminution and prices do not vary. Every window in the retail sections is full of them, and tritomas, gold-erod and rudbeckia are much in evidence, and there are lilies to spare.

Carnations are improving fast. Another week or two will find them asserting their claims for recognition.

Various Notes.

The auction sale of the W. H. Donohoe assets took place at 10:30 Monday. Quite a number of interested wholesalers and retailers attended. The purchaser was a Mr. Ridge, on a nominal bid, and the business will be continued, it is said, under Mr. Donohoe's supervision. He says: "All creditors will get every dollar coming to them," which is encouraging. One wholesaler's claim is said to amount to $1,900.

H. Gessner, formerly with Scallen, has opened a store on Broadway, in the Imperial hotel, corner of Thirty-second street, a fine location.

W. S. Lee, formerly buyer for Sherry, of Fifth avenue, has opened a retail flower shop in the Hippodrome building on Sixth avenue.

Edward McKay Whiting, president of the Florists' Board of Trade, was recently married to Miss Louise Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dickinson. Mr. Dickinson is the vice-president of the Albert Dickinson Co., of Chicago.

George Baker, bookkeeper for Ford Bros., has returned from a two weeks' holiday at Stockholm, N. Y.

Patrick McGovern, superintendent of Greenwood cemetery, brought back with him two genuine blackthorn sticks from his Irish birthplace, which he secured for Messrs. Traendly and Schenck. President Traendly is still enjoying a rest with his family at Margarettsville, N. Y., in the Catskills.

Will Ford, of Ford Bros., has been for six weeks with his family on the Brandywine in Pennsylvania, and is now back, thoroughly braced for the busy season.

John Young is now receiving some fine Beauties from his Bedford greenhouse, and Mrs. Ward, Alma Ward and Enchantress carnations from the Cottage Gardens, Queens.

Horace E. Froment returned Monday from his three weeks' outing in the Adirondacks.

Jonathan Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, has found rest and health for three weeks at Glen Cove, L. I.

Some idea of the state of the flower business in Brooklyn may be imagined, when an advertisement in the leading Sunday paper announces a sale of roses at a department store by one of the prominent florists there, at only 50 cents per hundred. This is education with a vengeance.

At the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday, September 14, Benjamin Hammond, secretary of the National Rose Society, will address the members, his subject being "Experiences in the School Garden Movement." With convention echoes and the reunion of the club after its summer vacation, coupled with Chairman Rickards' delicacies, this promises to be an interesting session—and a large attendance is suggested.

The Averno Floral Carnival closed Saturday, August 29, with a parade of over fifty floats and many beautifully decorated autos, Warendorff carrying off the honors.

Out at Oyster Bay, where the President summers, Dennis Holohan has a pretty retail store which he calls the Rosery. His nursery, which he purchased some five years ago, has risen in value so that one building lot is now worth the cost of the entire five acres at that time. Holohan's specialty is pot-grown strawberries.

Sage Mackay, Sunday, Alex. McConnell had many handsome floral designs. The best included a casket cross of white roses and several wreaths of orchids.

Warren F. Feller, one of the orchid growers of Rhinebeck, who ships to J. K. Allen, was in the city Saturday.

Wm. Elliott & Sons contemplate holding their first auction sale September 22. They say the outlook is encouraging up to the present time, as they have booked some heavy consignments for this fall's sales.

Growers' Association will celebrate with a clam bake at Whitestone, L. I., September 15, which Chairman A. L. Miller declares will be modern and surprising.

This week the Monmouth County Fair, at Long Branch, N. J., is on, with its big agricultural exhibits, and many New York florists will attend.

John De Buck, the orchid collector of College Point, who has been back from Colombia for several weeks, will return to South America in December.

Anton Schultheis has been appointed judge at the floral exhibit of the Schwalbischer Saengerbund, at Glendale, L. I., September 6 to 13.

The contract for the five new houses, to be built by Anton Schultheis, at College Point, has been awarded to Hitchings & Co. These will add 10,000 square feet to his capacity. The same firm built most of the greenhouses in the range, over twenty years ago. The old pipe, after twenty-three years' use, Mr. Schultheis says, is still good for many more. Renovating and rebuilding has been in progress here the whole summer. A new storage hall, 30x75, is being erected. About everything the florist needs is grown here. E. C. Horan handles the valley, gardenia and orchid output. Some grand stock of orange trees are especially worthy of notice. A catalogue will be issued September 20. Mr. Schultheis' family is still at Rockaway, and his boys are motor-boating up the Hudson.

G. Golsner's Sons, College Point, have a plant of 25,000 square feet and twenty-one city lots devoted to smilax, asparagus, chrysanthemums and Enchantress and Boston Market carnations. In their season they have fine moss roses and Brunners. All their stock reaches the Cut Flower Exchange daily. One of the sons enjoyed the convention so much, he says, he will never miss another.

A. L. Don, of Weeber & Don, seems hopeful as to the coming season. The aggregate of business for the year has been fully up to other years, and they have been at it for a quarter of a century.

The ribbon men who exhibited at the Falls were all pleased with the volume of business.

M. A. Bowe has been holidaying in Jersey. His handsome store on Broadway has been made spick and span for the busy days ahead, and several experts have been added to his force.

George M. Geraghty, of Dunlop's, Toronto, has been enjoying his vacation in New York. He has only good things to say of the Queen City of the Dominion.

Samuel Eintracht, with Wertheimer Bros., the ribbon men, is away on his fall trip, and says the chiffon novelties sell on sight.

The bowling club will meet at Thum's alleys Wednesday evening, September 30, when arrangements will be completed for the coming season. There will be no more five-pin failures in the future.

MR. RONEY RESIGNS.

Starts Business for Himself.

C. H. Roney, who for ten years has been superintendent of the big plant of the Lakeview Rose Gardens at Jamestown, N. Y., has resigned for the purpose of going into business for himself at Kane, Pa. He will at once open a retail store at 109 West Fraley street and will later build a range of glass.

Mr. Roney has been in the trade since he was a boy. He is a native of England, having been born in the village of Bigrigg, near Whitehaven, April 2, 1865. At the age of 14 years he began his career as a florist, being an apprentice for three years on the estate of David Ainsworth, M. P., under the tutelage of William Fox, gardener. After going to the estate of Lord Lonsdale, Lowther Castle, Whitehaven, and remaining for some time, he went to James Dickson & Sons, Newton Nurseries, Chester, England, and worked through all the departments of their business, both inside and outside the greenhouses.

Coming to the United States in 1885. Mr. Roney's first position was with Alburger Bros., of Philadelphia. He was also with Robert Craig & Son for some time. From Philadelphia he went to Wilkesbarre, Pa., and was manager of the Wilkesbarre Floral Co. He stayed with this firm until real estate became too valuable for greenhouse purposes in that part of town, and the place was torn down. After four years spent with Benjamin Dorrance, of Dorrance, Pa., he accepted the office of head gardener to James Boyd, of Harrisburg, Pa., and for five years had charge of one of the finest and best equipped private greenhouses in southeastern Pennsylvania. While in this position, Mr. Roney did considerable work in landscaping, laying out new grounds, drives, golf links and artificial lakes.

In 1898 Mr. Roney went to Jamestown, N. Y., as manager of the Lakeview Rose Gardens, where he has continued until the present time. He developed the business of this firm until the houses now cover nearly ten acres, solidly built in greenhouse glass. He developed a trade that compasses a radius of 500 miles from Jamestown, and has established a reputation which indicates a first-class success in a business for his own account.

IOWA FLORISTS' CONVENTION.

Charles N. Page, treasurer and manager of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, was elected president of the Society of Iowa Florists at the sixth annual meeting of the society, held in the offices of the Iowa State Horticultural Society in the state capitol building at Des Moines August 26. James S. Wilson, of Des Moines, was elected vice-president; Wesley Greene, of Davenport, was reelected secretary, and Peter Lambert, of Des Moines, was reelected treasurer. The following were elected directors: W. M. Bomberger, of Harlan; P. L. Larson, of Ft. Dodge; J. T. Temple, of Davenport, and G. A. Heyne, of Dubuque.

The society voted to hold its next annual meeting in Des Moines during the state fair next fall, and decided to hold a special meeting the second week of next December.

The address of President J. A. Kramer, of Cedar Rapids, congratulated the society on its work in past years and pointed out ways for future usefulness. The reports of Secretary Greene and Treasurer Lambert showed a satisfactory state of affairs as to membership and finances. Papers on the announced program were as follows, but a number were informal talks, and brief:

- "Sterilization of Greenhouse Soil," A. T. Erwin, Ames.
- "Propagation of Geraniums from Outdoor Wood," William Trillow, Des Moines.
- "Propagation of Shrubbery," Chas. B. Simon, Des Moines.
- "The Planting of Lawn Vases and Window and Poreh Boxes," G. A. Heyne, Dubuque.
- "Floral Arrangements," Theodore Ewoldt, Davenport.
- "Gladfoli," Henry Field, Shenandoah.
- "Carnations," J. F. Pollard, Eldora.
- "Iris," J. T. Temple, Davenport.
- "Cannas," William Hester, Des Moines.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. George L. Miller.

Mrs. Emelia Miller, wife of George L. Miller, of Newark, O., died August 24, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Koehl, 398 South Sixth street, from tuberculosis. She was 32 years of age, and besides her husband, left a son, James. She was born and reared in Columbus, O., but had lived for ten years in Newark.

Patrick H. Meehan.

Patrick H. Meehan, who died in Philadelphia August 21, and whose funeral occurred August 25, has been well known in floral circles in that city for many years. He first came into prominence as the grower for Myers & Samtman at Wyndmoor. Under his fostering care the firm's Beauties and tea roses attracted favorable commendation from the most critical buyers. Wyndmoor, the coming debutante of Myers & Samtman, was a seedling of Mr. Meehan's, raised some ten years ago. Mr. Meehan resigned this position to accept charge of the greenhouses of Dingee & Conard Co. at West Grove, Pa. Mr. Meehan had charge later of large establishments in Washington, in Richmond and in Nashville. Two years ago he returned to Philadelphia and took the position of foreman for Charles E. Meehan, in Germantown. This position he filled until his death. Mr. Meehan was 50 years of age. He was a true florist and loved his business dearly. He will be mourned by many friends.

Mrs. La Fever.

Mrs. Mary LaFever, who for some years had been in the florists' business at Eaton Rapids, Mich., died August 31. The business will be continued by LaFever & Minnie, in connection with their furniture store.

THE PITTSBURG QUARTETTE.

On this page appears the portrait of W. Q. Potter, who completes the quartette of young men who have this week opened for business under the name of the McCallum Co., at Pittsburg. The president, secretary and treasurer's portraits appeared in the last issue. Mr. Potter will have charge of the supply department in the new business.

GROWING FOR MARKET.

In going about, I meet most of the largest market growers of plants, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser (England), and the question that most of them put is: "What is there in the way of new things that are likely to be worth taking up?" I must say, go back to the old things, and do them well. We get new things which are wanted for one or two seasons, and many growers neglect old favorites for them. The most striking instance I have noted this season has been in regard to the zonal pelargonium, Paul Crampel. It is one which will always sell as a bedding variety, and will hold its own with Henry Jacoby, Vesuvius and others; but it will not pay to overstock it. New growers go in for new things, and having no previous connection with buyers, have to sell cheaply. I remember that when I first grew carnations, and grew them well, it was difficult to find buyers. And only recently a grower gave me an account of his first experience with rambling roses. He had a large stock of good plants, and he could not sell them, except a few buyers took samples. Later, when he had a much smaller stock, he had more orders than he could execute. It was the same with carnations, and I could give other instances. The grower who succeeds is he who starts a thing, keeps to it, and does it well.

I know that there are many who think that if they sell the best, what are left will do for stock, but in most instances this is not the case. Stock should be selected first, and what is not fit for sale should be thrown away. From my own experience I must say that what is not good enough to sell is rarely worth keeping over for stock.

In the market this season I have found that all well grown old or popular plants have cleared out better than novelties, but I do not mean to imply that new things should not be taken up. The thing is to grow them well, and if they prove a failure one year, if it is a good thing keep on until a trade is made for it. I could name several of the most popular plants of the present time, which would never have been recognized if it had not been for growers who, after losing over a first or second venture, have kept on with them.

This season I have seen few novelties which would be likely to be of any value to the ordinary market grower. In the herbaceous pyrethrums we have already so many good varieties that it is dangerous to recommend new sorts, but the Langport Crimson, which gained an award of merit at the last R. H. S. meeting, was certainly a promising variety and should be worth a trial.

Another plant which may prove of value is Deutzia Wilsoni, but I may say that I have been much disappointed with most of the hybrid deutzias from a market point of view. The old Deutzia gracilis, when grown as we used to do it thirty years ago, wants a lot of beating.

The new stock named the Magenta Strain is a good thing, but I should call it a good crimson and it should be good for market, but these strong growing sorts take more trouble in growing, and in the long run the larger quantities of the easier grown sorts may be most profitable.

REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and is earnestly requested that all adver-

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly,
New York; vice-president, George W. McClure,
Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan
Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine,
Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett,
Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19
to 22, 1909.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman; J. H. Burdett, secretary, 1411 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

FRED BURKI, of Pittsburg, has been selected as one of the Carnation Society's judges for the national flower show, in place of W. N. Rudd, who is to manage the show, but who is one of the society's regularly elected board of awards.

THE paper that carries the most advertising is the one the buyers subscribe for and use. This is particularly true in a trade like our own, where so large a volume of business is done on mail or telegraph orders—the buyer naturally consults the publication that affords him the widest choice of offers.

THERE is an exceptionally good sale for field-grown carnation plants this season. Don't let your surplus go to waste, if such plants as you would care to bench in your own greenhouses. Tell the trade what you have to offer through a classified advertisement in the REVIEW; you will get cash with the order.

A CORRESPONDENT at Milford, Del., says that "when the plants of the new Chipman's seedling strawberry are offered for sale on the open market it will pay the plantmen to get a stock. It is a perfect, strong-growing berry, will succeed where others fail, gives an enormous crop and stands shipping well.
One grower got over $500 per acre here, and don't you think that pays about as well as some of the asters that glut
the market?"

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Error in Secretary's Report.

It appears that the statement in the secretary's report at Niagara Falls, that Albert Dirwanger was the only member of the society in Maine, is an error, and that William Miller, of Bar Harbor, is also a member, and through a printer's error his name in the printed annual report was included among the members from Kentucky. W. N. RUDD, Sec'y.

August 26, 1908.

WHEN taking photographs with a view to publication in the REVIEW, don't forget that the background is about the most important feature. Have it plain.

A WRITER in the Horticultural Trade Journal (English) says that "Adolph Jaenicke, a German grower who has been with J. Lewis Childs, of New York, for many years, has succeeded in improving Gerbera Jamesoni out of recognition.
We have seen many lovely hybrids in this country, but Jaenicke has gone for size only. His new G. Jamesoni gigantea gives flowers four and one-half to five inches in diameter on stems three feet high. The color is scarlet, and from what I know of Jaenicke his latest novelty should prove a real money maker for home growers."

NIBBLERS.

Several months ago I saw an advertisement in the REVIEW of a firm dealing in watering cans, with an engraving showing the different kinds and shapes of roses and spouts used in their manufacture. Will you kindly give me the name and address of the firm referred to?

If these "nibblers" at advertising would read what the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina—you would not be bothered with inquiries like the present and they would get a good many orders they now miss.

INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION.

When the Winter-flowering Carnation Society held its exhibition in London, England, April 1, the principal features were the American varieties and international coöperation between the special societies devoted to the flower was the subject of considerable discussion at the annual dinner which followed the English society's meeting. The Englishmen, however, were of the opinion that, as the American society is so much the older, the initial steps should come from the western side of the Atlantic.

At the special meeting of the American Carnation Society, held at Niagara Falls, August 20, the subject of international coöperation came up, and it was the consensus of opinion that such relationship should be brought about. The secretary's minutes show that it was "suggested" that the society offer a silver cup of the value of $25, to be awarded at the next exhibition of the British society. This is a step in the right direction, if only a short one, for it apparently leaves the matter up to the board of directors of the A. C. S., who it is to be hoped will consider the subject of sufficient importance to require their prompt action.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—W. P. Patterson, proprietor of the Rosemont Gardens, has secured a lease of the store now known as the Oak Hall saloon, and after January 1 of next year will run it as a flower store, under the name of The Rosary. Adjoining the store he will build a greenhouse, 30x40 feet.

FRANKLIN, MASS.—The Continental Nurseries, of which M. J. Van Leeuwen is proprietor, has had some large contracts in Attleboro, Southbridge and other places, including the designs and shrubbery in the Congregational church park in Milford. The grounds at the nurseries themselves are so artistic as to attract many visitors.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

August went out with several of the hottest days of the month. Indeed, it is thirty-five years since the temperature has been as high on August 31 as it was Monday, 92 degrees. The result has not been in favor of the flower market. The heat caused all roses to be soft and a large part of the cut at the beginning of the present week was too open to suffice for shipping trade. A large increase in the aster crop also was at the expense of quality, and this week opened with large supplies of inferior stock and so little good stock that a fair shipping demand was not easily satisfied. Good asters have sold at excellent prices.

There are increased receipts of Beauties and the quality is excellent for the season. The buyers appreciate that they are getting good value for their money and there is a good demand for Beauties, one house having an order for 500, August 31. Killarney continues in good supply and there are increased receipts of other sorts. Quality was steadily improving until the hot days struck the stock and it only requires a return to cool weather to again make the cut satisfactory to all concerned.

This has been an exceptional year for asters, and the present is the nearest approach to the annual glut. There are now far too many poor asters, but not enough really good ones, so that prices range all the way from $6 per hundred down to where the waste-barrel comes into play. The receipts of carnations are increasing, but are not yet large enough to affect the sale for good asters.

Large quantities of gladioli are received for which no return can be made. The sale for gladioli is limited to a few dozens a day to the stores. The street-corner stands do not handle glads in quantity, as they do most other flowers when they are cheap enough. The result is that whenever the flowers are received in any considerable quantity they accumulate until they no longer are presentable, and are dumped. Good money is to be made through growing special fancy glads, but the common stuff is not worth shipping here.

Yellow mums are to be had on advance orders. They bring up to $4 per dozen.

There is a fair sale for lilies and valley. A few dahlias are arriving, but are slow sale. There is not much increase in the call for greens, but there is inquiry for asparagus and smilax for the autumn openings.

Labor Day, Monday, September 7, there will be but one general delivery of mail and those sending orders for shipment that day must wire or use special delivery, which will be made up to six o'clock.

Business Changes.

September 1 brought two changes in the wholesale market, Joseph Foerster having sold his commission business at 60 Wabash avenue to D. E. Freres, who has been with J. J. Kruchten. Mr. Freres will have with him his brother, Mike, recently a mail-carrier, but formerly manager of the store for Mike Winandy, when that grower was in the flower business. D. E. Freres recently married a daughter of John Muno and it is understood that the several members of the Muno family who are growing flowers will ship to him.

At the same time came the announcement that John J. Kruchten had taken in two partners and will henceforth do business as Kruchten & Co. The new partners are John Pool and Alfred Lorenzen, Mr. Pool being a brother-in-law of Mr. Kruchten. Neither gentleman is a florist, but each affirms his intention of becoming one in the shortest possible space of time.

The August Business.

The general report is that August business was fully as good as last year, or even a little better. August was better than July, and it is apparent that the regular increase in summer business is more than counterbalancing any falling off due to slack conditions in other lines. The bank clearings for the month show general business in Chicago to be a little more than eight per cent below August of last year. Our trade is therefore to be congratulated. Several houses report an excellent increase, both as compared with last year and compared with July. Those who catered to the summer demand with supplies of good stock were repaid for their forethought.

Weather in August.

August was a hot month, even though there was a week of fine, cool weather, for the mean temperature was 73 degrees, 2 degrees above normal. The rainfall was 6.35 inches, more than twice the normal, but it practically all fell on three days, August 11, 12 and 15, there being only one other day when any rain fell worth having for stock in the field. There were seventeen clear days, eleven partly cloudy and only three cloudy.

Wheaton Country Fair.

The Wheaton Country fair last week was a fine success. Big crowds were there, and E. T. Wanzer's department of floriculture was a center of interest. The cut-flower exhibits were by Poehlmann Bros. Co., Bassett & Washburn and Mr. Wanzer. The premiums awarded for plants and cut flowers were published on page 18 of last week's REVIEW. Designs were judged August 27. On bouquet the premium was divided between Mr. Wanzer and A. T. Peterson, but Mr. Peterson was first for spray of roses and of carnations, and for bride's bouquet. Mr. Wanzer was first for set piece. Many of the trade attended.

Mr. Wanzer is highly pleased with the success of the first efforts made to exploit the floricultural department of the fair and will push it still farther to the front next year. He says Bassett & Washburn's exhibit of the vases of lilies in three varieties, that won a blue ribbon, was worthy of special mention.

Judge Emil Buettner says the cut flower display was an excellent one for August.

Railroad Gardeners.

The American Association of Railroad Gardeners, of which George B. Moulder, of the Illinois Central, Chicago, is secretary, will hold its annual meeting at Niagara Falls, September 9. The central and western gardeners have planned to centralize in Chicago and go special on the morning of September 7, via Michigan Central, and will make numerous stops on that day and the next to inspect the station grounds, greenhouses, etc., of the M. C. R. R. They will return in like manner via the Lake Shore route. Mr. Moulder says he expects a full dele-

Various Notes.

The next regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held at Union restaurant, 111 East Randolph street, Thursday, September 3, at 8 p. m. This being the first meeting after the summer vacation, there will be much business of importance. Preparations for the national flower show, to be held here in November, are to be made. Refreshments will be served, as usual.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is beginning to cut quantities of the Cardinal rose. They are figuring on doing big business with this variety this season.

E. C. Amling says that he does not call the market glutted with anything but gladioli. While there are quantities of asters and open roses which cannot be cleaned up, all the good stuff sells out promptly each day.

At Peter Reinberg's it is stated that the August business was some twenty per cent ahead of August of last year, certainly a gratifying increase, although it would mean more if it could be said of a winter month's business.

George C. Hartung and wife are at Paw Paw lake, Mich.

C. L. Washburn is the active spirit in the committee on trees and parkways of the Village League of Hinsdale. It is their purpose to show the citizens of that suburb how good landscape effects are obtained, and Friday evening, September 4, the committee will have Jens Jensen, of the West park, and Professor Roth, of Ann Arbor, for stereopticon lectures at the Hinsdale Club. Bassett & Washburn are now cutting large crops of roses, but have not yet cut a carnation.

Vaughan & Sperry are receiving large quantities of asters, some of them specially good, from both local and Michigan growers. And Fred Sperry spent a few days of the last week in Michigan.

Herman Shan, of Morgan Park, is now selling his stock at the Flower Growers' market, his daughter being his representative.

During the scarcity of asters at the middle of August Kennicott Bros. Co. wrote one of its former consignors, and the consignor, not having anything to ship, passed the letter to a friend. Word finally reached Lowell, Mass., that asters were good property in Chicago, and a shipment from there reached Kennicott's August 31. The grower said to wire him if more were wanted, but he got no wire, for the world do move in Chicago and asters had become a glut.

Fred Hunt has rented the establishment of Fred Ahrensfieldt, at Park Ridge, Ill.

George Harrer is again actively engaged in the flower business, for he is operating his greenhouses vacated by Joseph P. Brooks, when the latter built his own plant.

W. C. Johnson is a new traveler who went on the road this week for E. H. Hunt. Clifford Pruner also started out September 1, the day W. E. Lynch and family returned from their trip to the family home in Massachusetts. Miss Harper also is at home from her vacation.

The A. L. Randall Co. says the August business was not only much better than the July business, but that it was better than any August yet, and the summer as a whole has been much better than any previous summer.

The E. F. Winterson Co. received its first shipment of Chinese sacred lilies August 31.

J. F. Klimmer, at Oak Park, is cutting moderate quantities of the Golden Glow chrysanthemum, which he sends to Randall's.

George Asmus says that the Schiller business will move into its new place on West Madison street about September 15, although the new plant will not be completely finished at that date.

The Poehlmann families, the Wintersons, and the Asmus family having returned last week, all the conventionites are present or accounted for, except C. W. McKellar and wife. When last heard from they were at Mount Clemens, Zech & Mann are putting a balcony across the front of their store, to make additional space for the office and shipping department.

H. Will, of R. Will & Son, Minneapolis, while in town last week bought 6,500 field-grown carnation plants of Wietor Bros. It is worth while noting that the Wietor establishment has thirty-five cars of the Castner, Curran & Bullitt Pocahontas coal already in its sheds, and five cars more were on the way the first of the week. They burn altogether about 5,000 tons per year of this coal.

Canger & Gormley use funeral designs for window pieces with good effect. One day this week the center of the window was occupied by a standing wreath of ivy, valley being inserted among the ivy leaves along the upper third of the wreath. A bow of chiffon was tied at the top, with narrow chiffon leading out among the sprays of valley. The base of the wreath was of asters and lilies.

The north end growers have had reason to complain of rapidly advancing taxes and to them it will be good news that the board of review has decided to make a reduction of fifteen per cent in all assessments in the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth wards, where there are so many big greenhouse establishments.

J. P. Risch is on deck again after his vacation. Percy Jones says the Flower Growers' market is full—no more space to rent.

Among the week's visitors were J. Brumenschenkel, of Mansfield, O.; W. W. Coles, returning to Kokomo from his vacation; H. Will, Minneapolis; W. E. Hand, of the Argos Floral & Plant Co., Argos, Ind.; Mr. Powell, who is interested with Dora Brown, at Goshen, Ind.

OWATONNA, MINN.—The Clinton Falls Nursery Co. has built a new house, 180 feet long, for violets, and will build two rose houses this fall. They will be ready to cut October Frost chrysanthemums, with stems five to six feet long, in quantity by September 10.

The Market.

There has been a slow market the last week. Cold, unseasonable weather for August did not improve business. Asters are still the leading flower and are arriving in immense quantities. Prices vary from 25 cents to $1.50 per hundred, few reaching the highest figure. Gladioli are also abundant and hard to clear at $3 to $4 per hundred. Carnations are more plentiful, but short-stemmed as yet, comparing unfavorably with good asters. There is a veritable deluge of roses, mostly of inferior quality, which sell low. Easter lilies remain about the same, 8 cents per flower being the average price. Quite a few sweet peas are again coming Auctions of Market Stalls.

The annual auction sale of stalls of the Boston Coöperative Flower Growers' Association took place at Park Street market August 29. J. F. Carroll, as usual, officiated as auctioneer and there was a large attendance of growers, bidding being unusually spirited.

First choice fell to Waban Conservatories for $110; John J. Fee gave $85; Budlong & Son, $80; Peirce Bros., $80; William Nicholson, Mann Bros. and Andrew Christensen, $75 each; Peirce Bros., a second stand at $72.50; E. Sutermeister, $72.50; S. J. Goddard, Thomas Pegler and Montrose Greenhouses, $67.50 each; W. C. Ward, $65, and W. H. Elliott, Edgar & Co., W. C. Stichel, J. F. Calder, F. J. Dolansky and several others from $62.50 to $65 each. A total of ninety-five stalls were sold for a gross premium of about $4,500, making it the most satisfactory auction the market has yet held. The premiums are in addition to the regular rentals, which are $25 per stall.

The members of the Boston Coöperative Flower Market held their annual auction sale of stalls August 29 at Music Hall market. There was, as usual, a large and animated attendance of buyers.

Bidding was brisk and about 100 stalls were disposed of, the sale being considered an eminently satisfactory one by the management.

Various Notes.

Peirce Bros. handled some nice Golden Glow chrysanthemums last week. S. J. Goddard had the distinction of bringing in the first mums of the season, the variety also being Golden Glow.

Minimum temperatures of 38 to 40 degrees were recorded in and around Boston August 27, but we have heard of no damage being done by the cold as yet.

Remember the Gardeners' and Florists' Club field day at the New-England Nurseries Saturday, September 5. Members and friends are asked to be at Arlington Heights at 12:45 p. m., to take the special electric provided by the New England Nurseries. The running time to Bedford via trolley is about one and one-fourth hours.

H. H. Barrows & Son, of Whitman, have their houses filled to overflowing with splendid stocks of nephrolepis. In addition to Whitmani, Bostoniensis and Barrowsii, their new sports are promising and likely to be seen at the fall shows.

H. H. Rogers, of South Sudbury, is as usual bringing in some of the finest asters seen in the Boston market.

Vacation experiences will be the topic at the opening meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club September 15.

J. T. Butterworth is cutting some fine Oncidium Rogersii and will have an unusually heavy crop of Cattleya labiata shortly.

PHILADELPHIA.The Rising Eastern Market.

The advent of September is marked by an improvement in the cut flower market; nothing wonderful, scarcely perceptible at times, but nevertheless an unmistakable improvement gladly welcomed as the forerunner of fall business.

There is an increase in the number of roses coming into the market, the listed varieties being strengthened by the addition of Mrs. Jardine and My Maryland, the first shipments of these roses arriving during the last days of August. There has been about enough demand to absorb most of the better grades of all the roses at moderate prices. Beauties continue in demand. The fancy grades of Kaiserin are fine indeed.

There is no change in the conditions governing the carnation market. The supply continues light, and chiefly short-stemmed flowers of a half dozen standard varieties. Ethel Crocker, field-grown, stands out preëminently. Next to these come some choice white. The asters have been reinforced by the arrival of some exceptionally nice Crego. The choicer flowers of Semple's and other varieties are more numerous than a week ago. Cheap white asters for design work were scarcer at the close of last week than the fancies. There is little America gladiolus coming into the market. The light colors, when clear and distinct, are decidedly preferred to the dark, and bring more money. Dahlias are coming in greater force. While several of the largest growers will not cut before next week, many are sending in shipments of excellent stock that is in moderate demand. Red seems most popular so far.

Valley continues of excellent quality. The demand, while not what it should be, has improved somewhat. Orchids are scarce, it being difficult to find anywhere near enough to fill the few orders that are received. Greens have been reinforced by the arrival of wild smilax and of autumn foliage, maple and gum.

The Planting of My Maryland.

It was noised around at the rose show held in Chicago last March that the shrewdest eastern rose growers thought well of My Maryland, the pink debutante rose then being introduced by John Cook, of Baltimore. It was buzzed about that this and that rose grower would plant so many thousands of My Maryland, with a calm disregard of the fact that a new rose cannot be had without the expenditure of many shekels. These thousands of new roses meant to some of us what would be a very large sum of money indeed. Of course there could be only two explanations, one that the purchaser was stark, staring mad, an explanation that did not explain when you saw business sagacity that had weathered many storms; the other explanation, probably the true one, that these same rose growers felt so sure My Maryland would prove a money maker that the more they had of it, and the sooner, the better.

Careful inquiry has revealed the fact that the Philadelphia market will be supplied with this new variety by four (possibly more) of our best rose growers: Stephen Mortensen, of Southampton; William Munro, of Garrettsford; Myers & Santman, of Wyndmoor, and Edward Towill, of Roslyn. Reports from as many of these places as have been heard from are unanimous to the effect that My Maryland is a grower's rose; that is, it is a clean, healthy, vigorous grower, producing plenty of flowering wood of good quality. Whether it will prove a good selling rose remains to be seen.

The Dreer team was practically a new one, being composed chiefly of the members of the second Riverton team, a strong amateur organization. The Dreers were hosts and a jolly afternoon was enjoyed.

A Seed Warehouse.

The warehouse of the Henry A. Dreer corporation, built in 1905, is a modern six-story brick structure, entirely in keeping with the substantial old Philadelphia homes that face Washington square. It is everything that a seed-house should be—clean, light, airy and strongly built. Ascending to the sixth floor, we found that the order and system, so apparent in the Chestnut street seedhouse, were evident everywhere in the arrangement of the smallest detail.

The lighter grass seeds, those requiring dryness and air, were arranged on the top floor. Certain varieties in large sacks were laid on their sides, one above another, with avenues of air space between. Where necessary, a framework of light stripping was run up to the ceiling to keep them in position. On a lower floor the so-called oil seeds, in stocking-ette bags, were stored. Each seed, bulb, fertilizer, implement, in fact everything used in a large seed warehouse, had its place carefully chosen with a view to its wants. The potatoes were in the sub-cellar, a large potato fork handy, the tobacco stems near-by. The wood ashes, if I recall correctly, were on the floor above, and so on through an almost endless list.

I do not know whether the average florist has any idea of the knowledge and thought required to carry on a seed business successfully. Take, for instance, Kentucky blue grass. It is necessary to purchase this in quantity when harvested in the fall. A carload lot is secured. This is carefully stored in the most improved modern way, but suppose that the moths or some other seed destroyer should get into the Kentucky blue grass? A large part of the seed might easily be ruined, involving disappointment and loss. To prevent this, each bag can be placed in a chamber hermetically sealed, with a refrigerator door attached. In this chamber a saucer of bisulphide of carbon is placed; the fumes will penetrate the bags of seed, destroying every vestige of insect life and leaving the seed uninjured. I understood Mr. Thilow to say that twenty-four hours were allowed for each fumigation; at the end of that time the fumes have entirely evaporated.

Great caution is observed to prevent fire. The elevator is placed in a brick shaft with fireproof doors. Should fire occur, however, the system applied in keeping the books credits and debits the warehouse with each article brought in or removed, thus enabling the bookkeeper in their seed store, two squares away, to tell exactly what stock is on hand at any given moment. An air-shaft running from sub-cellar to roof is connected with each floor, insuring excellent ventilation. Heat is generated in the cellar and can be introduced into the first and second floors; the seeds in the upper floors do not require warmth. The impression created by a tour of this immense warehouse is that the seedsman's industry has advanced far more rapidly than most of us are aware.

Various Notes.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Some of our leading florists say that the month of August was not so bad as has generally been reported. It is true that all the business done was for funerals, but then there was plenty of it. We are all looking forward to good business, starting with the first part of September, as our society folks will be coming home from their summer trips and this should at once boom the business for us all. Funeral work was again one of the main reasons that nearly all of us were quite busy last week. At the wholesale houses stock of all kinds is beginning to look better each week. There is plenty of everything, but nothing really fancy. Roses and carnations are obtainable. Just now, with cooler weather, we can look for an improvement in the next two weeks.

Tuberose and gladiolus spikes are most plentiful at present; so, also, are asters. All the light colors sell well, with plenty of the darker shades going to waste. Lilium auratum and longiflorum sell well, also valley. Smilax is still scarce. As-

The Eggeling Floral Co. has wrecked all its houses but one at South Grand avenue, to be rebuilt at its new place near Normandy. Shaw's Gardens are grading all around them, clear through to Tower Grove avenue, which will include their place when their leasehold expires.

George Waldbart's place shows quite an improvement with the new addition to the front on Grand avenue. Mr. Waldbart's vacation was spent mostly at his summer home in Clayton.

Mrs. Middleton has vacated her position as bookkeeper for George Angermueller, which makes room for Mrs. Meyers, who has returned from Kansas, after spending six months for her health in that state. She now looks the picture of health.

Ed. Kalisch, who returned recently from a fishing trip, was in the wholesale district Monday, showing pictures of his trip and that his fish stories were all true.

At H. J. Weber & Sons' place, the big rose houses are in fine shape for a good season's cut. They will try carnations this year, Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress.

The Foster Floral Co. has put in fruit in addition to its floral department, and Mr. Foster thinks it will be a paying venture.

CAMPELLO, MASS.—Thomas F. Vegetable Forcing.

AMONG MARKET GARDENERS.

Little Britain, N. Y., is the garden spot of Orange county and abounds with market gardens, the bulk of the product finding its way to the New York markets. Owing to the continued drought, some kinds of vegetables have yielded short crops.

Stephen Murphy, one of the largest gardeners in this section, tells me it is not unusual for his soil to produce 1,200 bushels of onions to the acre, the variety being Yellow Globe Danvers. Chantenay is the favorite carrot, both for size and yield. Earliana is the best tomato for first crops. A patch yielded 1,500 baskets, which sold at $1.10 per basket, fruit weighing one and one-quarter pounds apiece not being unusual. Intensive culture is carried out and the results obtained are highly satisfactory. The culture of tobacco is being taken up here. A very early variety introduced from Russia will be given a good trial. It is strongly recommended, owing to its fineness of texture and early ripening qualities.

Homer Williams is another who has made a success by raising specialties. The tomatoes June Pink and Dwarf Champion are his leaders. For flavor and productiveness they are hard to beat.

Ephraim Titus, of The Hermitage, showed me a sample of the White Mexican sweet corn, a variety quite new to this locality, introduced from Iowa. It is deliciously sweet and has a large cob, with kernels well arranged.

Tighe Bros. are large growers of celery. Golden Self-Blanching, true Paris stock, is the leader, with Giant Pascal a close second. M.

FORCING TOMATOES.

[A paper by Prof. W. S. Blair, of Macdonald College, Quebec, read before the Canadian Horticultural Association, in convention at Niagara Falls, Ont., August 19 and 20, 1908.]

It is doubtful whether tomato forcing as a distinct business can be profitably conducted in Canada. I think, however, that tomatoes can often be profitably worked in as a spring crop after some of the commonly grown greenhouse crops are past their best. It was with this thought in mind that work with tomatoes under glass was taken up at the Macdonald College.

I might state at the outset that our experience at the present time is too limited to state exactly how much gain there is in this, and to what extent it can be carried on with profit to follow chrysanthemums, violets, carnations, lettuce or radish, which, we think, are the principal crops with which such a practice can be followed to advantage. When your secretary asked me to prepare this paper I was inclined to say "No," for the reason that more experience is necessary to speak definitely on this point, especially as the latter part of the violet and carnation crop has to be sacrificed in order to give the tomato plants an early start.

Necessary Care and Attention.

On the other hand, the attention and care necessary to make this business a success can be as well brought out in this address as in one where a greater mass of detail, showing exact returns, is at hand. For, after all, whether this business is a profitable one or not depends largely upon the ability of the man and the time and care he puts into the business, and his facilities for bringing along the plants to the time when they are required for setting into the benches. One thing is sure, they cannot be grown profitably without attention, and if the idea is to run this crop in as one to receive attention only after everything else is done, it will not prove a profitable business.

For much of the data presented in this paper I am indebted to my former assistant, Prof. V. R. Gardner, now horticulturist of the Maine State College, and especially to our efficient greenhouse manager, A. H. Walker.

Difficulties of Winter Forcing.

It is possibly not necessary for me to state that the winter forcing of tomatoes is much more difficult than the spring forcing. The tomato loves light and heat, and to ripen its fruit during the dark days of midwinter, when sunlight is not only scarce but not strong enough to clear the glass of its heavy coating of frost, is no easy proposition. For this reason it is doubtful to what extent winter forcing can be carried on. This point we aim to work out, and experiments to that end are now in progress. Our first planting has just been made into permanent beds, hoping to have our fruit well formed by December, depending largely upon heat alone for ripening. This phase of the question, however, is not the purpose of this paper, and therefore the spring forcing problem and how it can be worked to follow other crops is what I wish especially to deal with.

Our houses are of the King construction, twenty-one and one-half feet in span and seven feet to the gutter. The plants should have four and one-half to five feet of head room at least; therefore the crop cannot be worked into some low houses profitably. Our houses run east and west. We have a four-span house. These houses are divided by a glass partition and a walk runs crosswise of the house, with glass partitions at each side. We have, in all, four 38-foot and four 58-foot houses, each under control. Briefly, our aim is to develop crops on a commercial scale in these houses and at the same time work out problems similar to the one under discussion.

The soil used for tomatoes was made up of a medium light loam sod, piled in the summer, into which one-quarter its bulk of stable manure was put, and the whole cut down and mixed before putting into the benches. The soil in the benches was six inches deep.

NAMES OF PLANTS.

Kindly let me know the names of the enclosed coleus, also the name of the flowers which I enclose, and where I can buy them, and what colors they come in.
A. W.

I am unable to give the names of the coleus. Those sent are probably seedlings. These show such a wide variation in the foliage that it is almost impossible to determine them. No. 3 has handsome foliage and makes an excellent pot plant, but is not so good for bedding purposes.

The flowers are those of Hibiscus Syriacus, rose of Sharon. There are both double and single-flowering varieties. Of this attractive, late flowering shrub, a few of the best are: Ardens, bluish purple; elegantissimus, white, shaded rose; Joan of Arc, double white; totus albus, single white; Boule de Feu, double red; carneo-plenus, double flesh; bicolor, double white, red marks; violaceus, double purple; variegatus, variegated foliage, flowers lavender with a purple blotch at base of petals. These shrubs are obtainable from almost any of the firms advertising in the nursery department of the REVIEW.

THE sweet corn in Nebraska has been making good progress the last few weeks and, with no early frost, the crop is likely to be much better than was at first thought, but the prospect for vine seeds is not improved.

WORK on the 1909 catalogues is well along in many houses, but the question of prices still remains to be considered. From present indications there will be few reductions and many advances as compared with last year.

HUGH LOW & Co., the English seedsmen, say that this year the crop of cyclamen seed is a fine one, and that they appreciate a good year after last season's dull, sunless weather. Following on the demand for Low's Salmon King, they have nearly as much seed of this variety harvested as of all the other varieties put together, except their Giant White.

WHEN France placed an embargo on the importation of American nursery products, bulbs were included. Now an influentially signed petition against the interdiction on bulbs has been lodged with the French government. The French nurserymen point out that their chief imports from the U. S. A. are lilies and tuberose, neither of which could act as a vehicle for the importation of the San Jose scale; their purchases of shrubs, etc., being quite insignificant. It is said the only effect of the recent law has been that what American bulbs are urgently required are imported via England and Germany at an extra cost of thirty to forty per cent.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $30,713.

SEED CROPS IN HOLLAND.

Although last winter was not exceedingly severe in Holland, the late frosts of last spring destroyed large quantities of all root crops. Cabbages, turnips, and parsley suffered. During the latter part of last spring and the early part of the summer we had favorable weather, but this was followed by persistent drought with an east wind, and many plants of the brassica type did not develop well and suffered from insects in the pods, together with other vermin.

Cauliflowers were looking well at the middle of August, although they showed the effects of the dry weather and winds.

Cabbages, Brussels sprouts and borecole promise only a medium crop and in some places they look even bad, especially on account of the plants having started to grow again after having produced a great many pods. This is due to the fact that rains came too late and it is, of course, highly detrimental to the undeveloped seeds in the pods.

Turnips and swedes suffered largely last spring, and the remainder do not look well because of worms and bad weather. Of sugar beet we expect a good crop, but there are few plantations. Of carrots there is not a very promising stand. Parsnips are good, with the usual acreage. The new crop of cornsalad will be relatively small. The plantations of summer radish are not important, but they are partly looking well, though in some instances they promise less than a medium crop. Onions are a small acreage and the crop variable. Only a small area of parsley was planted, but this looks promising. The plantations of spinach are of usual importance and they are looking rather well, but part of them were lost last spring. Of dwarf and runner beans the general standing is under middling, but the plantations are rather important.

Owing to favorable weather the fields of flower seeds are looking well, with the exception of a few perennial articles which suffered more or less from frost, such as Campanula medium and Myosotis dissitiflora. Little candytuft was sown; crop middling. Centaurea is good, and convolvulus extra good. Dianthus, eschscholtzia, mimulus, petunia, and verbenas are all extra good. Ten weeks' stocks are magnificent. Phlox are looking well but there will not be many seeds. Nasturtiums are much less in area than usual, but look good. Pansies are not largely planted. They look all right, but, if the drought continues, will not produce many seeds. Mignonette in some places is thin, especially the better of the exporters in Teneriffe have the consular invoices made out at the English transshipping ports.

However, from the personal investigations that I have made in the principal growing districts, the ultimate results of the crop have turned out to be less than one-half of the estimated yield. The cause is due to disease spreading out through the continuous rainy weather we had from November right down to the latter part of the month of April. It was curious to notice at one of my fields, sown with the same kind of bulbs, manured, watered and cultivated in the same way, that disease made great havoc in a certain part of the middle of the field, and the sides were untouched, some of the stalks bearing a head of seeds measuring twenty inches in diameter. Again, at the Orotava district there was a field yielding the most abnormal quantity of seeds. To every hundredweight of onions it yielded over a hundredweight of good seeds, and any one understanding this cultivation will imagine what the size of the heads or tops must have been. This was about one acre of land planted by my friends and competitors, Messrs. Wildpret Bros., of Orotava.

American buyers have had their orders very much cut down by exporters on this side, and the demand for White Bermuda and White Crystal Wax has been considerable from your side. There are still a few parcels on offer by small farmers, but the majority of native farmers are very routinary in their methods and lacking scientific knowledge of agriculture. These have, through sheer ignorance, raised hybrid onions year after year, thus tampering with the true stock. My aim is to purify as much as possible this cultivation, but this end can only be attained by cultivating the onions under an intelligent supervision. Attention must be paid to keeping up the classical, flattish-round, perfect shape of the Bermuda onion. No bulbs must be planted that are not absolutely healthy, true to stock and shape.

Seedsmen and dealers in the United States will considerably help in the work of perfecting the cultivation of Bermuda onion seeds if they order a minimum quantity of their likely requirements one year ahead. That is to say, that such minimum quantity orders should be in the hands of Teneriffe exporters not later than in the month of August of every year.

Kindly call the attention of your readers to the fact that the climate and soil of Teneriffe are privileged for raising under the most favorable conditions nearly all kinds of foreign flowers, seeds, plants and bulbs imported in the United States and especially in the famous valley of Orotava and at Laguna. I shall be pleased to give to interested parties any information required. Liliun Harrisii thrives here better than at the Azores or in Bermuda, but never a serious attempt has been made to export the bulbs.

the place of the familiar dykes in Holland.

Having found this location, we began experiments with about four acres of bulbs in 1903, and have gradually increased the plantations till at the present time we have fifty acres planted with narcissi, tulips, early flowering gladioli and irises, besides our experimental patches.

Peculiarities of Demand.

As you can well understand, all this has not been done without a great deal of money spent, and lots of disappointments. In the first place, we have found that though the greater part of the now large family of narcissi can be grown successfully here, there are a few varieties that have not as yet answered to our treatment, notably the Telamonius plenus, or double daffodil, which will come green with us in spite of everything we can do to stop it. We are therefore obliged to sell only imported roots of this variety. I may add that the Virginia Experimental Station, at Blacksburg, is taking the matter up for us in the hope of finding a remedy.

When starting our experiments we imported stocks of the varieties most liked by the English trade, but we have now proved that the English and American tastes differ. Take, for instance, Poeticus ornatus; in England there is no flower so much sought after for forcing purposes as this one, while here it is practically not used at all. I cannot account for this, unless it is because of its little red center, as it is a cheap bulb and sure to give a fine percentage of bloom. We also tried Barri conspicuus, a flower that is thought much of in the old country. Here it does not seem to take. Though we never especially rec-commend it for forcing, it is a hard one to beat for outdoor planting, as the flowers are borne on long stems, and it is one of the easiest bulbs to grow that I know of.

The Labor Question.

Another great difficulty we have had to overcome was the labor question. This has been met in large measure by substituting mules for hand labor; in other words, we make our mules do for us what is done by the hand labor in England. This has become possible owing to the land being much cheaper here. We are therefore in a position to allow room between our beds of bulbs to work cultivators, etc. In England we study the land; here we study labor.

As you all know, the rough work down south is done by colored labor, and the great difficulty we first experienced in getting them to understand the necessity of keeping all the different varieties separate was nearly enough to make us give the whole thing up as a bad job. The whole lot of narcissi seemed to them nothing more than a heap of onions. I am pleased to say that to a great extent this difficulty has been overcome, and I now have in my employ men who have been with me for four years, and who can now name the majority of the bulbs as they bloom.

Effect on the Bulb Trade.

I stated at the beginning of my paper that the effects of our work in Virginia would shortly be very far-reaching, for soon we will be ready to put some of the leading varieties, which have proved so successful with us, on the market in quantities. What we have to do now is to overcome the prejudice against American-grown bulbs, which I am sorry to say still exists. To overcome this we have sent out, and are still sending out, samples of the Virginian-grown bulbs for testing against imported bulbs of the same variety. In this we have been most successful, some of the leading growers having stated that after giving them a fair and impartial trial they were in every way equal to English or Dutch bulbs. One way in which we claim superiority of American over imported bulbs is the earliness of flowering. American bulbs planted under the same conditions as imported bulbs will flower from five to ten days earlier. This is no doubt due to their early ripening in the spring, which alone is worth a lot of money to the bulb forcer, as it means less time of firing and attention.

Up to the present I have dealt with narcissi, but I should like to call attention for a few moments to the tulips. We have a large acreage of these, in both the late-flowering and Darwin varieties. Such varieties as Gesneriana, Picotee, Bouton D'Or, in the late varieties, and all the Darwins do well with us.

Spanish iris is a flower that is really neglected in this country. They are so easy of culture, and the flowers themselves give such a range of colors that I am surprised that they are not grown by every florist. If picked in bud there is no flower that will travel better.

As some of you may know, we are trying specially to introduce the early flowering gladioli. These, too, should be much better known than they are, for though they do not grow anything like as large as the late flowering varieties, they certainly come at a time when flowers are needed most, and if handled properly will force well.

Cut Blooms.

Before leaving this subject I should like to say a few words about the shipments of cut blooms. You all know what a large quantity are put on the market in the spring. The shipments last season, in the week before Easter, averaged over one ton a day. Some seem to think that there is a danger of the cut flower trade being overdone, but I see no reason to fear this. I remember four years ago, when we were sending comparatively few flowers to the markets, we were constantly receiving wires from the salesmen: "Market glutted; don't send;" while this season we had more inquiries than ever for cut blooms. I have always contended that we are only feeling the market and that once we can get all classes of people interested in buying flowers, there will be no limit to the demand. What is wanted is a flower that can be grown at such a price that it will be within the reach of everybody.

I do not want for one minute to lead you to believe that the growers were satisfied with the returns for some of the cut blooms, but I maintain that things are obliged to regulate themselves and that in the near future we will see the cut blooms selling at their right value.

I know full well that it upset the flower trade while sending flowers in such quantities, but the growers will soon learn to regulate their output so as not to clash with the outdoor crops too severely.

I have been told that one cannot expect to sell the bulbs if he puts flowers on the market in competition with those to whom he has sold the bulbs. Here I must say that I think the remedy lies in the growers' own hands, for instead of buying bulbs from Europe they can buy Virginian bulbs, leaving only the smaller bulbs to be grown on for next season. In this way they would practically have the whole thing in their own hands.

Future of the Business.

That the demand for this class of flower is increasing we know full well by our local trade. Four years ago we had as much trouble selling $5 worth of Unfavorable weather was the lot of the North Shore Horticultural Society for the big summer show, which was held on the grounds of the Essex County Club August 26 and 27. While there was a slight falling off in entries, the quality of the exhibits was superior.

Mrs. Gardner M. Lane, Hubert Shaw gardener, secured the Schlegel & Fottler special for the best collection of annuals. The silver cup, value $25, for best 100-foot group of ferns went to Mrs. E. S. Grew, Alfred Parsons gardener, for an excellent lot; Mrs. Lester Leland, Eric Wetterton gardener, second. The last named exhibitor captured the silver cup for the best group of flowering and foliage plants arranged for effect. Mrs. George Cabot won the cup for the best table arranged by ladies. For best display of white flowers Mrs. James McMillan, F. F. Brasch gardener, led with a splendid collection. The T. J. Grey Co. prize for twenty annuals went to the same exhibitor, also the J. B. Dow special prize for perennial phlox and the Schlegel & Fottler special for collection of zinnias. Mrs. A. G. Thayer won the gold medal for best twelve vases of herbaceous flowers.

For the largest and best collection of vegetables Mrs. Philip Dexter, James Salter gardener, won the White silver cup. For twelve varieties of vegetables, prizes offered by T. J. Grey Co., Mrs. Gordon Abbott, William Irwin gardener, was first, and Mrs. E. S. Grew second. Mrs. Gordon Abbott also won the Schlegel & Fottler special for collection, and the same firm's special for collection of tomatoes.

There were many fine displays in the society's cut flower and plant classes. A few successful exhibitors in addition to those named were Miss Mary Bartlett, Bernard Reilly gardener; Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, William Kiss gardener; Mrs. S. Parkman Blake, A. M. Pattillo, F. C. Stevens, Mrs. S. Parker Bremer, Mrs. George D. Howe and Mrs. H. L. Higginson, James Scott gardener. The last named exhibitor secured the society's gold medal for the best table of cut flowers arranged for effect.

Among miscellaneous exhibits were displays of dahlias from R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and four splendid tables of gladioli, including many fine seedlings from P. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, Mass.

WASHINGTON.

Summer business still prevails. The store men are taking stock and touching up the salesrooms, to be ready when the season opens.

A trip to the plant of Gude Bros. found everything in exceptionally fine shape. Mr. Mitchell, the superintendent, is the happiest man in the district when he shows visitors his carnation house, and Mr. Sharper is in his glory when he shows you the 75,000 mum plants. Mr. Bartus can show one of the finest lots of ferns south of New York. He has the pest that caused so much trouble last year under perfect control. Some others have not been so fortunate; they have depended on chemicals, while he used his fingers. A. Gude is the busiest man on the place. He has the foundation ready for the last house to be put up this season.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held next Tuesday evening. They will be the guests of Edward Schmidt, better known as the Bird King. The meeting will be held at the Eagles' hall, corner Sixth and E streets, N. W.

H. Prichard, of the Gude store, is sojourning at Atlantic City. O. O.

For the largest and best collection of vegetables Mrs. Philip Dexter, James Salter gardener, won the White silver cup. For twelve varieties of vegetables, prizes offered by T. J. Grey Co., Mrs. Gordon Abbott, William Irwin gardener, was first, and Mrs. E. S. Grew second. Mrs. Gordon Abbott also won the Schlegel & Fottler special for collection, and the same firm's special for collection of tomatoes.

There were many fine displays in the society's cut flower and plant classes. A few successful exhibitors in addition to those named were Miss Mary Bartlett, Bernard Reilly gardener; Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, William Kiss gardener; Mrs. S. Parkman Blake, A. M. Pattillo, P. C. Stevens, Mrs. S. Parker Bremer, Mrs. George D. Howe and Mrs. H. L. Higginson, James Scott gardener. The last named exhibitor secured the society's gold medal for the best table of cut flowers arranged for effect.

Among miscellaneous exhibits were displays of dahlias from R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and four splendid tables of gladioli, including many fine seedlings from P. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, Mass. W. N. CRAIG.

HUTCHINSON, IND. Hatten & Bieberich, a newly organized firm, recently purchased from Charles Saul the two greenhouses on Swan street, near East State street, and began business there. The houses are each 25x132 and are almost new. Anthony Bieberich, the manager, has been connected with the trade since boyhood and had a long experience at the Vesey greenhouses, in Fort Wayne. He took first prize on chrysanthemums in a Chicago show last year. The new establishment will be known as the East End Greenhouse.

WASHINGTON.

Summer business still prevails. The store men are taking stock and touching up the salesrooms, to be ready when the season opens.

A trip to the plant of Gude Bros. found everything in exceptionally fine shape. Mr. Mitchell, the superintendent, is the happiest man in the district when he shows visitors his carnation house, and Mr. Sharper is in his glory when he shows you the 75,000 mm plants. Mr. Bartus can show one of the finest lots of ferns south of New York. He has the pest that caused so much trouble last year under perfect control. Some others have not been so fortunate; they have depended on chemicals, while he used his fingers. A. Gude is the busiest man on the place. He has the foundation ready for the last house to be put up this season.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held next Tuesday evening. They will be the guests of Edward Schmidt, better known as the Bird King. The meeting will be held at the Eagles' hall, corner Sixth and E streets N. W.

H. Pritchard, of the Gude store, is sojourning at Atlantic City. O. O.

We enclose money order for $1 for another year of the REVIEW. We cannot do without it; it is the standard of excellence.—FRANK BROS., Beardstown, Ill.

It is putting it mildly to say the REVIEW is the most helpful and most instructive paper I have ever read. When one copy is read I can hardly wait for another.—JOHN SPENCER, Decatur, Tex.

PLEASE discontinue my advertisements of antheriums, geraniums and hydrangea cuttings in the REVIEW, as I am about sold out. Your paper certainly sells the stuff. G. E. FINK, Roselle, N. J.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE Park Nursery Co., of Pasadena, Cal., is making some alterations and improvements in its city sales yards, 190 West Colorado street. The old building, which has done service as an office for twenty-one years, has been removed, and in place of it an attractive office and a modern greenhouse are being erected. Additional yard room has also been secured.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business still shows a tendency to improve, and stock, especially of the lighter shades, is quickly bought up. The growers are still in the midst of changing their stock, and carnations and roses are not plentiful. Asters are at their best. The quality is good and the prices are low. The best blooms can be bought at $1.50 per hundred, and even less. They will last for another month, and then make way for chrysanthemums. Some early varieties of these are being offered in small quantities. They are greenhouse grown and of good quality. The outdoor stock looks well, but will not be ready for cutting in quantity for about four weeks. Roses are scarce and anything that is really good brings a fair price. Poorer quality can be had at almost any figure offered. Amaryllises are a glut in the market and many thousands will be allowed to go to waste in the fields. Japanese lilies have not moved as quickly this week as they did previously, and many inferior flowers are coming into town; but it is near the end of their season and another couple of weeks will find them disappeared. Sweet peas, except short-stemmed stock, are scarce. Valley continues to move slowly. Gladioli and dahlias have given way to the characteristic fall flowers. Everything else in the floral line is away down in price. The weather continues to be cool, although it is a shade warmer than last week.

Various Notes.

SMILAX ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

Smilax that is growing in a lath or shade house should without delay be put in shape for another season. If it has not been growing too long in its present location, the ground should be well soaked and then carefully dug up, with a quantity of manure between the rows. Given another thorough soaking and then a slight mulching of well rotted manure, the growth will shortly commence. Before it does, see that the strings are all attended to. The young shoots will grow fast with this treatment, if the roots have been allowed to dry out well during the summer, and in a couple of weeks they will show themselves nicely.

They should not be crowded too much and, if the grower has house room sufficient for them, they multiply quickly.

With the recurrence of another mild winter, should we have one on the Pacific coast, there will be no difficulty in having splendid smilax all through the winter season. Smilax watered now will be fit to cut in November and, should the season not be too severe from then onward, another crop can easily be gathered from the same plants. Very cold weather retards the growth and sometimes may nip a portion of the tip of the leaves, thereby greatly lessening the value of the cut strings.

The texture is not quite so delicate outside as it is under glass, but in general work it answers well. Smilax that is grown under glass will give considerable more growth from the same number of plants. They apparently do not need such a long resting season and a better quality is produced, but as smilax is always looked on as a cheap article at best, many growers do not like to allow it house room.

During favorable winters smilax grown outside has proven to be a good money-maker. Should the season, however, turn out to be severe, a much poorer quality of material will be produced and a much smaller quantity as well.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Carnation Enchantress has well maintained the name so aptly bestowed upon it and will undoubtedly prove itself to be as profitable a variety this season as it was in the past. William P. Pfeifer, of Utica, N. Y., challenges the record made in March last, when in a house 30x124 feet he gathered at one picking 30,000 blooms. A photograph taken at that time gives some idea of the tremendous crop. This was not a chance harvest, but the result of careful fertilizing.

William Mathews, of Utica, reports the demand for orchid blooms as being on the increase. At the time of my visit Artist Harry was making up a handsome wreath of bronze galax, touched off with Cattleya Harrisoniana and Oncidium citreum.

Frank C. Baker, of Utica, was heading for a ball game, being prevented from attending the convention and taking part with his Buffalo friends. Carnations are all planted and look fine. Demand for small ferns is increasing.

H. A. Maxiner, of Herkimer, N. Y., has made many improvements since he purchased this plant, and feels at times like spreading out. However, he read President Traendly's address with much interest and has decided to bide a wee until business warrants expansion.

The Hatchers, of Amsterdam, N. Y., both father and son, returned from the convention full of the good things seen and heard there. Nothing like ocular proof. One gets an entirely different view than by reading reports, however concise they may be.

Fred Goldring, of Slingerlands, N. Y., usually carries over one-half his rose stock. Replanting and cutting back later cause the plants to make strong breaks. Eight houses, each 130 feet long, are planted with teas. Killarney has done well. White Killarney will be added this season. The almost extinct Perle is grown here and is shipped to all parts in small numbers. It is the trademark of this establishment.

H. G. Eyres, of Albany, N. Y., says the richest design he sends out is composed of Perles and violets, with Cattleya Dowiana.

WOBURN, MASS.—Charles Cummings expects to begin work soon on a new greenhouse, 40x360 feet.

FINDLAY, O.—S. J. McMichael has a house, 25x80, full of florists' stock. He has 2,000 geraniums in the sand ready to pot, besides ferns, palms and bedding plants and a nice stock of pansies nearly ready to ship. He expects to bench 1,000 carnation plants this month and has no thought of giving up the florists' department, although the vegetable plant business has become so large. He is just finishing fifteen hotbeds, 10x20 feet, for growing vegetable plants. Last spring he put down forty bushels of sweet potatoes for plants and this year expects to use eighty to 100 bushels. Last spring he had to buy a great many plants to fill orders and next year intends to produce his stock himself.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Jeager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 84th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

DRY weather had its effect on the peach crops in Delaware.

A HALF interest in C. S. Harrison's nursery at York, Neb., has been sold to H. S. King.

THE Farmers' Nursery Co., of Tippecanoe City, O., has increased its capital stock from $20,000 to $200,000.

MOORE'S EARLY grape has been coming into the markets in fine condition and in considerable quantity during the latter half of August and has made excellent prices.

D. M. ANDREWS, of Boulder, Colo., who deals in Rocky mountain shrubs and seeds, has found business so good that he is more than doubling his facilities, having recently secured the necessary land.

THE Coöperative Nurseries, of New York, location, Rochester, N. Y., has been incorporated with $25,000 authorized capital stock. The incorporators are J. A. Ryan, J. C. Feist and J. E. Kaveny, all of Rochester.

THE Chamber of Commerce of Atlanta extended every courtesy to the Southern Nurserymen's Association upon the occasion of its meeting at Atlanta, Ga. One of the features of entertainment was a watermelon feast on the roof of the nineteen-story Candler building, Mr. Candler being present in person and proving himself a royal host.

JOSEPH W. VESTAL & SON, Little Rock, Ark., write as follows: "We notice in your last issue that F. J. U. asks for a remedy for the clematis bug. We have more or less trouble with this bug every season and have found that one application of Hammond's slug shot will drive them away. The powder should be used when the bugs first appear and little damage will be done."

ENGLISH HAWTHORN FOR HEDGE

I spent my vacation last month in Nova Scotia and was greatly interested in the fine hedges of English hawthorn that I saw in Yarmouth. Can you tell me if this plant will grow well in central New York? I have never seen a hedge of it in our vicinity, but if I knew that it would thrive I should like one myself.

A. W. W.

All the crataegus, or hawthorns, are hardy in New York, and are occasionally used for hedging purposes in the eastern states, only, however, on a small scale. They grow vigorously and make excellent lawn specimens, being equally attractive either in flower or fruit. For hedges the varieties Crataegus Oxyacantha, English May thorn, with single white flowers and scarlet fruit, and C. Crus-galli, lockspur thorn, bright red fruit, single white flowers, long, stout spines, are the best. For hedging purposes start with small plants, which can be set out in early spring three feet apart. If you want a thick, closely cropped hedge, cut the plants down close

The main objections which can be urged to the use of hawthorn for hedging purposes are that the foliage frequently becomes disfigured by red spider in summer and borers attack the plants when they become sizable. Still, there is no reason why you should not have a hedge which would last in good condition for a number of years. In Great Britain, where hawthorn hedges are a feature, the rows are often zigzagged, the plants being set as closely as a foot apart. These hedges when closely cropped are absolutely impenetrable. W. N. CRAIG.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Reports from all corners show a decided increase in business over the preceding week. There was quite a demand for wedding flowers. Plants were also in more demand and ferns sold especially well. There is a difference of opinion as to what the coming season has in store for us. With a little extra pushing, the returns should not run behind the season of 1907-8. The trouble with some is that they just lie around and wait for work to wake them up.

At the commission houses all good stock sells readily. Poor stock, of course, does not sell. The best growers sometimes have a streak of bad luck with some of their stock, but by throwing the poor stuff out at once, instead of unloading it at the commission house, they would save the express charges and aid the commission man in getting a better price for the good stock.

Various Notes.

Martin Reukauf and his wife spent the better half of last week in this city. Mrs. Reukauf was entertained by Mrs. Maynard and was highly elated with the City of the Straits. H. S.

COLUMBIA, S. C.

Mrs. J. M. Eison has just completed one house, 21x120, making her three houses in all and covering her ground so no other improvements can be made there. A general collection of plants and cut flowers is grown.

Miss Wittvogel has added one house, 35x140 feet, making seven houses in all, for cut flowers and general stock.

The Rose Hill Greenhouses have put up a splendid cypress tank sixty feet high, with a capacity of 15,000 gallons. The water is for the greenhouses and truck farm. Rose Hill has the largest greenhouse plant in Columbia, eight houses in all. Cut flowers are a specialty there.

Mr. Becker has charge of the state grounds; the work is mostly done by convicts. This is the first season that the grounds about the State House have received any attention. The beds of salvias, coleus, etc., are looking well and the grass is kept short.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—Chas. M. Neuman started six years ago with a hotbed and today has thirteen greenhouses. Trade has been good.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business picked up last week, and if there had been enough stock, it would have been on a par with the busy winter weeks. Roses are coming in a little more plentifully. Asters are poor here this season, and carnations are not yet in. Beauties are scarce, but there is not much demand for them.

Various Notes.

The attention of the florists is taken up with the coming state fair. More of the florists of each city will compete than in any previous year, and greater interest in the floral exhibit has manifested itself.

Mr. Holmes, formerly with the L. S. Donaldson Co., and of late in Pittsburg, is now with James Souden & Co.

The annual meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association, for the election of officers, was held September 3, at Columbia hall, Merriam park. Copies of the new constitution and by-laws, as adopted at the June meeting, were distributed. M. E. M.

ERIE, PA.

State of Trade.

Business is quiet. Society folks have gone camping along the lake. Summer homes and cottages are attractive places during this warm weather. A luncheon or a dinner now and then add to the variety of trade.

Various Notes.

Miss Trost, of Trost & Steinfurth, has returned from her vacation.

Robert Wallis, formerly rose grower for the J. M. Gasser Co., at Cleveland, is now with the Baur Floral Co., in this city.

Mrs. Robert Wallis has returned from a visit to Cleveland.

L. A. Spoden is renting Mrs. W. Niemeyer's greenhouses on East Twenty-third street.

John Kallenbach is visiting friends at Warren and St. Marys, Pa. B. P.

Carnation Plants

We have about 1000 more plants to offer of May at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Don't delay in ordering if you want to plant this variety this season. * * * * *

We also have fine plants of Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Crimson Glow and Mrs. Lawson to offer at $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. * * * * *

These plants are stocky and well matured and are in fine shape for planting. * * * * *

The Market.

Outside of funeral work and some other little odds and ends, there was not much doing. Still, the reports sound fair, and there was no stock left over. Asters, good and indifferent, young roses, gladioli, etc., even the few of the new carnations, were all cleaned up in good shape. The last named came from Madison, for it will be some time yet before the local specialists do much cutting.

Various Notes.

Two daughters of Adam Zender, of Rogers Park, Ill., spent several days in this city last week, making their headquarters at Fred Holton's home.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Baumgarten is well again and looking after the interests of the Baumgarten Floral Co. at Fifth street and Grand avenue and at the Hotel Pfister.

Miss Rose Semler, so long employed by the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., has returned from a two weeks' vacation spent at the Soo of Michigan and points of interest in Canada.

Holton & Hunkel are beginning to cut Rhea Reid roses of good quality at their Brown Deer place.

William Edlefsen left for Pittsburg, to visit his daughter, Mrs. William Scott, and to meet his wife and daughter, Miss Valeria, who stopped off there on their trip home after spending several months sojourning in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reutschler and two daughters, of Madison, Wis., were in our midst last week.

Albert Hanson, of Racine, Wis., was here the first part of last week, looking for field-grown carnation plants.

Everybody, without fail, should attend the florists' picnic next Sunday at Crystal Spring park. All arrangements are completed and it is now up to the members to help make it a success.

Leonard Kill, of Chicago, spent Sunday in our midst. E. O.

PEORIA, ILL.

Peoria and vicinity have been visited by several heavy showers, which were much needed.

A most enjoyable event was the fishing party and banquet given by D. U. Augspurger & Sons to their employees and friends. Part of the time was spent in fishing and rowing. In the evening all sat down to an elaborate spread, which was under the personal supervision of Mr. and Mrs. H. Scherff. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. D. U. Augspurger, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Augspurger, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Augspurger, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Ruppel, Mrs. W. E. Hack, A. Lomuel, James E. Hack, William Wrigley, Howard Matthews, Rudolph Jacobs, Walter Craig, Atlee and Sydney Augspurger, and Misses Eleanor Gustavson, Ruth Sherwoods, Vivian Watt and Adeline and Eva Augspurger.

It is rumored that a certain Peorian has purchased one and one-half acres in the western part of the city and will cover the property with greenhouses. Nothing definite can be learned of the transaction, however. H. C. R.

NEW ORLEANS.

On Gentilly road, in the suburbs of New Orleans, are situated several large growers of chrysanthemums. A. Alost, at the Rose Villa Nursery, is among the most important. Three houses, 20x110, are planted in Robinson, in solid beds. The covering is of movable glazed frames, which are put in place when the buds are fairly expanded. Mr. Alost grows fine flowers and is well satisfied with his system of growing. Other houses are filled with different stock or ready to be planted in sweet peas, bulbs and flowering stuff, which are the specialties of the establishment. Mr. Alost believes in growing what pays, and his large business in cut flowers at his stand at the French market calls for any quantity of stuff all the year around. His field roses are just now a little at rest, but they will start with a new vigor sometime next month. A large plot of ground, which is now planted in cowpeas, to be plowed under as a fertilizer, will be sowed in annuals for early spring.

Introduction of 1908

We desire to call attention to this new fern, which originated with us and which we are introducing this year. It is a very unique and distinct novelty—as distinct from Nephrolepis Piersoni and Piersoni elegantissima as they were from Bostoniensis. It is, in fact, a complete break. The fronds are very heavily imbricated, the pinnae overlapping, making the fronds very dense and compact.

It differs from the other Nephrolepis not only in form, but also in color, being a richer and darker green—entirely different from the yellowish green of all the other Nephrolepis. The plant is very sturdy in its habit, the fronds never breaking down.

While a photograph shows a similarity to its predecessors, it is absolutely distinct, not only in the formation of the fronds and color, but also in its habit and general characteristics. It makes a much more dwarf and compact growth, the fronds being very dense, firm and rigid, and having a great deal more substance, so that it will stand more knocking around than any other fern of this type.

It is a sterling novelty. Experts who have seen it consider it by far the best fern ever sent out. It is a plant that needs to be seen to have its great value and sterling qualities appreciated. It really is not in the same class with the other varieties.

It was awarded a First-class Certificate by the Royal Horticultural Society at Crystal Palace in London, November, 1908, the plants exhibited there having been shipped from New York two weeks before that time. After being exhibited in London, the same plants were shipped to Edinburgh, Scotland, where they were again awarded a First-class Certificate by the Scottish Horticultural Society. This will indicate the value of the plant as a novelty, and also demonstrates in a very conclusive manner its fine keeping and shipping qualities.

We have just begun shipping advance orders, and new orders can now be shipped immediately on receipt.

Fine, strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100. 4-in. pots, $7.00 per doz.; $50.00 per 100. 6-in. pots, $1.50 each; $15.00 per doz.

SEEDS.COBURN'S SELECTED PANSY SEED.*BEST MARKET STRAIN GROWN.

Our seed is saved from about 12,000 plants, carefully selected, when in bloom, from the 500,000 we grow for our spring sales.

Each plant is carefully selected, color, size, form and substance being taken into consideration, and the proportion of each color is properly balanced.

As a result of over 25 years' work along these lines, we feel justified in claiming to have the best strain of pansies on the market, and we invite trial and comparison.

Growing our stock in this manner, we have only a limited amount of seed to spare, and in order to distribute as widely as possible, we offer it in packets of 1000 seeds. Price, $1.00 per packet (only one to each customer).

1. E. COBURN, 291 Ferry St., Everett, Mass.

THE Morehead Mfg. Co., of Detroit, writes that it has started suit in the U. S. Circuit Court, before Judge Swan, for an injunction to prevent the manufacture and the sale of the Detroit Steam Trap. It states that it also has instituted a suit against Mr. Morehead in the same court for infringement of the patents belonging to the Morehead Mfg. Co. and applying to the Morehead Steam Trap.

STEAM HEAT WITH GAS AS FUEL.

I have a house, 20x100, on a grade; one-half measures nine feet to the ridge and the other half eleven feet to the ridge. The average height on the sides is two feet. The beds are nearly all solid. The house is used for lettuce and bedding plants. I want to heat it with a ten horse-power return flue boiler, placing the pipes on the sides and under the ridge. The boiler will be placed at the

DEAR SIR:—If the Morehead Return Trap cost ten times what you ask for it, it would be cheap when time, labor and cost of repairs are considered, in comparison with the steam pump I had installed before getting your Trap. I cannot praise it too highly and I recommend it to everyone who talks steam. Yours, lower end, to heat with steam. How many runs of 2-inch pipe will I need?

The house is well built, but not protected in any way. The temperature in this part of Ohio seldom goes lower than 10 or 12 degrees below zero. There are gas wells on all sides of the house, so we intend to try it as fuel, which will save a night fireman.

O. E. K.

If, as I understand your problem, it is to heat a house 20x100 with steam, using gas for fuel, I would say, use 1 1/4-inch pipes for returns and a 2-inch pipe for the main flow or riser only. A single 2-inch flow from the boiler to the far end of the house, under the ridge, with twelve 1 1/4-inch returns, should give a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees under zero weather. The small pipes are easier to install, and a little cheaper than large pipe for a given amount of radiation.

PIPING FOR A HOTBED.

We have a boiler which is used to generate steam to run an engine. Please advise how many runs of pipe and what size it would take to heat a hotbed six feet wide, the beds being in a protected place very near the boiler. Should we use some of the pipe under the ground and some above, and how would we get the condensation back to the boiler? We want to grow a general line of plants.

V. N.

I regret to say that I cannot answer your question unless you state the length of the hotbed and give more information regarding the relation of the proposed hotbed to the boiler in question. It is likely that the water can only be returned to the boiler by means of a feed pump, injector or return steam trap.

L. C. C.

EXPANSION OF COIL JOINTS.

Will you be kind enough to give me information as to the best way of finishing the ends of valved steam pipe coils, so that, when only a part of the coil is in use, the expansion of those in use will not be continually breaking the joints? I have the coils lying flat under the side benches. All are returns, as I use overhead flows. Say there are four pipes in a coil and I wish to use one, two or three; the chances are that the expansion will cause either the tee or the nipple forming the manifold to break. I have some just arranged in straight runs, with drainage coming out at one side, and other coils I have arranged with short bends, the whole coil being 150 feet long, but with no better results.

I only seem to have trouble with those lying flat. With those hanging one Important

A Capitol Boiler in the greenhouse assures two mighty important results:

First, less coal.

Second, in case of accident, quick repairs can be made without interfering with the continued heating of the house—this because of the Divided Sections.

I will attempt to explain how to overcome your trouble, which is an easy matter to remedy. Instead of the plans you have used, make all the returns under any one bench of the same length. Put an ell on each one and have it look sidewise instead of down; place a short nipple in the first ell and then place a second ell looking down on the short nipple. Make a manifold of pipe and

Condition of Business.

Business throughout the month of August was, in general, good, with a somewhat generous amount of funeral work, so our local retail dealers are offering no complaint. The wholesaler has found that demand for stock out of town is greater than the demand at home. First-class stock seems to sell more readily than the cheaper grades. Long-stemmed Brides and Maids are wholesaling at $5 per hundred.

All of the new stock is showing up well, and there is already a good supply of new carnations on the market. Asters still continue to be plentiful, while Beauties from young plants are fine, in both color and foliage.

Outdoor stock did not amount to a great deal this season, as the weather has been so hot and dry that everything looks dried up and baked. We can truthfully say that during the month of August we did not have a good rain.

Various Notes.

All of our delegates to the S. A. F. convention have returned and all say they had a grand time throughout their visit to the falls and other points. We all rejoice over the fact that our Cincinnati brethren were so fortunate as to obtain the convention for 1909.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook and daughter, Mabel, of New Orleans, La., came on to Dayton from the convention with Mrs. B. Hendrichs, and were her guests during last week. They left August 31, for a week's visit to Chicago, after which they will again call at Dayton.

George Collins, manager for Peter Reinberg, of Chicago, was the guest of George Bartholomew for a few days last week. While in the city, Mr. Collins visited several of the other florists and also Mr. Hearlin, of the National Military Home. On his way home Mr. Collins stopped at Newcastle, Ind., and visited the greenhouses there.

Mrs. E. Young spent a few days in Toledo, O., last week.

The Miami Floral Co. has just had a new 8-inch well drilled, fifty feet in depth. Their greenhouses are in fine condition and prospects are most promising for the coming season.

Alice Le Baron and Florence Culver, who for two weeks were the guests of Ruby Bartholomew, returned August 27 to their home in Chicago.

Condition of Business.

Business throughout the month of August was, in general, good, with a somewhat generous amount of funeral work, so our local retail dealers are offering no complaint. The wholesaler has found that demand for stock out of town is greater than the demand at home. First-class stock seems to sell more readily than the cheaper grades. Long-stemmed Brides and Maids are wholesaling at $5 per hundred.

All of the new stock is showing up well, and there is already a good supply of new carnations on the market. Asters still continue to be plentiful, while Beauties from young plants are fine, in both color and foliage.

Outdoor stock did not amount to a great deal this season, as the weather has been so hot and dry that everything looks dried up and baked. We can truthfully say that during the month of August we did not have a good rain.

Various Notes.

All of our delegates to the S. A. F. convention have returned and all say they had a grand time throughout their visit to the falls and other points. We all rejoice over the fact that our Cincinnati brethren were so fortunate as to obtain the convention for 1909.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook and daughter, Mabel, of New Orleans, La., came on to Dayton from the convention with Mrs. B. Hendrichs, and were her guests during last week. They left August 31, for a week's visit to Chicago, after which they will again call at Dayton.

George Collins, manager for Peter Reinberg, of Chicago, was the guest of George Bartholomew for a few days last week. While in the city, Mr. Collins visited several of the other florists and also Mr. Hearlin, of the National Military Home. On his way home Mr. Collins stopped at Newcastle, Ind., and visited the greenhouses there.

Mrs. E. Young spent a few days in Toledo, O., last week.

The Miami Floral Co. has just had a new 5-inch well drilled, fifty feet in depth. Their greenhouses are in fine condition and prospects are most promising for the coming season.

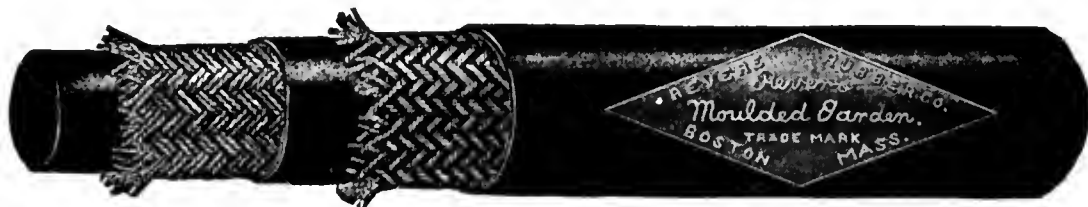

Alice Le Baron and Florence Culver, who for two weeks were the guests of Ruby Bartholomew, returned August 27 to their home in Chicago.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

September 1, with delightfully cool weather, makes everyone hopeful, notwithstanding that there has been but little doing during August. In the wholesale houses some fine Beauties, asters, carnations, lilies and gladioli are to be seen, all much better than usual at this season of the year. However, it does not tempt the retailer much unless he has an order in hand.

Various Notes.

The retail stores all look their best after their summer cleaning, with improvements and changes in most of them. The help are all back from vacations and all anxious to get busy.

The last of the convention visitors have returned, some having gone as far as Alexandria Bay and Montreal, Canada. All report that they had a good time and were well pleased with the convention.

The McCallum Co., the new commission house, opens this week, ready for business. The boys are all well known in this city and expect to get their share of what is going.

The Pittsburgh Florists' Exchange has its shippers in line for the coming season and is already laying the ropes for a successful year.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., the oldest commission house in the city, is celebrating its tenth anniversary this week. During the decade it has built up a business that compares favorably with any in this country.

Miss McKinley, of Randolph & McClements, is spending a month at St. Paul, Minn.

The Zieger Co. is erecting a new house, for palms, etc., in the rear of the store room.

Joseph Jones has the contract for decorating the exposition, which opens this week.

J. H. Orth, of McKeesport, is finishing the erection of two 100-foot houses for general stock.

J. D. Inlay and T. F. Spangler, park commissioners of Zanesville, O., were inspecting our parks last week.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

None of us has any kick coming as to the business during August. For a summer month, business held out well, and some in the trade have told me that their business during last month exceeded that of any August for several years back. That does not sound much like hard times in the florists' trade.

Trade last week was not any too rushing, but every now and then there was a little spurt which cleaned out the market well. Roses were in greatest supply and they sold fairly well, but there was not enough demand to clean them up and, as a consequence, a good many found their way into the dump, and the price obtained for those that did sell was not very good. Carnations of anything like good quality sell well, but most of those coming in are poor and, if not sold at once, are sound asleep the next morning. Good asters have been scarce and the better grades have brought good prices. White in any grade sold well, but in the poorer qualities it was hard to move other colors. Some cosmos, the first of the season, arrived last week and it was good in quality. It sold well as a novelty. Lilies are scarce and good property. Tuberose spikes are in demand and bring a good price. We are well supplied with green goods of all kinds.

It is good to see the wagon-loads of trunks which are being hauled to the suburbs every day now. They mean the return of the flower buyers, and their presence will soon be felt in the flower trade. The mum will announce the opening of the fall trade and it will now be but a few weeks till we are in the midst of another season's business. Let us hope that it will be a good one, as everything now indicates it will be.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Florists' Society will be held in the club room Saturday, September 12, at 8 p. m. We hope that the members will make an extra effort to be present, as from now on the advice and assistance of each one of them will be especially needed. We have secured the S. A. F. convention for 1909. We have promised them a good convention and a good time. It is now up to us to make good. You can rest assured that we will do so.

J. T. Conger and wife left September 1 for an extended trip through the middle west.

The Garland Concrete Bench

The above is a cross section view of bench, showing the perfect drainage

THE sections can be made during the dull season and set up in a hurry. The outfit is inexpensive and it is the cheapest and best bench on the market. It can be made at about the same cost as a good wooden bench. It can be used with cement posts, wood stringers, cement or tile bottoms and wood or cement sides. Complete mold outfits sold, or the mold for any part. Every florist should have at least one of these post molds, as the cement posts are cheaper than cedar and easier set, no hole being required; they are everlasting and can be used for complete cement construction if in the first place used with the balance of the bench made of wood. One of our largest growers has adopted this bench construction and now has 600 barrels of cement on the place to be used in this construction this winter.

For prices of the molds or other information, address

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

BUD ON DUCKHAM.

What is the time to take the bud on William Duckham chrysanthemums in order to get the best flowers?

W. W. D.

The proper bud to take on William Duckham is a crown bud taken from August 18 to 30. If a bud is taken much earlier the flower is short-petaled and the individual petals are green at the tips, making the flower unattractive. If the later bud is taken, in September, while the petal is large and of good color, the flower comes hollow in the center and in some cases drops its petals. If W. W. D. gets it as near as possible to the dates I have mentioned he will have little cause to complain of the size or finish of this variety.

MILDEW AND RUST.

Please tell me what the enclosed chrysanthemum leaves are affected with and the remedy. I have several varieties that are more or less affected with the same disease, though none so badly as the Mrs. Cunningham and Harrison Dick, from which the enclosed leaves were taken. I used a soil prepared last fall, consisting of two parts soil and one part decayed cow manure. When I gave the last shift I added a 6-inch pot of fine bone meal to a barrowful of soil. They are now in 7-inch pots. I feed them once a week with liquid manure and give free ventilation, with top, sides and doors open. E. L. B.

These plants are affected with chrysanthemum mildew and also show signs of being attacked with rust. For mildew, dust the leaves with flowers of sulphur and air-slaked lime, finely sifted, in equal proportions.

Rust is encouraged by a cold, damp atmosphere and makes rapid advances as the nights begin to cool. The following mixture usually is effective: Copper carbonate, one ounce; ammonia, enough to dissolve the copper; water, nine gallons.

The copper carbonate is best dissolved in large bottles, where it will keep without spoiling and should be diluted with water as required. RIBES.

CHRYSANTHEMUM GOLDEN GLOW

The writer, having some experience with this August flowering mum, feels that too much cannot be said in its favor, except with regard to its name. The name brings to the vision that very common flower, rudbeckia, yet in size and beauty and foliage there is no comparison, as the mum has a 5½-inch flower, of beautifully incurved form and bright, clean golden yellow in color.

This variety can easily be brought into flower by the middle of August and from then till the middle of September and likely later. The store man should hail the coming of this mum with much interest, as at the present time there is scarcely anything else good on the market. Though asters are yet on the market, the customer should be excused if he is tiring of asters for the season, while good roses are scarce and quickly perishable, and carnations are poor.

It is a boon to the flower-loving and plant-buying public and should give the plant grower an immense home demand for young plants in April and May for outdoor planting, as the flower will mature before hard frost almost anywhere in this country. J. H. MYERS.

TAKING THE BUD.

Will you please tell me if there is any set rule for taking the bud on mums? It so happens that I have several varieties that are new to me and I am at a loss as to which bud should be taken. The stock is for the Boston market.

M. O.

There is no set rule for bud selection; you cannot treat all varieties alike. The commercial grower does not figure much on the earliest buds, excepting on the earliest varieties, but the exhibitor, who wants the very largest flowers, must, in the majority of cases, get the crown bud from the middle of August onward.

That novices may understand the difference between what are known as crown buds and terminal buds, it might be said that crowns are the buds that form in the earlier stages of the growth of the plant, the terminal bud being the terminus, or finish of the growth. The difference between the buds may be known in several ways, the time they are pronounced being one way. The earliest buds are usually crowns.

The crown bud always has two or more growth shoots that appear around it, and these shoots, if not removed, will grow on, and, taking the nourishment from the bud, will render the latter useless. If the date is not too early, the surrounding shoots can be rubbed off and then the bud will develop properly.

The terminal bud is surrounded by a cluster of smaller buds, and appears in September or later, according to the time the plants are set out. The flower produced from a terminal bud is never so large as from crown buds. In some cases it is more highly colored, some of the pink varieties showing this condition.

"How early can I take a crown bud with safety?" is often asked. This will vary with varieties and localities. In New Jersey it is safe after August 20 to take buds of any varieties except a few late kinds. Some growers in the middle west say they can do little with crown buds taken in August, as the air is much drier and the buds shrivel instead of swelling. At any rate, by the second week in September your buds should be selected.

It is a good way, particularly where one is trying new kinds, to tie a label on certain plants, giving the time of taking the bud. This gives a certain record when the plant flowers as to which buds produced best results and is valuable as a guide for future years. It is impossible to carry such data in one's head from year to year, and a notebook is something almost every successful mum grower carries.

A WHITE THAT SHOWS COLOR.

I have some chrysanthemums which were bought for White Jerome Jones. They are not white. I would call them a very nice apricot and have no fault to find with the color, but they come single, or semi-double at the best, all with a very distinct yellow eye. Can you tell me why?

Last year Maynell had a very weak neck. Just as the bloom was getting about right it would hang over. The stem close to the bloom seemed to be hollow and soft. I think they were a little that way the year before, but am sure I had them right the first year or two. W. C.

The variety White Jerome Jones has a tendency to show color if grown very cool after the buds show color. If the temperature is kept at 60 degrees or over, this trait will disappear.

They are also inclined to come single or semi-double, but this fault can also be remedied by judicious feeding. With the liquid food from manure, add nitrate of potash in the proportion of one pound to fifty gallons of water.

Weak necks are frequently caused by want of ventilation; sometimes, also, by too much humus in the soil and too much water. Varieties so inclined require special treatment in these respects.

RIBES.

FEEDING CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Now that the manuring of the plant is so much better understood than formerly, we hear less of loss through the damping off of the florets. This mishap may be caused by other things, but the chief cause is too much artificial manure applied to the soil, such as sulphate of ammonia and nitrate of soda, which injures the finer roots, causes a check, and lowers the health of the plants. I have noticed that a sudden burst of sunshine following dull days will also set up damping of the florets, which is most marked on excessively manured plants. Chrysanthemums in the open air, where artificial manures are not applied and the blooms merely required for house decoration, are seldom injured in this manner. Some growers think that the mishap is due to lack of air, and they forthwith throw open the ventilators and doors, causing a draught. Instead of doing that, I would advise the use of the hot water pipes, ventilating freely in the front of the house, and only a little at the top. It is not the quantity of air so much as the manner in which it is applied that has to be studied.—E. Molyneux, in Gardeners' Chronicle.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

SCROLL AND RIBBON.

This illustration of a funeral design by C. H. Fox, Columbia avenue and Twenty-first street, Philadelphia, is the same as given two weeks ago, with the addition of a bow of white satin ribbon, lettered, and shows the position preferred by Mr. Fox for this final touch. It frequently happens that lettered ribbon is required and the aim when using it should be to avoid conventionality as much as possible. The use of caladium leaves is a novel feature. PHIL.

THE IOWA PANEL.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a design made at Lozier's, Des Moines, Ia., on the order of the state of Iowa for the funeral of Senator Wm. B. Allison. The original was a panel seven feet long and four feet wide. The panel in the center contained 1,500 white carnations. The lettering "Iowa" was put in with red carnations. The two opposite corners carried cattleyas. The upper left-hand corner was of auratum lilies and lilies of the valley and the right-hand corner had a large bow of 7-inch satin ribbon, with lettering to indicate Allison's years of service for the state of Iowa, which is visible in the illustration. The design had a heavy border of pond lilies and was well backed up with maidenhair ferns throughout. Lozier's received a letter from Governor Cummins and his staff, saying that the emblem was without doubt the most elegant piece of work ever purchased by the state, and surpassed anything else shown at the Allison funeral. They made this same design for President McKinley's funeral.

SOME WINDOWS.

Miniature Fields of Daisies.

Daisies are saucy and independent. They are seen in great numbers under fences, peeping through pickets and around the corners. They have fine cut foliage and almost make their own light. The prettiest effect for them would be to show a field. This is a picture which can be used often, and it would pay to have a hundred or two of short, narrow, flat-bottomed receptacles, about two inches deep, that will hold one or two stems. Place these about as close together as they will stand. Cover with green moss over the top and sides. Fill the vases with the fewest number possible of the daisies. If the flowers lop down too much, pack the stems in an upright position with a little sphagnum in each vase.

The coölest imagination can see a daisy field and no long experience would be required to turn around and make one in a window with this simple equipment: On a stump, set anywhere but in the center of the window, invert any straw garden hat and fill it with daisies, being careful (?) to see that some fall out over the brim and down over the stump to the ground. Set a plant or two of fine cut foliage or ferns against the base of the stump, and you have your daisy field with its touch of life.

Cornflowers in White Baskets.

Cornflowers work in well in a number of those white enamel baskets which did not sell. Have as many different sizes and shapes of this one kind of basket as are obtainable. Set some on the floor of the window. Suspend some, and have several elevated on birch bark pedestals. It will sell the cornflowers and the baskets, too. It might be well to use a few double white centaureas in a mass of the blue.

When some of the wild flowers are to be had, try cat-tails and gladioli together. While cat-tails are usually in fine favor for decorative purposes, you will find that a goodly proportion of your customers do not want to try gladioli, claiming that they are stiff and difficult to arrange. Make a gladiolus window and show them how to use gladioli gracefully.

A Graceful Gladiolus Window.

The one thing to avoid in handling these beautiful flowers is massing them. Narrow necked crockery jugs or umbrella stands are appropriate receptacles for gladioli. Make a latticework panel of the cat-tails across the back of the window and have several jars set at irregular intervals in the window. Two or three cat-tails pulled through the handle of the jars or scattered on the floor will help to relieve any tendency to stiffness which may creep into your arrangements. One vase could be made up of crimson and crimson purple and their pinks, another of the blotched buff and crimson so often seen, and another of the crimson pink alone. Keep the scarlets and their pinks out for another day.

Coreopsis and Goldenrod.

Cat-tails and goldenrod or coreopsis or Golden Glow make a charming combination. Coreopsis makes rich masses against a brown background of old pine needles or oak leaves. Make a big rush or rice-straw basket of coreopsis or Golden Glow and run a group of cat-tails, with the foliage, up one side of the handle, but do not attempt to train to the shape of the handle. To keep them in this position, tie with a bow of their own foliage.

To use cat-tails with goldenrod, make a round sheaf of the latter, bind in with cat-tail leaves and catch a few in the sheaf. Stand the sheaf in a prominent place. Close by make another of the same, more loosely arranged and thrown down on one side. This also would like a brown setting.

Wheat Sheaves and Gladioli.

Here is another plan for a gladiolus or phlox display. Cut up several sheaves of wheat and scatter loosely with some coarse fern leaves, closely enough to cover the floor. Shopworn or broken sheaves will serve this purpose well enough. Fill several tall vases with water and set at wide intervals about the window. Fill the vases with a few fine stalks of gladioli or phlox. Around each vase build a shock of large wheat sheaves. Plenty of open space should be allowed between the shocks. Only a very large window will accommodate more than two or three shocks. This will prove to be a seasonable display scheme, and the wheat is a fine setting for the brilliant colors of either gladioli or phlox. Some patience will be required to construct a good shock with the stiff sheaves, but the results will justify the effort.

Asters and Mums.

In the way of special design windows for an aster or chrysanthemum show, try this: Make a soft, thick background of several layers of white cheesecloth laid in waves. Over this lay another covering of wide Nile green chiffon or veiling. Here and there under the chiffon lay an aster or mum of the prevailing color, and as a centerpiece set in a large vase or basket of asters with a smart bow of the green.

Here is another mum window: Get a few cornstalks from which the ears have been removed and the husks left. Where the ear was, place a big mum and readjust the husks like a ruching around the flower, up close under the head. Put in tall vases sparsely and display with a tapestry across the back of the window. Make the tapestry of strings of grains of red and yellow corn. This setting is fine for red, yellow or white mums, but not for the heliotrope pinks.

Alluring Features.

Having a casual observer stop and look for a moment at the window is hardly enough to bring him in. Have some little, attractive feature which shall interest him enough to induce him to follow it to its source. This feature, whatever it is, must not only be a leader to draw the eye on, but must be one of those happy expedients, neither dispensable nor essential to the design, but still a link in the chain of temptation. Let it be something curious, something quaint, like a bit of ribbon or an odd piece of pottery, a streak of unusual foliage, a garland of flowers, or some coquettish touch or suggestion of life.

For example, suppose you are displaying a field of phlox after the manner of the daisy field just described. You want some little feature added. A hatful of phlox would not be at all taking, like the daisy hat, so you cut a number of quarter-yard lengths of chiffon, some plain, some embroidered, all in colors which harmonize with the color of the phlox. Of each of these make a little butterfly bow, either with wings up as when the butterfly alights, or with wings extended as in flight. On one side of the window make a line of them hovering over and alighting on the flowers. Group quite a cluster of them together, and then gradually thin the line and scatter the butterflies till they disappear in the rear. Those supposed to be flying can be suspended with No. 36 wire, which is practically invisible except in strong sunlight. They will stop and study your window. Then the battle is half won.

THE READERS' CORNER.

A Question of Priority.

In an article which appeared on page 13 of the REVIEW of August 27, Peter Crowe states that he believes himself to be the oldest rose grower in the United States, with perhaps one exception, John N. May. Mr. Crowe has been forty-two years in the rose business, he says. I think I can beat him a little. I went into business in this town—Atchison, Kan.—in March, 1865, so I will be forty-four years in the business next March. I am not a large grower, but I have grown more or less roses every year since then.

R. J. GROVES.

CALAIS, ME.—J. R. Sederquest, undertaker, has gone into the retail florists' business.

SOIL AND THE FLORIST

STERILIZATION OF SOILS.

An Important Problem.

One of the most important problems with which the grower has to deal is that of subduing his enemies. So far as the general mastery of the situation is concerned, the florist has no complaint to make. Indeed, there is no line of agriculture, using the term in its broadest sense, in which the operator comes as near being the real master of the situation as in farming under glass. If the soil is too rich or too poor or too light or too heavy, he can add sand, plant food or leaf-mold and prepare it according to his own formula. If his plants need water, he does not need to watch the clouds or bombard the skies, but simply open the faucet. The temperature and other important factors are equally under his control.

However, with all of this, he still has a number of important problems to deal with in the control of certain insects and diseases. Among the latter, none are more difficult to handle, perhaps, than those which infest the soil.

A Promising Crop Ruined.

Some five years ago we had growing in the greenhouse of the Iowa State College a crop of winter tomatoes and cucumbers, consisting of the American and English forcing varieties. About the middle of the forcing season, when the heaviest set of fruit was ripening, the plants suddenly began to wilt and show signs of disorder. They bore a good leaf system; the foliage appeared to be green and healthy; the plants had done quite well up to this time and had a good set of fruit, and everything seemed to be favorable. The soil was moist and in good condition, which made the wilting all the more puzzling. The soil was washed away and the root system of some of the plants examined. It was found that they were badly infested with a club root growth somewhat like the club root of the cabbage. An examination under a microscope revealed the presence of a small, microscopic worm, known as the nematode, which was the real cause of the trouble.

Ravages of the Nematode.

This animal really belongs to the worm family and is, strictly speaking, not an insect. It is closely related to the vinegar eel, the trichina of pork, the tapeworm, liver fluke and other creatures of bad repute.

Its work is confined to the root system and the most serious injury comes, not in a direct way, but through its interference with the absorptive function of the roots; hence the wilting of the leaves. As a result of their presence, the plant becomes weakened and enfeebled and is therefore liable to become affected with other diseases.

The range of plants affected by the nematode is quite large, and in our own experience the cucumber seemed to be affected worst and the tomato next. Lettuce was not troubled. A number of the flowering plants, such as roses and carnations, are also inhabited by it.

Methods of Treatment.

As to methods of treatment, which is perhaps the point of special interest to you, we first tried impregnating the soil with certain chemicals, such as nitrate of soda, lime, etc. These had but little effect and were not to be relied upon. We then tried a method recommended by Professor Stone, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, namely, that of steaming the soil. The term "sterilization," which has been widely used to designate this process, is really a misnomer. The term "steaming the soil" would really be more appropriate. In applying the treatment, the soil is placed in a tank, through which a number of steam pipes are run. These pipes are perforated every foot or less. After the tank is filled with soil and covered, a pressure of about fifty pounds of steam is turned into it for a period of about two hours. Through the accumulation of heat, a temperature of from 180 to 200 degrees is secured. This excessive heat destroys the eggs and live nematodes.

Other Benefits from Sterilization.

There are also certain other benefits accruing from this treatment. Eggs of plant lice and other insects are destroyed, as are also weed seeds. Certain spores of fungous diseases, such as mildew, are also killed, though it should be noted in this connection that the temperature is not sufficient to destroy the spores of some of the worst diseases the florist has to deal with, such as damping off.

The treatment also has a good influence in rendering more available the plant food of the soil. Heat accelerates chemical action, and it has been noticed that when soil has been treated the growth is more vigorous, due to the fact that the organic matter in the soil is more rapidly broken down and rendered available as plant food.

Construction of the Tank.

The cost of a tank such as we are using is as follows:

2 3/4 barrels cement	$ 4.95
2 1/4 yards gravel55
4 16-foot planks	3.85
23 feet 46-inch woven wire fencing.....	.65
135 feet 1 1/2-inch wrought iron pipe.....	14.85
3 feet 2-inch wrought iron pipe.....	.60
6 1 1/2-inch tee connections66
2 1 1/2-inch tee connections22
1 1 1/2-inch tee connection.....	.22
17 1 1/2-inch plugs85
9 2-inch caps90
	$28.30

The figures are for a tank 14x4x4 feet.

The tank we are at present using is made of wood, though in the sketch on page 7 I have suggested the use of concrete instead. The top may be covered with hotbed sashes, as the work is done during the summer, when these are idle. It will be noticed that on one side plank are used. This is quite a convenience, as they may be lifted and the soil shoveled out from below. A concrete tank of this kind may be readily constructed by anyone. Ordinarily, woven wire fencing is used for reinforcing the walls and 3/4-inch piping at the corners for reinforcement.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamens.

Do not be in a hurry about housing the cyclamens now growing in the cold-frames. They will be better where they are until the end of September, and if you cannot give them a good, light position, it will be just as well to hold them in the frames until the early mums are out of the way. The sun's rays, while strong, are steadily declining and there will be no need to run shades over the plants before 10 o'clock in the morning, and they should be removed by 3:30 in the afternoon. The evening sprayings will have been discontinued for some time. The increasingly heavy night dews are, however, of decided benefit to the plants. They now grow fast and seem to revel in the cooler atmospheric conditions.

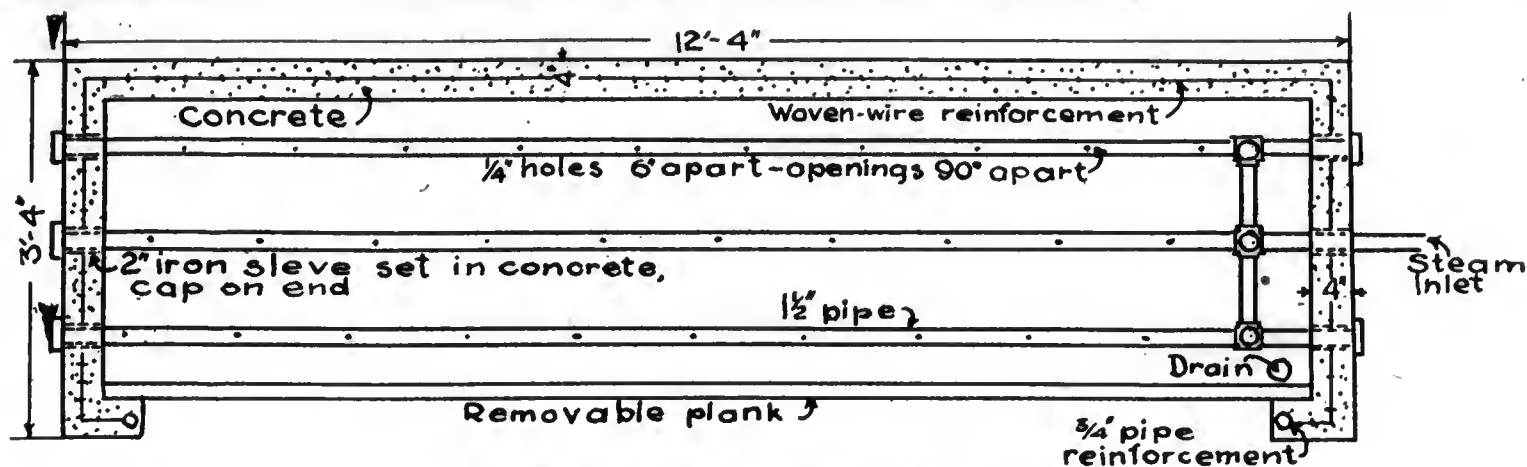

Do not forget to keep some fresh tobacco stems packed between the pots, to keep thrips away. Water now with greater care. Do not give any unless the soil is fairly dry. Plants should now go into their flowering pots as soon as possible. As growth is now rather rapid, the pots will require spacing once a week. Do not allow the leaves to touch if you want good, shapely plants.

If seeds for next season's plants are not yet sown, no time should be lost in getting them started. Those sown early in August are now germinating nicely. Watering must be done carefully. On no account let the soil become dry and do not let the sun's rays strike the little seedlings.

Primulas.

Treatment such as is recommended for cyclamens will also suit primulas to a nicety. The plants should all be in their blooming pots by this time, and careful watering, especially of the Chinese section, is needed to preserve good foliage. The red varieties are useful at Christmas. To get them in bloom at this rather early season, it is necessary to house the plants about the middle of September, giving them a light but shaded position in a house kept at from 45 to 50 degrees at night in winter. A shelf well up to the glass will grow nice, stocky plants, if bench space is at a premium.

Lorraine Begonias.

Have you noted how amazingly the Lorraine begonias have grown since the cooler nights arrived? It seems as though they doubled in size in a couple of weeks, and are putting on a color and displaying a vigor such as the plantsman loves to see. While this begonia opens its flowers better in a moderately warm house, it should not be subjected to any forcing process. The plants will soon need a trifle of fire heat on cold nights, but 50 degrees at night is ample for a few weeks. Staking and tying up the shoots must not be neglected. Leave the stakes, which should be as thin and unobtrusive as possible, long enough to allow of an additional tie a little later. Where you want the plants to bloom early, pinching out of tops and flower buds can be discontinued. Late propagated plants can be grown several together in 6-inch pans. There is still time to make neat little specimens of these. To secure first-class specimens, hang them up or place near the glass.

Rambler Roses.

Those ramblers wanted for early forcing must now have the water supply gradually reduced. The plants cannot be in too sunny a spot. Every shoot should get all possible sunlight, to properly harden it. This is impossible if they have been allowed to ramble over the ground. The superiority of pot-grown plants over lifted stock, especially for early forcing, admits of no question. It is an easy matter to pick out the plants in a store, when in bloom, which have been grown under each system.

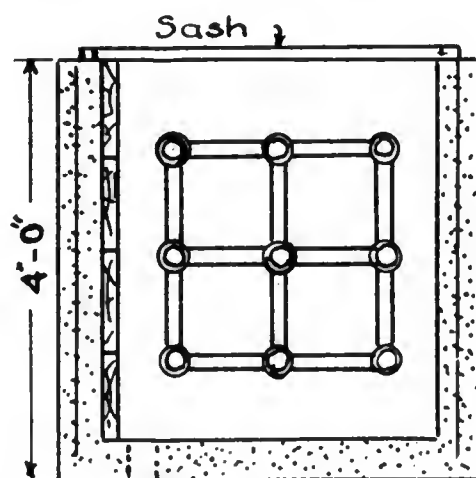

Boston Ferns.

Boston ferns have made surprising growth in the benches this season. The work of potting up the largest plants should be attended to at once. Clean out your bench as soon as possible, so that it can be utilized for some other crop. Remember that if you want stocky plants of nephrolepis you must not shade them heavily, but merely break the sun's direct rays. N. Amerpohlii promises to sell well the coming season, while those who have N. Todeaoides are favorably impressed with it. N. exaltata Bostoniensis is still more grown than any other variety. N. Whitmani is probably the second in popularity, taking the country over. N. superbissima will also be in it with the leaders. N. Scottii seems, somehow, to be losing popularity. "Too much like a poorly grown Boston fern," is the comment often heard.

Gardenias.

Pinching the gardenia shoots must now be discontinued where you are looking for a midwinter crop of blooms. The benches are now becoming well filled with roots. Use extreme care in watering. On no consideration let the soil become soggy, or yellowing of the foliage and serious loss of buds will be the inevitable results. Plants grown outdoors or in frames, in pots, should be gotten under cover when the night temperatures start descending to 40 degrees or below it. A temperature of 65 to 70 degrees at night will be found all right for the benched stock.

Chrysanthemums.

Work among the mums is now steadily increasing. Many of the earlier varieties now have the buds well advanced and thinned out. Do not let up on the tying. An hour or two a day at it will accomplish wonders. Remove all the lower leaves which are dead or badly decayed, and if not already done, spread a light mulching of well decayed manure over the surface of the benches. Late planted stock will not require any mulch just now. It will appreciate it early in October. Black fly must be allowed no quarter. Fumigate once a week, always selecting cool nights for this operation, and look out for the hairy caterpillars, which will speedily ruin the appearance of a batch of plants.

Pot plants will require manure water once in four days. Those in benches will require some after the buds are taken. We like to alternate the doses, cow manure followed by nitrate of soda, sheep manure and dried blood being the rotation. Any syringing should now be completed in the early part of the day, so that the foliage will be quite dry before nightfall.

Scented Geraniums.

If a good stock of cuttings of scented geraniums has not yet been inserted, the present is a good time to get them in. Growth outdoors is rank and the cuttings will be found soft and sappy. Trim them off closely and let some of the sap dry out of them before placing in the sand.

In the case of lemon-scented verbenas, the cuttings rubbed off with a heel and given a little bottom heat root the best. One or two old plants should always be lifted, stored in a cool, light pit and kept dry over winter. Plenty of good cuttings will be obtained from these in early spring.

Show Pelargoniums.

The cut back plants of show pelargoniums will have broken nicely by this time and can be shaken out and repotted. Place them in smaller sized pots than they flowered in and you will find that they make much better headway than in the larger size. Keep on the dry side for a time after potting, but spray over lightly once or twice a day. Pot off cuttings put in at the time the plants were pruned back. These will do in cold-frames yet for a few weeks. If placed in a greenhouse, let it be a cool one and give them a light bench.

Ericas.

Ericas have made excellent growth in the open ground and are now thickly clustered with flower buds. The roots of heaths are all fine and hair-like and, in lifting, should be broken as little as possible. Pick away the outer soil of the balls with a sharp pointed stick, so that they will not require large pots. These and all hard-wooded stock need firm potting. It will not suffice to stand the ball in a pot, throw in some compost, press it down with fingers and thumbs, smooth the surface and expect it to thrive. The soil must be rammed in thoroughly with a stick. The firmer you get it, the better will the plants do. A compost containing fibrous loam, plenty of leaf-mold and a good mixture of sharp sand suits all hard-wooded plants. It is better not to use any manure, even if well decayed. After potting, stand outdoors in a sunny spot. Spray occasionally after giving a soaking watering, and the plants will speedily start to establish themselves. Do not house until frost threatens.

Crotons and Dracaenas.

Crotons and dracaenas, which have been growing in frames through the summer, are just being moved into one of the houses. The nights are getting rather cool for them. There can be no question about frames growing much better plants than houses during the hot months. The growth that little spring struck cuttings have made is really surprising and the color is splendid. In order to keep the foliage a good color, see that the glass has only a light shade. If mealy bug infests any of the plants, use a spray nozzle on the hose and blow it off. For fumigating, nothing equals hydrocyanic acid gas. It is as safe as nicotine and far more death-dealing for pests. We have never had any foliage plants injured when it is used with care, and it certainly saves an immense amount of sponging.

Biennials and Perennials.

The seedling pansies should now be sufficiently large to transplant. If you are intending to winter them outdoors, choose land with a good slope, where there will be no danger of water standing. If you only grow a few hundreds, it is much better to prick them out in coldframes, leaving the sashes off until the ground is frozen solid. The same holds good of double daisies, myosotis, Silene pendula and any other plants of doubtful hardiness. Keep batches of the earlier transplanted perennials and biennials freely cultivated. They grow rapidly now and their growth is all the faster for a constant tickling of the earth with hoe or cultivator.

LAWRENCE, MASS.—The employees of Thornton Bros. were tendered a pleasant outing at Lake Cochickewick Wednesday afternoon, August 19. The outing was held at the camp owned by the hosts. This was the second outing given by Messrs. Thornton to their employees. The first was held early in the summer, at their farm in New Hampshire.

be kept picked off now, while it can be done conveniently. Later, when your supports are in place and the plants have made considerable growth, it will mean much more work and mutilation of the plants. Picking such leaves off now may mean freedom from disease next winter.

A. F. J. BAUR.

PREPARING CARNATION SOIL.

Can a black clay soil in which good farm crops were grown—wheat last season—be used successfully for filling the benches for carnation growing, or would it pay to get sod soil which is not on the place? What is a good way to prepare an acre or so of land for sod soil for the benches, and how long should it lie before using it?

C. B.

There is no reason why you should not use the soil you describe with fair success. If it has been growing good farm crops it is likely to be in good mechanical condition, except that it may lack somewhat in fertility, according to our standard in greenhouse soil. This can be remedied to some extent if you have on hand some good cattle manure, about two-thirds rotted, and also a moderate addition of sheep manure. You can make it so that the plants will take hold nicely and you can add to the fertility during the winter by moderate feeding as it may be needed. For this season, with no soil prepared, I would certainly prefer this soil to a fresh lot of sod soil.

Every grower knows that a good, heavy sod, on a soil of proper texture for the crop to be grown, and properly prepared, makes the best soil obtainable. The reasons are that soil of that kind will be full of vegetable fiber, which is rich in plant food. Grass is a very non-exhaustive crop, and soil which has been in grass for many years is likely to contain its natural amount of each of the plant foods, nitrogen and potash.

If you wish to work on your soil for

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Removing the Shade.

If your plants have been on the benches long enough to take hold in the new soil, there should be no shade whatever over them from now on. During July and August we like just a little shade over them, to break the fierce rays of the sun, and we think it does the plants good. But after September 1, if the rains have not washed the glass clean, what is left on should be rubbed off with a brush.

From now on the sun is hot only for a few hours during midday, if at all, and it will do the plants good, rather than harm, inasmuch as it will help to mature the growth, which at this stage is apt to come soft, on account of an abundance of soluble plant food contained in the new soil. To keep out the sun and light will not only aggravate the softness, but it will also cause the plants to draw up and grow spindling and weak. The effects of such a condition will show all through the winter in weak stems and thin-petaled and small flowers.

During these fall months, when the sun still has some strength and the light is good, your whole attention should be directed toward getting a sturdy, robust and well matured growth. You must start the winter with your plants in that condition if you want them to hold up through December, January and February in good shape. Then is when your good or bad judgment and the care given during the fall assert themselves and come to the surface.

Mulching and Watering.

The mulch you put on the beds, or should put on soon, will keep the soil evenly moist with much less watering. This will result in a more even and steady growth. It does not necessarily mean that you will keep the soil moister, but merely more evenly moist. The fact is, you can run the soil slightly drier, because you have it under better control, there being less danger of its getting too dry and no necessity for flooding the beds to prevent drying out. You must keep close watch on it, however, by frequent examination here and there. You can tell nothing by the appearance of the mulch, so you must dig into the soil with the hand.

Watering should be confined to the soil now, and the plants kept dry except when you syringe them. If the plants are clean, this syringing may be done every second day, less or more frequently, as may seem best to suit the case, in your judgment.

Dead leaves and diseased leaves should several seasons ahead, I think you can do no better than to sow the bulk of it in blue grass and red clover. Plow it as deep as possible first and then sow the seed broadcast. Early in September is a good time to do this. If you can use the hay you can cut it next summer, which will do the grass and clover good by making it stool more. In two years you ought to have a good, heavy sod, and quite rich. The clover will gather nitrogen while the grass is filling the soil with fiber.

In the fall you will plow as much of it as you think you will need the next summer and leave it rough through the winter. During the winter a good coat of manure is added, which is plowed in early in the spring. This time you will pulverize it thoroughly with a disk harrow. About every three or four weeks it is to be plowed again, until it is taken into the houses. Soil handled in this way makes the finest material for planting in that you can possibly get. Some growers would prefer to plow the sod and stack it up in layers with manure in the fall or early spring, to be turned over several times before filling in the benches. Either plan is good, but I think the first one the better.

Your next year's soil you must handle a little differently. I would sow on it, after a deep plowing, a mixture of rye and clover, to be plowed under and pulverized early in the spring. A coat of manure can be added just before plowing in the spring. Let the rye get eight to ten inches high before you plow it under, and then plow and pulverize every three or four weeks, as recommended above. A. F. J. B.

BEST WHITE AND PINK.

Would you be so kind as to inform me as to the best white carnation, also the two best pink sorts, for cut flowers, in the latitude of Ohio? G. R. H.

In white carnations the two varieties which will be most widely grown during the next few years are White Perfection and White Enchantress. Both are fine in every way and are likely to hold the lead for some years. Our preference runs toward White Perfection, because the blooms bruise less easily. White Enchantress can be more depended on to make good plants in the field under adverse conditions. I would advise you to try both varieties.

In rose-pink you will likely do best with Rose-pink Enchantress, but Winsor has become very popular with many large growers. It has the same characteristics as Mrs. Lawson and, if these characteristics are not objectionable to you, it may suit you better. The blooms handle better than Rose-pink Enchantress, as they do not bruise so easily.

In the cerise shade of pink, Aristocrat and Pink Imperial are both fine and each has its followers. We prefer the latter somewhat, because it holds its color better and makes a better plant. In shell pink, Enchantress stands practically alone among the standard varieties.

You will make no mistake on any of the foregoing varieties. All have been tried and found true. I have not mentioned any of last spring's novelties, because a whole season's test is necessary to demonstrate their worth. We expect an unusually large per cent of them to make good, however, judging by present indications. A. F. J. B.

Jung's American Beauty Aster.

JUNG'S ASTERS.

"I have a new aster growing on my seed farm here," writes J. W. Jung, of Randolph, Wis., "which differs from all other varieties in width and substance of petals, some petals being almost a half inch wide. As the color is almost the same as the American Beauty rose, I have decided to call it American Beauty. It is a medium early bloomer. The plants are strong growers, from twenty-five to thirty inches tall, well supplied with heavy foliage, and it is a prolific bloomer. I have plants now which are carrying from eight to twelve flowers, each of which measures over four inches across. The one used for the photograph was five inches across. The stems are twelve to eighteen inches long. The petals are of unusually heavy substance and will last a long time without wilting.

"My strain of the Comet originally came from Burpee, in a mixture, and during all the time that I have had it, it has been improved each year by selection. Unlike other strains, the plants attain a height of twenty-four inches and bear the blooms on stems from eighteen to twenty-four inches long.

"These are undoubtedly two of the finest strains of asters in cultivation, as I have purchased aster seed from our leading aster specialists and from European growers, but have as yet found nothing that will equal these strains."

SULPHUR WATER FOR PLANTS.

Will water from a sulphur well be likely to do injury to plants if used for watering? We are here, at times, rather short of water, but have a sulphur well available. J. K.

When natural springs are so strongly impregnated with foreign substances as to have a decided taste and a peculiar operation in physical economy, they are called mineral springs.

Under the heading of sulphur waters are such as contain sulphureted hydrogen, which are distinguishable by the peculiar, fetid smell of that gas and by yielding a brown precipitate, with the salts of lead or silver.

Such waters are in nowise suitable for watering greenhouse stock and are still more unsuitable for syringing. By exposing such waters in shallow reservoirs for twenty-four or thirty-six hours and then drawing off the water from the surface, the bad effects of the sulphureted hydrogen would in a measure be eliminated. EUROPEAN NOTES.

Walter Park, of Brooklyn Cottage, Langholm, Scotland, died recently, at the age of 86. He emigrated from Scotland to America over sixty years ago, and as a florist in Brooklyn, it is said, he made a fortune in twenty years, and then returned to Langholm, where for a time he took an active part in the public affairs of the town.

A great international horticultural exhibition will be held in Berlin, Germany, April 2 to 13, 1909. The preliminary program has just been issued. It has been determined that the exhibits of horticultural products shall not be placed in ordinary rows or groups, but an attempt will be made "to show by small, self-contained, impressive and decorative pictures what striking paintings, views and landscapes" can result from a harmonious combination of horticulture and art. The schedule contains 725 competitive classes, and all branches of horticulture are well represented therein. W. Swoboda, head of the firm of J. C. Schmidt, Berlin, is president of the council, and O. Beyrodt, of orchid fame, is one of the vice-presidents. All inquiries should be addressed to the General Secretary's Office, Invalidenstrasse, 42, Berlin, N. 4, Germany. BEE.

CHAMBERSBURG, PA.—Wm. B. Reed was reported in the last part of August to be seriously ill.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market is still flooded, but improvement in quality is marked, and with the cooler weather retail New York will soon begin to feel the rising of the business tide. I anticipate a good winter.

Beauty, Bride, Maid and Killarney are improving every day, and some of the specials are quite up to the best fall average. The short stems and small buds bring but little, often as low as 25 cents per hundred. The growers recognize the necessity of this, however, and look upon any returns from the inferior grades of the first crop as so much saved. As one of them at Chatham told me last week, "They cost us nothing for coal these days and what we get out of them, over cost of sending to market, is velvet."

Carnations begin to look natural, Enchantress especially, and longer stems and larger heads are evident. A few novelties are also arriving.

There has been no frost, and the outdoor supply is beyond all computation. Hydrangea is especially perfect and abundant, and of grand asters and gladioli there seems to be no end; $1.50 is top for gladioli and $3 for asters. From these prices down to 25 cents per hundred is a mighty fall, but they make it.

There will be some violets soon, but it would be better to wait; premature shipments give the season a bad start.

Notes From Jersey.

Emil Savoy, of Secaucus, is an expert fern grower and stands by the old Boston as his most profitable variety. He has installed a new Johnston boiler.

Mr. Baldwin, of Secaucus, is making a business trip in New England. Mr. Carrillo is holding the fort in his absence, and preparing for his annual trip to Columbia for a six months' collecting tour. The cut orchids from this house are sold by James McManus.

One of the prettiest sights at Secaucus on the trolley route to Rutherford, N. J., is O. V. Zangen's two acres of Salvia Zurich and Fireball compacta, a veritable lake of fire. Some of the plants are three to four feet in diameter.

The Julius Roehrs Co. is busy, with greenhouses and nursery. Worthy of special notice is a grand stock of the silver spruce. The display of immense bay trees in avenues in the decorative approach to this establishment is striking; among them are some of the largest specimens ever imported. The houses are crowded with palms, ferns, etc. Forty houses are devoted to orchids. In a few weeks there will be an abundance of bloom. The whole plant gives evidence of faith in the future.

L. C. Bobbink, of Bobbink & Atkins, is still in Europe. F. L. Atkins says this has been their busiest and best season.

William G. Badgley, of Chatham, is a busy man, with his two big ranges, his own and the Rand greenhouses, his rubber hose, his fertilizer company, and his plant oil industry, and he seems to be making a success of all of them. Bride, Maid and Killarney occupy 40,000 square feet, and he can grow them and win prizes. Robert Phlubert is his foreman and A. J. Guttman is at the selling end in New York.

The REVIEW has often advocated the beautifying of the country florist's home. If you ever go to Chatham, call at David Falconer's and see his cozy nook, as he calls it, with its vine-clad porches, its well arranged flower beds, its four acres and 30,000 square feet of glass devoted to Bride and Maid; which J. K. Allen has been selling these many years. All the houses are modern. Gradually, cement benches are being installed. One house, 34x175, was erected last year at a cost of $8,000. The whole thing is an inspiration. Every florist, on a smaller or larger scale, can develop just such a place.

Right near is the veteran, Frank L. Moore. At the base of the hill on which Mr. Moore's big house is built stretches out a wonderful vista of twenty miles of hill and dale. This is the home of Bridesmaid, you remember; the original plant was discovered here sixteen years ago. The parent plant is still here and yielding its share of flowers. Twenty-five thousand square feet are devoted to Richmond, Liberty, Maid and Bride, and orchids, a new departure that promises well. Harry Stollery is in charge and has been for many years. His brothers are in business in Chicago; one of them has been in England this summer, and starts this week for home. Mr. Moore has 500 Bonnaillon chrysanthemums which he intends to use as prize-winners at the Madison show, he says. The rest he expects to sell at Moore, Hentz & Nash's commission headquarters at 50 cents apiece. He did it before, and Mr. Stollery says they are better than ever this year.

The Chatham Rose Co. has eight houses devoted to Richmond, Maid and Bride in equal quantities. William Fitzpatrick, formerly with A. J. Guttman, of Summit, is in charge.

Ernest Lawyer, formerly with L. M. Noe, has the two places formerly owned by George Nicholas and Behre, and is a neighbor of Mr. Badgley's. Mr. Noe is on the shelf at present with an injured knee cap.

Various Notes.

Frank H. Traendly welcomed a son into his family September 9 and is busy receiving congratulations.

The regular monthly meeting of the Plant Growers' Association was held on the evening of September 1 at the St. Denis hotel, New York.

The Yokohama Nursery Co., in referring to the calla lily stock it is importing, says that the bulbs are entirely free from disease. The last year before shipment they are grown in loam. Because of the long shipment, a decrease in size is noticeable, but the bulbs are sounder thereby.

The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers gives its clam bake Tuesday, September 15, at Duer's, Whitestone pavilion. Secretary Siebrecht says the committee has arranged for prize bowling for ladies and gentlemen, prize shooting, dancing and many other sports and will make this the most pleasant day ever passed by this or any other association connected with the trade. That is going some. The price of tickets is $3.50. The affair is of a family character and the attendance is by invitation. The special train will leave the Long Island depot at Long Island City at 10:33 a. m. This organization is a strong one and now includes nearly every plant grower of prominence in this section.

Do not forget Monday, September 14—next Monday—the first meeting of the New York Florists' Club for the season, and an important night, with its convention reminiscences, its plans for future growth, and its lecture by Benjamin Hammond, of Fishkill, on "School Gardens." If you are a member of the club, you should be there, and if you are not a member, you ought to be.

The Greater New York Florists' Association has opened its new store at 162 Livingston street, Brooklyn, with George W. Crawbuck as manager. The association occupies the whole building, with offices on the second floor. Mr. Crawbuck says the venture has been a success from the start and the business is growing every day. The location is an excellent one and Brooklyn now rejoices in three wholesale centers.

Millang Bros. have disposed of the mirrors and other retail luxuries left in their store by the former tenant, and now have an orthodox, practical wholesale store, as convenient and roomy as any in the block.

The blinds are down and the doors locked at 39 West Twenty-eighth street, where Frank S. Hicks held forth.

The auction season opens at Elliott's, 42 Vesey street, Tuesday, September 22, with a lot of decorative plants from local growers and two carloads of palms from the Biltmore Nursery Co.

Warren Feller, of Rhinebeck, J. K. Allen's grower, is a violet shipper and does not grow orchids as stated last week.

Nathan M. Neff, formerly in business at Philadelphia, and later with W. H. Donohoe up to the bankruptcy episode, is now with M. A. Bowe.

Henry Fitzroy, formerly gardener for Boss Tweed, the Tammany chieftain, died at Stamford, Conn., September 4, at the age of 81 years.

The violet market loses one of its veterans in George T. Schuneman, of Baldwin, L. I. Mr. Schuneman is developing a nursery business, making privet his specialty, and cosmos and peonies, instead of carnations and violets.

Following in the footsteps of Thomas Young, Jr., and of Fleischman in closing the store at Fifth avenue and Forty-third street, Thorley has closed his branch at Eighty-sixth street and Columbus avenue.

September 22 to 24, at the Berkeley lyceum, 19 West Forty-fourth street, the American Institute's seventy-seventh annual exhibition and dahlia show will be held, and in addition to fruits and vegetables, prizes are offered for displays of orchids, gladioli, annuals, palms, ferns and the latest floral novelties.

McKenzie Westwood, of Mengham & Westwood, 422 Columbus avenue, has returned from a ten weeks' outing at his old home in Canada.

Ambrose Cleary, of the Cleary Horticultural Co., returned September 4, on the Cedric, from Europe. Many importations of nursery stock will follow, and the auctions will begin without delay.

August Kratt is now foreman for the Hinode Florist Co. Miss Mills, who is the owner of this establishment, says that stock of all kinds, including the Japanese novelties, never looked finer. Four houses are devoted to mums.

M. Jordan, of the J. M. Keller Co., returned last week from his trip to Holland and Belgium. He is importing many plant novelties. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

HENRY C. OSTERTAG.

Henry C. Ostertag is head of the well known firm of Ostertag Bros., in the florists' business for many years in St. Louis, and classed with the largest firms in that city. Mr. Ostertag has a happy faculty of making friends wherever he goes. His hustling qualities caused his election as a three-year trustee of the St. Louis Florists' Club, and he says he will use all his spare time to promote the interests of the club and keep it right at the top, where it has been for the last twenty-one years. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A trifling improvement is noticeable in cut flower conditions. There is still an abundance of stock arriving, but it is moving a little better. Carnations are more plentiful, but sell quite well. Roses are improving in quality with the cooler weather and their numbers are appreciably reduced. Sweet peas continue to come in, but are now of poor quality. Dahlias are seen on several stands, but are not in much demand. They might be much more used in design work with advantage. Asters are still abundant, with little variation in price. Gladioli continue poor sellers; even fine white spikes bring low prices. Liliun speciosum album and roseum from outdoors are now plentiful, but the flowers are inferior to those produced under glass. Of longiflorum there is a fair supply. For lily of the valley demand is a little better, due to a crop of September weddings. While there have been light frosts in some places, these have not seriously affected the outdoor flowers. Among these latter some cosmos is seen, a reminder of fall, and tuberose, always a rather slow selling flower. Plant growers report a little better inquiry for palms and other foliage subjects.

Club Field Day.

Magnificent weather favored the Gardeners' and Florists' Club members for their field day to the New England Nurseries, Bedford, September 5. About seventy-five journeyed by special car from Arlington Heights, arriving in Bedford about 2:30. Some others made the trip by steam cars, nearly 100 being present in all. On arrival of the special car the herbaceous perennial section was first inspected. Over ten acres are closely planted with these flowers in about 1,000 species and varieties. The perennial phloxes were somewhat on the wane, owing to the forward season, but attracted much favorable attention. Many of the visitors took note of the seedlings, one named Annie Cook, of a beautiful pink shade with a perfect truss, being admired by all. Other late flowering hardy plants, such as liatris, rudbeckias, boltonias, heleniums, chrysanthemums, helianthus, physotegia and others, made a good showing.

The big blocks of evergreens next claimed attention. These are a leading specialty with the New England Nurseries. Abies concolor six to ten feet high, of perfect form and color, were specially good, also Abies pungens Kosteriana, Abies balsamea, Picea alba, Pinus Strobus and many others. The large acreage of deciduous trees and shrubs looked well and had stood the early summer drought well, thanks to persistent cultivation. The new storage warehouse, constructed of stone, and the largest of its kind in New England, was much admired, also the new greenhouses erected for propagating purposes. The nursery has exceptional shipping facilities, due to the fact that the Boston & Maine railroad passes through the nurseries, all freight being loaded directly on the cars without any hauling. Cleanliness was noticeable in every part of the 200 acres of stock, weeds being allowed no quarter.

After the tour of inspection lunch was served on the lawn, speeches made and the return journey made to Boston, which was reached about 6:30, all voting the outing a most pleasurable and instructive one.

A. E. Robinson, for fourteen years with the W. & T. Smith Co., Geneva, N. Y., with which the New England Nurseries are connected, who is manager at Bedford, and John Kirkegaard, sales manager, showed the visitors every courtesy. Although it is only eighteen months that have elapsed since the new company, of which W. T. Smith is president and A. E. Robinson treasurer, took control, the nurseries have been transformed and promise to be in the near future among the leaders in the United States.

Various Notes.

G. E. Baldwin, of Carrillo & Baldwin, was a visitor last week. He reported excellent business at the Niagara convention and in Canada. In the latter country he found a growing interest in orchids.

George W. Butterworth is home from his European trip and saw many fine sights in Great Britain and Holland, some of which he hopes to tell the club about at a future meeting.

The many friends of Emil Johansson, for a number of years in charge of J. E. Rothwell's noted orchid collection, and formerly at Lincoln park, Chicago, were saddened to hear that he was removed to Danvers Insane Asylum last week and hope that his confinement there will be but temporary.

A. Leuthy arrived home September 1 per S. S. La Gascoyne from Havre after a rough passage. He reports large size kentias as scarce in Europe. At his Roslindale establishment the stock of palms araucarias, ficus, asparagus, etc., is looking well and there is an improving demand for plants.

J. E. Rothwell, of Brookline, has dis posed of his well-known collection of orchids in its entirety to E. B. Dane, of Chestnut Hill. This big addition will make Mr. Dane's collection the finest in America, beyond question.

The sympathy of many friends goes out to T. D. Hatfield, superintendent of the well-known Hunnewell estate in Wellesley, in the death of his wife last week, after a brief illness.

A tour of the Boston park system last week was of particular interest, owing to the wealth of fruit on many of the trees and shrubs. The cratægus are simply magnificent, while many of the viburnums and pyrus were fine. Viburnum Opulus and V. cassinoides were specially good. Sorbus nigra, chokeberry, was heavily fruited. Buddleia variabilis, one of Veitch's introductions from western China, with long racemes of fragrant, lilac-colored flowers, was attractive.

There was a big show of children's exhibits from both home and school gardens at Horticultural hall September 5 and 6, which filled the main exhibition hall to overflowing. The large attendance of the public continues to attest the popularity of these weekly shows.

The general autumn plant show at Horticultural hall occurs September 11 to 13. In cut flowers, dahlias will be the feature and a big show of these is assured. There are also numerous classes for fruits and vegetables.

Remember the club meeting September 15. Several members have promised to give vacation experiences in Europe, Niagara Falls and elsewhere. There will be some interesting exhibits and a rousing attendance is certain.

A. H. Hews & Co. are having a good fall demand for flower pots and pans and are being kept busy at present at their big North Cambridge plant.

A new Japanese garden is an interesting feature on the Larz Anderson estate in Brookline. In the greenhouses the better. All stock has made a remarkable growth.

Mrs. E. M. Wood, widow of E. M. Wood, at one time president of the S. A. F. and proprietor of the well-known Waban Conservatories, presided over by Alex. Montgomery, died September 3, after a short illness.

The accidental death of J. D. Galvin is reported in this week's obituary column.

Welch Bros. are receiving some fine blooms of the new rose, My Maryland, from S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I.

Secretary Fuld anticipates the finest dahlia show ever held in America, when the New England Dahlia Society will hold its first exhibition in Tremont temple, Boston, September 17 to 19.

W. N. CRAIG.

BOATING ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

The accompanying illustration is from a snapshot taken of the motor-boat Delmar, owned by Ed Kalisch, of the Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., St. Louis, upon the occasion of their recent fishing trip up the Mississippi and Illinois rivers. The launch is of twenty horse-power and two weeks were consumed in the trip. The illustration shows a day's breakfast fresh from the water.

DETROIT.

The Market.

All summer along it has been asters and roses, and vice versa, but before long carnations will again be in the swim. Some good stock is already arriving. Good White Enchantress were seen last week, also Winsor and Rose-pink Enchantress. The commission houses have been loaded down all week with asters of only fair quality. Good stock has been readily sold at good prices.

Just for variety, B. Schroeter had some ing of the season was held September 2. President Brown has his plans pretty well laid out for the coming year and, after making a few remarks about some of the evils in the local retail trade which he hopes to stamp out, he got right down to business. Anyone having anything special to say or to sell is requested to write same on the blackboard, where it will be seen by all. Mr. Brown also thought it would be desirable if each member were provided with the club's membership list in printed form.

Vice-president M. Bloy addressed the club. The name of J. A. Bissinger, who recently expressed a desire to join the Detroit boys, was received for membership and will be acted upon at the next meeting.

Some time was given over to convention talk. Among the members who spoke were Wm. Dilger, A. Pochelon, Charles Plumb, E. A. Scribner and W. B. Browne. S. S. Skidelsky, who was present, also spoke. Albert Pochelon was thanked for the satisfactory manner in which he handled the transportation affairs. J. F. Sullivan gave a short talk about the Wm. Scott memorial. This idea met with the approval of all. It was voted that the club's by-laws be changed so as to exempt the secretary and treasurer from dues. Committees appointed by the new president were as follows: Auditing committee, Albert Pochelon, Albert Sylvester and Hugo Schroeter; essay committee, J. F. Sullivan, Wm. Dilger and C. H. Maynard; entertainment and exhibition committee, George E. Browne, M. Bloy, Robert Rahaley, Fred Miesel, Chas. Plumb and August Von Boeselager.

Michigan State Fair.

This is the fourth year of the Michigan State Fair on the permanent grounds just north of the Detroit city limits. Upon alighting from the car the visitor is confronted by a large display of all kinds of shrubbery, artistically arranged. These are the exhibits of various nurserymen. This year they comprise the exhibits of Greening Bros., Ilgenfritz & Sons Co., E. Ferrand & Son and W. W. Essex. Flower beds are the exhibits of local florists.

Competition in the horticultural department is not keen this year. Not that the florists are not interested in the fair, but those who have tried have found it does not pay to make extensive exhibits. The park board of Detroit has made a large exhibit of plants this year, and the plants, being of such a variety as no commercial house would have, are attracting much attention. Robert Unger, of Belle Isle park, judged the plant exhibits, while Frank Holznagle was judge of the flower exhibits.

Prizes were awarded as follows:

Best design in cut flowers, Pontiac Floral Co. first, with an arch with open book; Frank Holznagle second, with a wreath; Detroit Floral Co. third, with a lyre; Mrs. F. Rush fourth, with a cross.

Pontiac Floral Co. first for twenty-five pink roses, for twenty-five red roses, and for assortment carnations.

Frank Holznagle first for assortment of roses, Pontiac Floral Co. second.

Plants were shown by Thomas Gowanlock and Mrs. Fred Rush.

Flower beds were planted on the grounds by Detroit Floral Co., as follows: Two beds cannas, bed salvia, bed coleus and snapdragon, two beds asters, bed Nutt geranium; by Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, about five beds and borders of Gladolus Mrs. Francis Kling; by I. E. Ilgenfritz Son's Co., several beds of cannas.

Various Notes.

For several years David Beyer, gardener at Grosse Pointe, has been experimenting with grafting tomatoes on the egg plant, being finally successful. He now has a good stock of a tomato known roses, carnations, mums, Lorraine begonias and other crops are looking well. Some extra fine Dendrobium Phalaenopsis were in flower, while Mr. Finlayson has as usual an excellent batch of calanthes.

The Bay State Nurseries are having a good fall demand for trees and shrubs. Their extensive nurseries never looked fine yellow mums in his window last week, but the demand is lacking.

Many weddings are announced for the latter part of the month, and for October, so some work is in view.

Club Meeting.

What might be termed the first meet-as Roosevelt, so named two years ago when the first fruits were sent to the White House and pronounced by the president as being the best flavored he ever ate. The tomatoes attain a large size, averaging over one pound, and some reaching two and one-quarter pounds. A plant will bear about sixty to seventy pounds of fruit. The seeds are distributed as in the egg plant, and while the tomato is juicy, the juice is so divided that it is retained in the fruit upon cutting same open.

The Baker-Vawter people recently installed their loose leaf book-keeping system at Schroeter's. It is no trouble now to get statements out on the first day of the month.

S. S. Skidelsky spent several days in Detroit. He is well satisfied with the outlook for the winter.

After the last regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, a special meeting was called. At this meeting the club heartily indorsed Philip Breitmeyer for mayor on the Republican ticket. H. S.

OBITUARY.

Robert H. Walker.

Robert Henry Walker, one of the oldest residents of South Scituate, R. I., died at his home August 22, after nearly a year's illness. He was born in Scituate September 12, 1837, and at the age of 21 he went to Newport, where he became a florist and he continued in that business for many years after he returned to his native town. He held several offices in the town and was prominent among the Odd Fellows, American Mechanics and Knights of Maccabees. Four years ago Mr. Walker sustained injuries by being thrown from a carriage in a runaway. It is believed that the injuries received at that time hastened his death.

Joseph D. Galvin.

Joseph Dalvea Galvin, of Boston, a brother of Thomas F. Galvin, of that city, was instantly killed on the evening of September 8 in a runaway accident at Mount Bowdoin station, Dorchester, his horse being frightened by a train.

Mr. Galvin was 55 years of age and a member of the Thomas F. Galvin corporation. He was in charge of the Boyles-ton street store and was well known and esteemed in the trade. Some years of his life had been spent in the ranching business in Mexico, and he was a noted Spanish scholar. He never had married.

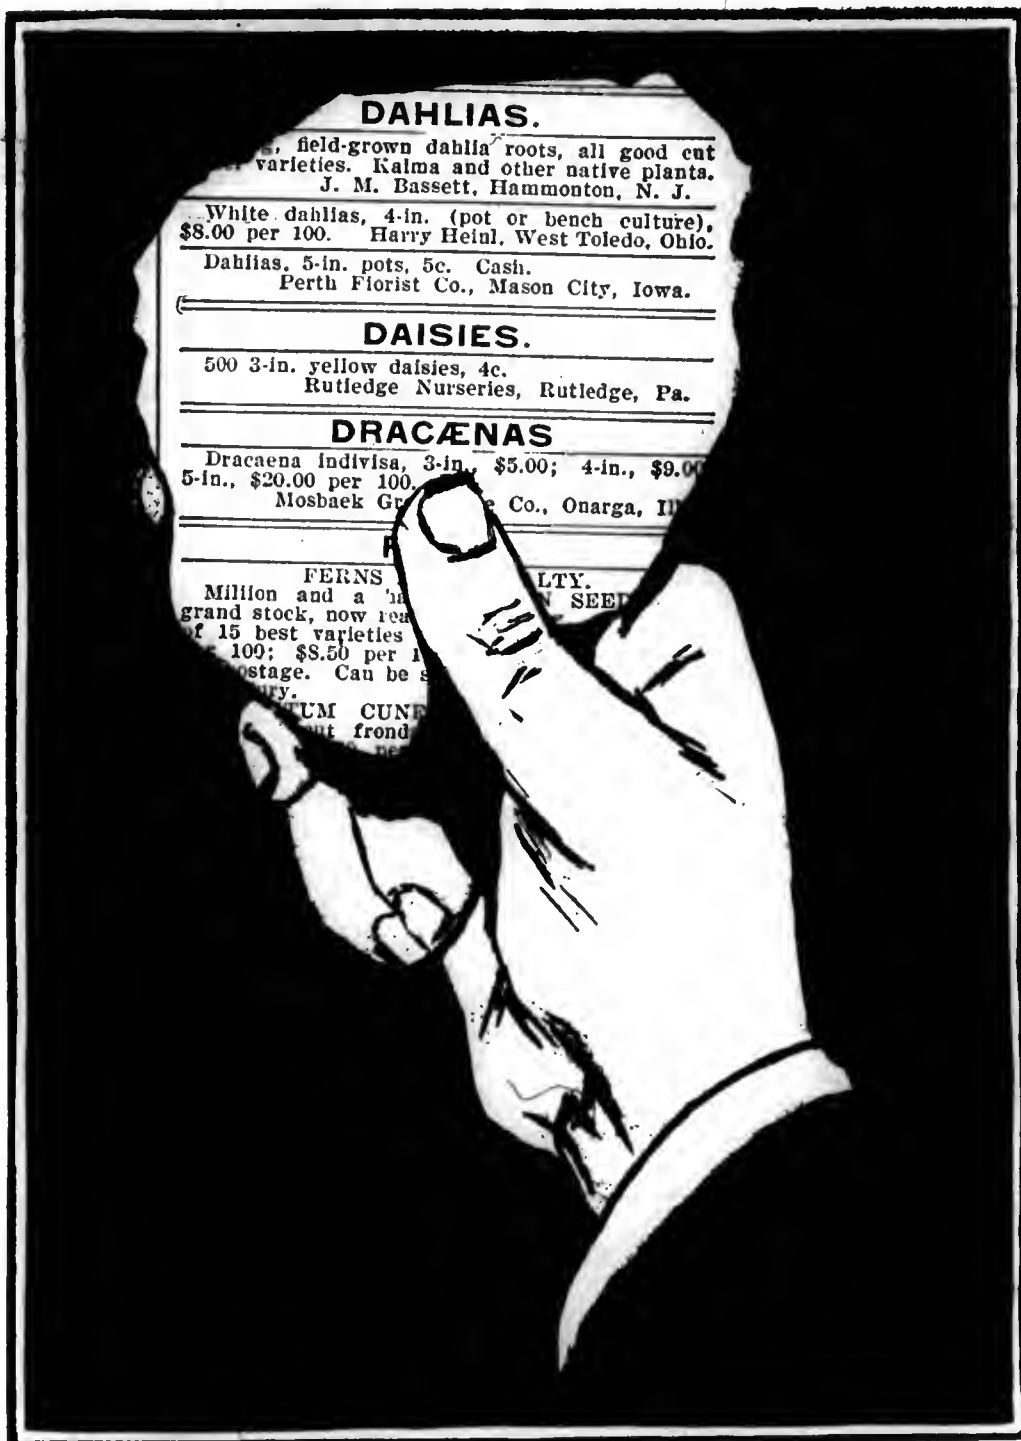

KIRKWOOD, MO.

Among the Growers.

Your correspondent, in company with W. J. Pilcher, made the rounds of some of the growers in Kirkwood, September 10. We found them all busy, housing their carnations and violets and finishing the general repairs for winter. There will be quite an increase in carnations, violets and sweet peas the coming season, as some of them have built additions to their plants this summer. Many have discarded old sorts and are growing more of the best commercial varieties. The violet crop looks better than for several seasons. Many more sweet peas will be grown.

The first place visited was that of Hugo Gross, where there is a splendid range of 25,000 feet of glass. Mr. Gross was busy filling up his solid beds with carnations and violets. He will grow Enchantress, Boston Market, White Enchantress and Bountiful, one large house of sweet peas and two of violets. Mr. Gross will soon have much assistance from his son, Henry. Though only five years old, he was wheeling in soil in a small barrow made especially for him.

The next visit was at Frank Vennemann's, where there is 10,000 feet of glass. Mr. Vennemann was not at home, but his nephew, Ben, who is deaf and dumb, showed us through—by hand language, with which Mr. Pilcher is familiar. They are growing mostly Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Boston Market, Sarah Hill and Crusader. They use the Heim carnation support. Violets and sweet peas are also grown here.

At A. P. Scheidegger's place we found Albert, like the others, busy filling up his houses, which comprise 7,000 feet of glass. He grows a nice lot of carnations, violets and sweet peas. Boston Market and Enchantress are his best.

The next stop was at the plant of Fred W. Ude, Jr., where we found everything in readiness for the winter season. This place contains 16,000 feet of glass. The carnation plants are of the finest. Mr. Ude says Nelson Fisher is his best, followed by Red Fisher, Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress and Boston Market. Violet plants, too, are looking well. This is one of the best kept places in Kirkwood, as well as one of the oldest. Mr. Ude's two sons are a great help to him.

At George Hartman's place they were planting 5,000 violets, also a fine lot of carnations, mostly Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and Boston Market. This place consists of 10,000 feet of glass and is well kept. His brother's place, next door, is made up of 4,000 feet of glass. August Hartman grows carnations, violets and sweet peas. All the above places grow their stock in solid benches.

At W. J. Pilcher's there are two of the largest and highest houses in Kirkwood. Mr. Pilcher is still cutting a fine lot of carnations from his old plants. He has also a fine house of violets. This is a new place and Mr. Pilcher will add each summer a house or two. They also work about ten acres of ground and are harvesting 500 bushels of onions.

There are many other fine places in Kirkwood, but the hour was late and we will have to leave them for the next visit. All the stock that is grown at these places is handled by the St. Louis wholesalers, Messrs. Smith, Berning, Kuehn and Angermueller.

STATE FLOWER SHOW.

The Illinois State Fair opens September 25 and closes October 2. The Board of Agriculture has made ample provision for a handsome display of plants and flowers by an appropriation of $2,500 for premiums. More than 100,000 people a day visit this department during the fair season. It seems to us that this is a splendid opportunity for the florists to display their stock to the agricultural classes, who have taste for this class of refinement and money to gratify their tastes, as well as to the people of the towns outside of Chicago. More people see the flower exhibit at the fair in a day than at the annual flower show in the Coliseum in the whole season, yet growers heretofore have spent thousands of dollars exhibiting at the Coliseum to the hundreds spent at the State Fair. It would seem to us that the country outside of Chicago, which needs the information most, is a good field to exhibit to.

We hope the growers will turn out in a manner worthy of their vocation this year. Write to J. K. Dickirson, secretary, Springfield, immediately for premium list, if you have not done so already. All entries will positively close Wednesday, September 23. Make your entries with the secretary in time.

SCOTT MEMORIAL FUND.

At the Niagara Falls convention the undersigned were appointed a committee to receive funds for a memorial to the late William Scott. The movement met with hearty response and the committee is still receiving the checks of those who wish to participate. As it is desired to conclude the matter without delay, the committee hopes that all those who have not contributed to the fund and wish to do so, or who hold moneys collected for the fund, will at once forward their checks, payable to Fred Breitmeyer, the appointment of A. T. De La Mare and Edgar F. Winterston to fill vacancies on the committee of fifty caused by the death of Alexander Wallace and William Scott.

The executive committee, at its meeting at the Cataract house, Niagara Falls, August 20, approved of a call for an additional assessment of thirty per cent of the sums guaranteed, for which notices will be sent to guarantors at once. An appropriation for the advertising of the show was made upon an estimate submitted by Chairman George Asmus. Rule
1 was amended to require an entry fee of $1 for each entry in all classes where the first prize is $5 or more, except in the private gardeners' classes and except for foreign exhibitors. Those excused from an entry fee will be charged a $2 fine for failure to stage an entry.
Rule 3 was amended to make 11 a. m.
the last hour for staging plants and 12
m. for cut flowers.

On motion of S. S. Skidelsky, it was decided that trade tickets should be issued at a reduced rate and sold under restrictions imposed by the local management committee. Chairman Koenig, of the special features committee, reported and was requested to continue his good work in trying to provide drawing attractions for the show, an appropriation being made for his expenses.

On motion of W. N. Rudd, it was decided to allow no salary or expense account to judges at the national flower show, and that judges be appointed by the following: For Division A, Chrysanthemum Society of America; Division B, American Rose Society; Division C,
American Carnation Society; Division D,
New York Florists' Club; Division E, Illinois State Florists' Association; Division F, Horticultural Society of Chicago; Division G, Chicago Florists' Club, each of these societies to nominate three judges. J. H. BURDETT, Sec'y.

Fine Beauties

All Lengths of Stem

You can do a good business if you show our Beauties to your trade—fine, large buds, good color, splendid foliage, strong stems. We never handled better at this season of the year. Order some today.

Kaiserins

You will say our Kaiserins are the best White Roses you have handled this summer. A good supply in all lengths.

Asters

You will find our Fancy Asters the best you have seen this season. Order early, for they sell on sight.

Green Goods

You have known our house for years as "headquarters for Green Goods." For the fall decorations we can supply Asparagus and Smilax in any quantity. Long strings, and we can quote special prices on large lots. Also plenty of Sprenger, Adiantum, Farleyense and all outdoor greens.

All Other Stock in Season

Carnations

Again in good supply—fine flowers and stems getting longer every day. Try some, especially Enchantress, and you'll say they are good.

Valley

You need Valley every day and we can supply Fancy stock in any quantity, at any time.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The reopening of the public schools is sometimes spoken of as marking the date for a revival of business, and in most places schools opened this year one week later than usual, because Labor day fell September 7. But not much is expected of early September in this market and last week saw only fair business, while the current week opened quiet. The city trade still is light, but shipping business is active, as it has been, comparatively speaking, all summer; only orders are small. The difficulty at present is that the quality of much of the stock is not up to shipping requirements. Asters are decidedly poor, the majority of them, and many are simply unsalable at a time that the demand for good asters cannot be wholly satisfied. Roses, too, are nothing to brag about, but with a little more good weather will be all right, for there has been considerable improvement since last report.

The Beauty rose has become the most abundant item on the list and there is nothing which is of such general good quality. It seems that all the large growers are coming into crop with Beauty and it looks as though this would be the time for the buyers to get the public into the habit of using this rose. There should be steadily increasing supplies for some weeks and prices already are low, considering the quality of the goods, which is excellent. Killarney also is in fair shape, but not so much more abundant than other sorts as it was a short time ago. Bride and Maid are increasing in supply and improving in quality. Other roses are not greatly in evidence.

The dahlia has become one of the wholesalers' puzzles. Not many buyers will use this flower and when the receipts are at all heavy it accumulates and goes to waste. Gladioli continue to be the greatest glut, unless the worst one is of poor asters, and it is only America that sells at all well. Valley is in fair demand and there is some call for Easter lilies, as auratum and other outdoor lilies are about over.

Now and then some white chrysanthemums are seen and yellows are to be had for advance orders.

There is a better call for green goods, for the department stores are having their annual openings, or preparing for them.

Coatsworth's Fire.

A telegram called L. Coatsworth to New Castle, September 3, fire having destroyed the upper part of the boiler house. He found that about 100 feet each way on the north greenhouse also had been on fire and the rose plants in that house had suffered. The boilers had not been damaged, but the piping was injured and valves destroyed, making in all a loss close to $5,000, the amount of the insurance. Quick repairs were made on the damaged greenhouse and this week the heating plant will be in shape again. Mr. Coatsworth was at home over Sunday.

Milwaukee were advanced September 1 about 10 cents per hundred pounds; that is, where the rate was 40 cents it was made 50 cents, where 50 cents it became 60 cents. The advance is equal to twenty to twenty-five per cent and it hits a great many growers, who also are paying highly for the return of empties. The advance applies to all shipments that take the general merchandise rate.

It has been reported that an advance has been made in the rate on ferns from Massachusetts, but C. L. Chase, assistant to the general agent for the American, says the old special rate of $1.75 per 100 pounds is still in force and that special rates also are being granted from Michigan shipping points.

Luxemburgers Award Prizes.

There was a flower show in connection with the Luxemburger Schobermess at Evert's grove September 6 and 7. There was an enormous attendance and quite a few exhibits. The judges were John Zech, Sam Pearce and John Michaelson, the latter of Amling's.

Wieter Bros. exhibited Killarney, Richmond, Kaiserin, Beauty, Kate Moulton, Uncle John, Chatenay and Mrs. Jardine roses and staged some good carnations. They were given a first prize for carnations, for Beauty, for white and for pink roses, second for Killarney and Richmond.

Adam Zender exhibited Maid, Bride, Killarney and Richmond. He was first for Richmond and Killarney and second for white and pink roses.

Sinner Bros. staged asters and were awarded first prize.

Fischer Bros., Evanston, were first of three for decorative plants, and F. C. Fischer for hardy plants.

Peter Reinberg exhibited Mrs. Field, Beauty, Killarney and Richmond, not for competition.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its first meeting of the season at the Union hotel September 3, with a good attendance. An accounting was made for the San Francisco relief fund, by which it appeared that the Pacific Coast Horticultural Association had expended only $74.50 of the amount, $75.50 being returned to the Chicago club with the receipts for disbursements. The club still had $173 in the fund, which had never been forwarded to San Francisco. There is, therefore, a large percentage of refund for the contributors. The secretary was instructed to send each contributor a statement of the standing of the fund and will intimate that if the contributors wish to turn their share of the rebate into the club's treasury, it will be put to good use. A number have already directed that this disposal be made of their share.

The picnic committee reported total receipts of $549.85 and a profit of $179.47 from the recent outing, with about $30 worth of tickets still unaccounted for. The rose show committee confessed to the expenditure of $692.18, of which the club paid $130 after private subscription had made up a considerable sum. The financial success of the show was not at all what had been anticipated.

August Poehlmann was designated as chairman of the club's committee on entertainment for the national flower show, with authority to choose his own committee and to appoint sub-committees. An outline of the plans of the committee is requested at the next meeting.

The club voted to conduct the booth for the sale of flowers at the national flower show, if the concession is granted.

J. F. Aminann, A. T. Pyfer and George Asmus, the committee on state fair for the Illinois State Florists' Association, sent a communication relative to the opportunity for reaching a large body of the public by means of a good flower show at the fair, cut flowers to be staged September 29. Liberal premiums are offered and several of the large growers will enter.

Albert T. Hey, of Western Springs, was proposed for membership.

Refreshments were served, as usual.

Various Notes.

Each wholesaler suited his own pleasure in the matter of closing at noon Labor day—some did and some didn't. There was little doing.

Percy Jones says that Wm. Dittman's place at New Castle is all in Beauties this year, half the cut going to Pittsburg and half coming to Mr. Jones.

Frank Oechslein's people say that business is opening well, there being good call, both local and shipping, for ferns, araucarias, rubbers, etc., as well as primulas and cyclamen. A busy summer has been put in working up a larger stock than usual.

Chairman Poehlmann has called a meeting of the national flower show reception committee and the Florists' Club's entertainment committee for Friday evening, September 11, at the Union restaurant club room.

S. B. Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, has been calling on retailers. He says that if one may judge by their willingness to place orders for ribbon, a good season is anticipated.

The George Wittbold Co. has invested a good many thousands of dollars of accumulated profits this summer. At the home place the second new house is just being completed—a big structure for show purposes along the Halsted street side. Concrete walks and benches have been put in throughout the place. At Edgebrook several acres have been tiled and the nursery stock replanted in blocks. Much work also has been done in the houses and the boys believe they are now in shape to give undivided attention for some years to the growing of good stock. Fall shipping is said to have opened considerably ahead of last year, but the retail end has shown a falling off the last two months, compared to the business a year ago.

E. C. Amling says that the Albert Amling Co., at Maywood, this season has an entire house devoted to Adiantum Farleyense, the first, so far as Mr. Amling knows, to be grown in this section for the one purpose of supplying cut fronds for the wholesale market.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has added two items to the list of decorative greens, but says neither one is an instantaneous success. These are bunch laurel and rhododendron sprays. The rhododendron does not sell at all, and the laurel but slowly thus far. The retailers appear too accustomed to leucothoe to care to try any other article.

Muir's reports a season of intermittent good business, an occasional run of funeral work or a summer wedding serving to keep things going. The Forty-seventh street store had an especially busy time last week. John T. Muir has been taking his vacation a day at a time this year.

The Bohanon Floral Co. opened its new store September 3, at 29 Monroe street, opposite Mangel's and only a few steps from H. C. Rowe's. L. R. Bohanon is the manager and has had long experience in leading stores. He has fitted up a neat place.

The store of the Alpha Floral Co. has been in the hands of the decorators for the last week, getting ready for the fall season.

Fred Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, says he looks for good business this fall—better than last season.

Charles McCauley, of Washington, D. C., has arrived to take charge of the Riverbank Greenhouses, at Geneva. These are run under the name of R. C. Engledew & Co., but are really the property of a man named Fabyan, for whom Engledew is secretary. It is a case of the capitalist putting money into the florists' business. He has had several managers and the place is run down, but Mr. McCauley is capable of building it up. He was until recently secretary of the Wash-brought in quite a few orders for bouquets and cut flowers. The weather is still warm and it will need cooler weather to bring better business in our line.

As to cut stock at the wholesale market, there is plenty of everything in season and the blooms from young stock are beginning to look better each day. Beauty, Bride and Maid are of much better color and longer in stem. The same can be said of Killarney and Richmond. Carnations are still short in stem, but of good color. There are plenty of first-class asters in all colors, also tuberosa stalks. Good, long smilax is again in the market, also fine asparagus sprays in bunches.

Various Notes.

next opening will be the first Sunday in June.

A visit to the greenhouses of C. Young & Sons Co. September 6 was a treat. Under the 130,000 feet of glass there is everything that belongs to a first-class place of this kind. There are several fine houses of chrysanthemums, carnations and roses, also a fine bench of some 400 longiflorum giganteum which will soon be in bloom. This is one of the largest establishments of its kind west of the Mississippi river. While inspecting the grounds the scribe found another visitor, William C. Smith. After sampling the good things James Young had on ice, his pool room was visited and a match game was shot, James Young and W. C. Smith against W. C. Young and J. J. Beneke, in which the latter pair were defeated. In this way a most enjoyable afternoon was spent.

Christ Sanders has left the employ of W. C. Smith & Co. and has taken a position with H. G. Berning.

Fred C. Weber, Jr., has returned from his trip to Yellowstone park and other points of interest in the western states. His looks indicate that his trip was beneficial to his health.

The Michel Plant & Bulb Co. on Wednesday, September 9, held an auction at its greenhouses in order to dispose of a surplus of specimen ferns.

The nurserymen, Messrs. Weber, Sanders and Schuette, will have plenty of work on hand from now on, delivering and planting fall orders. Frank Weber says they are putting on an extra force of men for packing trees.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, visited the different florists in Kirkwood recently and speaks highly of their prospects for the winter season.

The Grimm & Gorley bowling team has entered the commercial bowling league and rolled its first match for the season Tuesday of last week, losing two out of the three games.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, was a visitor last week.

Mrs. H. C. Irish has returned to her city home, having spent the summer near Clayton.

Himmer Bros., at Meramec Highlands, report that they will have a big cut of chrysanthemums this fall, also plenty of California violets and sweet peas. Their stock is all sold to the west end stores.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will take up at its meeting this week the advisability of holding the club meetings every other month at night, so as to give the employees a chance to join and attend the meetings, the night meetings to consist of a business session, followed by a lunch, cigars and a bowling match. Should this be decided upon, the club should increase its membership to 200 by the end of the year. The six afternoon meetings would also be well attended. J. J. B.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The feature of the market this week is the large quantity of really magnificent asters that are coming to town. There are more good asters here today than I have ever seen at one time before. Unfortunately, there are too many to maintain prices, the demand not having increased in proportion to the supply. It seems probable that the height of the season has been reached and that next week will see a decline. Poor asters are still poor stock indeed. Gladioli are waning, there not being nearly so many in the market as a week ago. Dahlias are increasing in quantity, and by next week the fancy varieties will be in full swing.

Carnations are becoming a factor. The cooler weather has increased the size and brightened the color of the flowers, while the stems are perceptibly longer. The features of the rose market are some fine Kaiserin and Richmond. Mrs. Jardine and My Maryland sell out much more closely than some of the older varieties. There are a few fine Killarney. American Beauties continue to lead the list.

Valley is in excellent supply; demand only moderate. Cattleyas are increasing slightly in number. There are enough oncidiums and cypripediums to merit mention. Autumn leaves have been reinforced by the arrival of oak; both pin and white are in evidence. There is some demand for greens.

The Coming Season.

Thanksgiving day is Thursday, November 26. Christmas and New Year's both fall on Friday. Lent begins on Wednesday, February 24. Easter falls April 11.

that the street faker, who has for so long been a prominent factor in disposing of the surplus of cut flowers, will be banished from Market street during the coming season. This belief is strengthened by the knowledge that there have been at least three glass case privileges leased at excellent figures on the shopping thoroughfare. A number of our leading wholesalers were asked their views on this important question: "Will the absence of the faker from Market street mean a serious pecuniary loss to the grower and to the wholesaler?" The general feeling appeared to be that it would be a serious loss at first, because neither the retail stores nor the proprietors of the street show cases would buy the class of stock used by the fakers. It is hoped, however, that eventually a better tone may be given to the business by the elimination of this somewhat questionable method of doing business, the fakers often being rather obtrusive. The growers can do something to soften this blow by cutting down their production of low grade stock as far as possible.

Our Credit System.

Harry Bayersdorfer, some time called "The Merchant Prince," of this city, favored Phil with some ideas regarding the credit system and business in general. Mr. Bayersdorfer believes that every retail florist should make it a rule to send his statements out on the first day of each month, pressing for payment in ninety days, when these accounts are not honored. He says that too many of our best florists feel that a customer would be angered were he asked to pay his bill, and therefore let the matter slide, thus making it difficult for the florist to meet his obligations, and so in turn cramping those with whom he deals. Mr. Bayersdorfer points out the clock-like regularity with which all successful firms in other lines of business send out their statements and asks pointedly whether, when a florist buys a hat, a box of candy, or some fruit on credit, the seller delays sending him a bill for fear of giving offense.

When questioned regarding the business outlook, Mr. Bayersdorfer said that while the orders are coming in freely, he thinks that many buyers are buying as little as possible this fall, fearing to overstock. The result, he believes, will be a tremendous rush when business actually opens later in the season.

Mr. Guille's Visit.

James Guille, of the Hubert Bulb Co., Portsmouth, Va., boarded a sleeper on the evening of August 31 and appeared in this city the following day. Mr. Guille's visit was made to keep an engagement with the Florists' Club of this city, to talk about bulb growing in Virginia, as all readers of the REVIEW will know from last week's issue. To meet him, many of our most representative men were gathered in the club room the evening of September 1. Mr. Guille has energy, enthusiasm and a splendid confidence in the ultimate success of his work; he displayed all these qualities to advantage in one of the liveliest debates that has ever been witnessed in the club room.

The discussion may be divided into

Dahlias

The most popular and serviceable Cut Flower for the next six weeks will be the Dahlia. Our stock is in fine condition, and we offer many new and fancy varieties—along with the well-known Standards, such as Kriembilde, Lyndhurst, Clifford W. Bruton, Catherine Duer, Jack Rose, and others.

Our stock of this flower is so large that we are in a position to furnish quantities of any one variety or shade of color on short notice.

two parts, one on cut flowers, the other on bulbs. The former I consider relatively unimportant. The laws of supply and demand will always govern the production of cut flowers. Should anyone choose to flood this market with daffodils, there is nothing to prevent, any more than there is to prevent a dahlia grower or a chrysanthemum grower from doing the same thing. It will be done as long as it is profitable and no longer. The second part, concerning bulb growing in Virginia, is of vital interest; if we can produce bulbs required for forcing and planting outdoors in this country as well as they are grown in Holland and for the same money, everyone would far rather buy them at home than abroad.

Mr. Guille asserts positively that Virginia is producing just as good bulbs as are grown in Holland, and will continue to produce them in larger and larger quantities as the market expands. He stuck to this point, despite adverse opinion. The members generally appeared to doubt whether it could be done, but they one and all frankly declared their willingness to be convinced.

Various Notes.

"An American Bulb for Every American Garden" was the keynote to one of the most brilliant addresses ever delivered before the Florists' Club, that which occurred at the September meeting. Who was the author? Why, P. Joseph Lynch, of West Grove, Pa.

J. D. Eisele, vice-president of the Henry A. Dreer Co., writes from Holland to a friend that the weather has been phenomenally wet, five out of the last six days being rainy, and adds the important fact that the azaleas are unusually well budded this season.

Joseph Swearer, manager, Holland, Pa., has commenced the erection of a greenhouse 36x200 feet, concrete being an important element in the operation so far complete.

The Central Flower Shop is the name adopted by T. Chochos and V. Alexis, two New York florists, who opened for business September 7 at the southeast corner of Twelfth and Chestnut streets. They have leased the pavement privilege from Finley Acker & Co., erecting thereon the handsomest showcase ever seen on a sidewalk in this city. It is understood the lessee should carry high-grade stock.

J. Murray Bassett, of Hammonton, N. J., has sent out an attractive series of picture postal cards descriptive of his business in its various branches. Two show groups of native orchids, another the snowball hydrangea, H. arborescens sterilis; another a field of dahlias in full bloom, a leading specialty with Mr. Bassett. There are others, which unfortunately I am unable to name at this moment.

Vincent F. Gorley, of St. Louis, was a visitor in this city a few days ago. Mr. Gorley stopped to call on his way home from Europe.

Henry F. Michell Co. has just received the first shipment of 4,000,000 Dutch bulbs. Their new mammoth warehouse, Tower Hall, is rapidly rounding into shape.

A pictorial postal card received in this city from Samuel S. Pennock says that he is leading the simple life at Pocono Lake, Pa., sleeping in a tent and living in the open.

Charles Henry Fox has returned from Europe.

The Logan Nurseries, A. P. Irwin, have planted 16,000 carnations, large quantities of Asparagus plumosus, some smilax and other specialties. They will also grow ferns and lilies, and will force some bulbs.

Walter P. Stokes has returned from Pocono Manor, Pa., to his home at Moorestown, N. J.

Richard Umphried returned September 2 from an eleven weeks' trip to Europe. Mr. Umphried spent most of his time in Stuttgart, Bremen, and in Austria, in-

The Leo Niessen Co. received September 7 one dozen Golden Glow chrysanthemums, the first seen in this market this season.

Charles E. Meehan and Mrs. Meehan have returned from their trip down the St. Lawrence. Mr. Meehan speaks enthusiastically of all the interesting things that he saw.

H. M. Weiss & Son, Hatboro, Pa., have their carnation plants in exceptionally fine condition, both the indoor grown and the outdoor stock that is now benched being the picture of health.

Specialties in roses noted this week are: At the S. S. Pennoek-Meehan Co., Mrs. Jardine; at Leo Niessen Co., Richmond and Mrs. Jardine; at Edward Reid's, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria; at W. E. McKissick's, My Maryland.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Last week being state fair week, gave the roses time to catch up to the demand, and as a result, today there is a pretty good crop moving in town. A couple of days of warm weather and sunshine brought the buds out in short order.

Quite a lot of interest was shown in the state fair exhibits this year. There was more competition, and a greater number of florists went into the contest than any year before. The members of the horticultural society were well pleased, and next year it is to be hoped there will be better awards.

Easter lilies and auratum are being shown, and were used to good advantage in some of the work last week. A couple CINCINNATI.The Market.

A week of poor business has just passed. The demand was erratic and at the best was nothing to speak of. The store men reported nothing doing and so they bought only what they had to have. As it happened, too, there was a large cut of flowers coming in, and this, with poor business, meant considerable waste. Saturday brought a little relief. Considerable funeral work had been booked by the retail stores for Monday, and they bought heavily. This eased up things a little, and by Saturday evening the market was fairly well cleaned up. Sunday, also, brought forth a good demand and, with several large funerals in prospect for this week, we ought to have a good business to make up in part for last week.

You could get about every variety of flower you wanted. Roses are coming rather strongly. The quality of the stock is improving rapidly, too. The week of cool weather has helped them greatly. Beauties are in good supply. The demand for them, while poor last week, gives promise of using all that we get this week. The increased supply dropped the price somewhat, but it averaged fair even then. Carnations are coming in larger quantities, but the quality is still poor and they do not keep well. The cool nights we are having now ought to do them worlds of good. I hear predictions of a poor carnation crop this year. We have certainly had the driest summer in years. It was wretched weather in which to lift carnations and many growers report the stock in pitiful condition. It is still too early to judge how it will turn out, though. have virtually had but one good rain the summer through. This has had its effect upon the outdoor stock about here, the asters especially being hit hard.

The Market.

Considering that business during the summer months of July and August is expected to be rather quiet, everything so far was satisfactory, but the last week, especially from the wholesalers' standpoint, was "rotten," so they claim. Beginning on Monday, all kinds of stock of really good quality arrived in quantity and, as there were no sales, it was consigned to the dump next morning, to make room for that day's shipments. Right along, good asters were scarce and carnations in demand, and now, when there is plenty of good stock, it simply can not be moved. Just now, also, is the time when the retailers with some glass can easily fill their orders with home-grown stock, thereby steering clear of the wholesale man.

Club Picnic.

With favorable weather, a good attendance and fine arrangements, the Florists' Club's picnic, held Sunday, September 6, was a great success in every respect. The first number on the program was the baseball game between the Currie and the Holton & Hunkel teams. The score was 16 to 14 in favor of the last named. After the ball game there were doings for young and old. The most interesting and exciting events were the nail driving contests for ladies, and the sack race for men. The results were as follows:

One-hundred-yard dash for men—Roy Currie, first prize, a shaving mug; C. Wolf, second prize, a cigar stand.

One-hundred-yard dash for boys, 12 to 18 years—Alb. Bretlin, first prize, military brushes; C. Retzlaff, second prize, a knife.

Seventy-five-yard dash for boys under 12 years—D. Wolf, first prize, a printing press; L. Pollworth, second prize, a deck ring game.

Sack race—C. Wolf, first prize, a pipe; Emil Equitz, second prize, a knife.

Nail driving contest for ladies—Gertrude Sommers, first prize, a comb and brush; Minnie George, second prize, a vase.

Seventy-five-yard dash for ladies—Minnie George, first prize, a mirror; Paula Hunkel, second prize, a fancy plate.

Seventy-five-yard dash for girls, 12 to 18 years—Lora Valom, first prize, a music roll; Ella Holtz, second prize, a post card album.

Fifty-yard dash for girls under 12 years—Gretchen Baumgarten, first prize, an inkstand; Mabel Thwaites, second prize, a sewing box.

Much credit is due Gustav Rusch, of the entertainment committee, for the hustling he did at the picnic.

Various Notes.

The club meeting September 3 brought out the regulars. A letter from the secretary of the National Chrysanthemum Society, asking for information in regard to the affiliation of the local club with that society, was to hand, but no definite action was taken, and it was voted to lay the matter over to the next meeting—too much picnic spirit prevailed.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.;
First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.;
Sec'y and Treas., O. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

HJALMAR HARTMANN, the Copenhagen seed grower, is now in Paris.

THE New York seedsmen are busy—exhibiting at or attending the numerous Long Island agricultural fairs.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has imported from Holland fifty-two cases of Dutch bulbs for use in its bulb-growing experiments.

THE first considerable shipment of Dutch bulbs last season was received at New York September 3. They were ten days earlier this year.

It is said that "variety is the spice of life." You can get it in the reports on western sweet corn; one says too cold, another too dry; yet a third, weather fine and crops progressing rapidly.

TIMOTHY seed was steady at Chicago at the opening of the week. September 8 the September delivery closed at $3.55 bid and $3.65 asked, and October $3.40 bid and $3.55 asked. Country lots, $2.85 to $3.50. Clover seed was easy at $9.60 for October and $8.50 to $9.60 for cash lots.

THE Henry Field Seed Co., of Shenandoah, Ia., has purchased the wholesale bulb business of O. B. Stevens, of the same place, and will add it to their own large bulb business. The sale includes the growing stock, amounting to about 35,000 dahlias, about 40,000 cannas, 4,000 German iris and 50,000 perennial phlox. The combining of these two firms of bulb growers and their collections will make a very strong bulb business in Shenandoah.

NIMMO & BLAIR, seed merchants of Dunedin, New Zealand, are buyers of American seeds, but sell little in this country; still the conditions that they meet in New Zealand are in some respects so similar to those in this country that they have adopted the Seed Trade Association's non-warranty, and it is stated on all letter-heads and printed matter that "Nimmo & Blair give no warranty, express or implied, as to the description, quality, productiveness or any other matter of seeds they send out, and they will not in any way be responsible for the crop. If purchaser does not accept the seeds on these terms they are at once to be returned."

THE CORN CROP.

The Department of Agriculture issued its September crop statement September 8, basing its deductions on reports received from its thousands of correspondents up to the first day of the month. The average condition of the crop was given as 79.4, compared to 82.5 August 1, 80.2 September 1, 1907, and 90.2 September 1, 1906. On the popular basis of computation the figures indicate a total yield of about 2,598,000,000 bushels, compared to 2,702,000,000 bushels indicated by the August statement, and approximately 2,592,300,000 bushels harvested last fall.

The following table gives the condition of corn in the important producing LUDINGTON, MICH.

The culture and love of flowers of all kinds have enormously increased in this vicinity during the last ten years. The city, which was originally a lumber town with but little care for literature or the fine arts, has in ten years so changed in these respects that the old resident who has been away during the time would hardly know it now. Asters, sweet peas, dahlias, geraniums, verbenas and nearly all the old kinds of annuals are now as common around our homes as sawdust and shavings were before, and those adornments, with beautifully laid out lawns and well-cared-for trees, render our city one of the prettiest in western Michigan. We have a number of amateur florists who raise flowers for sale at the Epworth and Hamlin lake summer resorts, located from one to three miles north of the city. Owing to the dampness of our spring and fall seasons, sweet peas are kept in bloom here until October 1, and grow to a size of bloom unknown to the more inland parts of our state. The kinds raised are the Spencer types, mostly of recent introduction. Lady Grisel Hamilton, King Edward VII, Dorothy Eckford and Mrs. Walter Wright grow to perfection. The Frank Dolby, of recent introduction, also does remarkably well. The Crego asters recently introduced here are also making a great hit among the resorters.

DAYTON, OHIO.

Condition of Business.

The condition of last week's trade, in general, among all our Dayton florists was not of the briskest kind. Some days business was exceedingly dull, while others seemed more prosperous. Carnations are becoming more plentiful each day, and the demand is gradually growing. Roses are good and also plentiful, and longiflorums take well. The indoor asters are nearly a thing of the past and owing to the extremely hot and dry weather, the outdoor asters are not doing well. Most of the florists have ceased to grow the Formosa Lilium Longiflorum grown from bulbs of The Yokohama Nursery Co.

SURPLUS OFFER OF

Formosa Lilium Longiflorum

ON account of unfavorable weather the bulbs of the Formosa Lilium Longiflorum did not grow up to the sizes expected, but the plants formed good solid bulbs. We are convinced our 6 to 8 in. size will give the same results which under favorable conditions a bulb of 7 to 9-in. would, and if two bulbs are planted in one pot, the plants make a nicer showing than those with a single stem.

6 to 8-in. bulbs, 400 in a case, at $16.00 per case, 5% cash discount.

Callas, White, Japan Grown

OUR stock is grown for one season in dry loamy soil to make these roots fit for the long journey, consequently they are not as large as California grown stock. They produce, however, more flowers and are perfectly healthy. Size 1 to 2-in. in diam. $45.00 per 1000, 5% cash discount.

Florists' Review

When Writing Advertisers

aster outdoors, as the gardeners raise so many of them each year, and sell them so cheaply, that it pays the florist better to put in his time and use his ground for some other proposition. The weather continues hot and dry.

Various Notes.

The Montgomery County Fair opened September 7 and among those of our florists who are showing fine exhibits of palms, ferns, plants and cut flowers are Herman H. Ritter, the Dayton Floral Co. and the Advance Floral Co.

D. Rusconi, of Cincinnati, was a visitor in Dayton September 5.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Cook and daughter, Mabel, who have been the guests of Mrs. Bertha Hendriks since the S. A. F. convention, left September 7 for Cincinnati, where they will spend a day or two and then return to their home in New Orleans. R. A. B.

WASHINGTON.

State of Business.

Business has improved since the beginning of September and last Saturday and Sunday found some of the retail stores quite busy. The funeral of Mr. Sargent, of the immigration office, called for a number of large designs, for all the railroad brotherhoods were represented by handsome pieces. Asters are in large supply and of good quality. They are selling well because carnations are still scarce. Roses are as yet only of summer quality.

Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the Florists' Club, at which Mr. Schmidt was host, was a howling success. It was the largest meeting the club has held. The next meeting will be in the potting shed at the greenhouses of the Gude Bros. Co., with A. Gude as host.

Mr. Gude has been gathering subscriptions for the William Scott memorial fund and thus far has secured $35.

O. A. C. Oehmler has returned from a trip to Pittsburg and Toledo. O. O.

ORANGE, N. J.

The first monthly meeting, after the summer recess, of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held September 4.

Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, displayed a collection of hybrid orchids, consisting of cattleyas, lœlias, lyeastes, vandas and maxillarias. Thomas Jones, of Short Hills, showed cattleyas and oncidiums. A vase of asters of Weeber & Don's "Best" strain was exhibited by Thomas A. Edison, Frank Drews gardener. There were various seasonable flowers from the neighboring estates. A lantern exhibition of flowering shrubs was the attraction of the evening. J. B. DAVIS.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

During August the usual dullness in our business was much in evidence, with the exception of quite a number of funerals, which caused a little activity among the retailers. With the homecoming of the society folks we expect better business. The nights are getting cooler, so roses and carnations are improving.

Various Notes.

Since my last report we were visited

Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen

The seed of Cyclamen is often sown too early in the year; from August to the end of September is the best time. Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen are unequalled for size and quality of bloom. A magnificent strain of Cyclamen with flowers of extraordinary size and substance.

Gigantic White Butterfly. Pure white; immense flowers.

Gigantic Snowflake. The largest of all white Cyclamen.

Gigantic Cherry-red. Most brilliant and effective.

Gigantic Rose. Immense flowers of a pleasing shade of light rose.

Gigantic Pink. Exquisite shade of soft pink.

Gigantic Crimson. Most striking color; under artificial light appears to be almost luminous.

Gigantic Crimson and White. A magnificent flower of the largest type.

Gigantic Syringa Blue. (New.) A charming color.

Gigantic Lilac. A very pleasing color, lighting up well at night.

Any of the above varieties, trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50; per 1000, $12.00

Gigantic Mixed. A mixture of all the above varieties in proper proportion. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.25; 1000 seeds, $10.00.

PRINCESS MAY. A very pretty type of Cyclamen. Color pink, with suffused blotches of crimson at base of petals. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

SALMON QUEEN. Undoubtedly one of the most distinct and beautiful salmon colors found in Cyclamen. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum Salmonium splendens. The finest salmon-pink variety. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum, Rococo, Mixed Colors. The beautifully fringed flowers measure 5 inches in diameter. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum, Bush Hill Pioneer. A beautiful new feathered Cyclamen in various colors. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Six Grand Novelty Cyclamens

Bridesmaid. New Cyclamen of the "Papilio" variety, with large, well-formed flowers of a pure white, with a red eye, while the beautifully fringed petals are broadly edged with bright red. Trade pkt., 50c.

Peach Blossom. An exceptionally handsome variety of an intense rose color. Trade pkt., 50c.

Purple King. The best of all crimson varieties and strikingly beautiful. Trade pkt., 50c.

Phoenix. Bright cherry-crimson flowers, freely produced. Trade pkt., 50c.

Rose of Marienthal. Soft shell-pink; a very pretty variety. Trade pkt., 50c.

Vulcan. The rich crimson color is very striking and contrasts admirably with the pure white of Butterfly. Trade pkt., 50c.

CYCLAMEN, JAMES' NEW SWEET-SCENTED

A fragrant Cyclamen, having a particularly pleasant odor, resembling that of the Honey Locust, or of the Lily of the Valley. The colors are pink, flesh-pink, with carmine base, and white. Trade pkt., 50c.

by a hard storm, which gave the florists a scare. The storm lasted about two hours and a half and the rainfall was 3.17 inches. There were three distinct hail storms in that time, which broke some glass for all of us. The hailstones were as large as hickory nuts.

At J. Niednagel's they are about through rebuilding benches and replanting. Their roses and carnations are coming along nicely.

Geo. Blackman says that they cannot complain about business for this season of the year.

Royston & Fenton report that the wholesale trade has started off nicely for this month. E. L. F.

SOUTH MANCHESTER, CONN.

Current Comment.

About 250 live members of the Connecticut Pomological Society attended the field meeting of the society at the Cheney Farm, in this place, on Wednesday, August 19. The Cheney Farm, of which Thomas L. Brown is manager, comprises about seventy acres of land, forty-five acres of which are devoted to growing vegetables for market. The meeting was pronounced one of the best in the history of the society. The banquet hall was beautifully decorated with flowers.

One grower, who has a general line of fruits, flowers and vegetables, said that land which was growing celery and onions around Southport, Conn., is now going into the hands of rich New Yorkers at $4,000 an acre. The growers seem to part reluctantly with their old gardens, but the money tempts them. It is almost a continuous city from New York to Boston.

Seth Leslie Cheney has about finished his new plant house, 10x187 feet. This is a sash house, designed so that the roof can be easily drawn off in spring or fall. Other growers say this is just the thing, as it does away with hotbeds, thereby saving great trouble and expense. T. L. B.

The Market.

At last, after three months of waiting, we are being treated to a spell of summer weather. Business, except for a few spurts in the line of funeral work, remains very quiet and there is an excess of almost everything in the flower line except roses. The new crop of carnations is making a good showing. It is noticeable this year that the growers have been overhauling and changing their houses much sooner than they formerly did, and an avalanche of early stock is the result. Why the greenhouse men have shown such an inclination to have very early flowers the last two seasons is difficult to explain, but there certainly has been a rush in changing the houses, with the result of an oversupply of carnations at the time when asters and early chrysanthemums hold the market.

Asters, by the way, are scarcer than last week, but the prices have remained the same. Another two weeks will witness their departure and, from present indications, chrysanthemums will be in full supply to take their places.

Some violets of the Princess variety have already reached town, but they are weak of stem and small of flower and do not make much show. Sweet peas are moving more slowly than at any time during the season. Amaryllis and gladioli are scarcer and bring the same figures as were quoted last week. Asparagus grown in lath houses is now at full growth and is in heavy supply. Some early smilax is shown. Maidenhair fern continues in good supply.

Various Notes.

J. J. Kegley has taken a few days' vacation, to inspect the state fair at Sacramento.

The orchid houses of J. C. Siegfried, at Alameda, are in splendid shape for another season's cutting.

Harold George, of Elmhurst, has taken charge of the greenhouses of Alfred Gallaway, lately deceased, at Fruitvale, Cal.

THE DEMAND FOR FRUIT TREES.

There are many nurseries in California and Oregon that deal almost entirely in fruit trees, and from present indications there will be quite a planting of some varieties of trees on the Pacific coast. On the whole, the present bookings of orders with the dealers who handle fruit trees exclusively are better than the orders on hand at the nurseries where ornamentals are handled. It is customary, of course, for lists of fruit to be booked earlier than other kinds of stock, as planters want to be sure they will have enough trees on hand to plant their young orchards with.

The ruling prices will be much lower than those of one year ago, and there is a much larger assortment of trees to select from. Last season the greatest demands were for prunes, pears, apricots, peaches and some varieties of apples. For the latter there is no great demand, however, either in central or southern California, the plantings being greatest in northern California, Oregon and Washington. Last year 15 cents to 18 cents was the ruling price for almost everything except cherries, plums and apples. The Oregon nurseries, however, sold at slightly lower figures than these, as did some of our dealers, when it became late in the season and slight surpluses were left on hand.

Dealers at present are asking from 8 cents to 12 cents here for first size stock, with plenty on hand. Orders are coming in fairly rapidly, but the planters are particular as to what they are going to plant. The demand for Bartlett pears, apricots and prunes will be light, with apparently very little demand for plums or almonds. A few varieties of peaches are selling well. Figs and grapes are to be largely planted in central and southern California. Cherries in a few favored localities will be given a good acreage.

The heavy crops of fruit during the present season and the prevailing low prices have had the effect of keeping many farmers, who intended planting, from going too heavily into the production of fruit, and a considerable quantity of stock sold will be used for the replanting of old or worn out orchards.

VIOLETS FOR FRISCO MARKET.

The growing of violets in the vicinity of San Francisco is almost entirely in the hands of the Italian gardeners. Up to ten years ago all the flower growers had a patch of violets for the blooms, and Swanley White, Marie Louise, Neapolitan and California were the varieties grown in about equal quantities. About this time Princess of Wales made its appearance and rapidly went to the front as a profitable market variety. The Italian growers, who up to this time had contented themselves with hardy outside flowers and the growing of vegetables, now turned their attention to violets, and to a great extent gave up the handling of other stock. With the advent of this influx into the violet growing and the fact that the Italians could produce the flowers cheaper than the other growers, they soon had the handling practically in their hands.

The first move made was to discard the growing of everything except the Princess, which, on account of its hardiness, freedom of bloom, long stems and long continued blossoming, was the best paying variety. A few scattered patches of the double varieties were to be seen in different localities, but the fact that so few were offered for sale in the stores and so few seen on the streets, made the flower buyers cease to ask for them and they have now practically ceased to be grown in quantity.

With the violet situation in the hands of the Italian growers, they quickly combined in various ways and the output and price were regulated to suit themselves. The flowers were grown in the neighborhood of the vegetable gardens, where water and child labor were plentiful, and these have been the secrets of the success of the violet growers. Even the Japanese and Chinese have not been able to solve the problem of labor so that they will be able to sell at the same prices with the Italians, who depend almost entirely on boys and girls to pick the flowers, and in this regard they are singularly blessed, as any visitor to the Italian colonies can vouch for.

During the past season several of the combinations made by the Italian growers were broken and the retailers were treated to something in the nature of a real treat, namely, that it was possible to obtain all the violets wanted at any time and at a fair price. Whether the growers will combine and cinch the store men this coming season is impossible to say at this time. The possibly lessened demand which we are liable to face may have the effect of making the Italian growers more reasonable in their demands.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Everything is asters here at the present time in the flower line. They are unusually fine and abundant, notwithstanding the ravages done by grubs. The light blooms find better demand and prices than the darker, although the latter are worked in to good advantage in many of the funeral pieces. The delicate shades have also been much sought for decorative purposes for weddings. Carnations have been propagated by nearly every grower hereabouts for large crops, and all are looking healthy and promising. They are just commencing to flower, but are so short stemmed as to be useless as yet for market.

Various Notes.

Donald C. Wilson, a well-known bogus check operator, was arrested recently in Springfield, Mass., and from the photographs sent out from that city it is believed that Wilson is the man who worked bogus checks on S. J. Reuter & Son Co., of Westerly, several days previously. If Wilson is the man who swindled Reuter & Son, he gave the name of James Webster at that time. He ordered oak leaves and palms for a wedding and presented a check for $21.50 on the City National bank, payable to Arthur J. Raymond, and received a considerable balance in cash.

The greenhouse of the Norwood Floral Co., at Norwood, which was partly destroyed by fire last February, is being rebuilt. The office, in the center of the building, is being enlarged and will be constructed almost entirely of glass, and the new structure will be a decided improvement over the old one.

One of the automobile parties that took luncheon at the Mathewson house, Narragansett Pier, recently consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy L. O'Connor and Miss Lillian J. O'Connor.

George L. Stillman, at Westerly, has over 300 varieties of dahlias under cultivation and is taking orders for the flowers for spring delivery.

Frank Schellinger, of Riverside, has returned from a vacation of two weeks spent in Maine.

Adrian Van Leeuwen, a landscape gardener who conducts a large nursery near Bellingham, Mass., was granted a marriage license in this city a few days ago.

Only one temperature was available in the old greenhouses, but in the new range there will be three divisions, each separately piped.

William E. Chappell is cutting some fine asters for the local market, the yield of his fields this year being remarkable. He states that he has been bothered to a considerable extent by grubs, finding them much more numerous in new ground than in old. He does not sterilize his soil or manure, but uses the raw mate-

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.—John McMillin, who has conducted the Phelps greenhouses, at Blackinton, for the last few years, will retire from the management of the place in the latter part of September.

SHIREMANSTOWN, PA.—This city was swept by a disastrous fire September 2. John F. Rupp's place escaped, though at one time it was threatened with destruction. The seed department was removed to a place of safety, as well as much that pertained to the greenhouse trade. Newspapers throughout the state published extensive accounts of the fire and Mr. Rupp greatly appreciates that many florists showed their consideration by writing their hope that he escaped.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., O. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Jeager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

WALTER SCOTT, landscape architect at La Grange, Ill., is reported to have a number of good jobs in progress of execution.

THE meetings of the Southern Nurserymen's Association are characterized by heart-to-heart talks, the breaking away from set papers and program and the giving of personal experiences. Three sessions were held each day during the recent convention at Atlanta and every session was well attended. Perhaps the fact that no stenographer is employed, and that the proceedings are not printed, lends to that air of freedom so distinctly a part of these meetings.

THE PECAN IN THE NURSERY.

[A paper by R. C. Simpson, of Monticello, Fla., read before the Southern Nurserymen's Association, in convention at Atlanta, Ga., August 19 and 20, 1908.]

The pecan nursery business, as it is carried on today, is a comparatively new branch of the nurseryman's work. Seedling trees have been grown and sold for many years, but it is only within the last ten years—I might almost say within the last five years—that the grafted trees of superior varieties have been put on the market in any considerable quantity. For a long time grafting or budding was considered so uncertain and expensive that most nurserymen could not afford to bother with it to any extent. In late years, however, great strides have been made in this direction and we are now able to graft and bud the pecan with a considerable degree of success, often getting as high as fifty to sixty per cent stand for an entire season's work, when conditions have been favorable. It will be my endeavor in this short paper to make a few remarks on seed planting, methods of propagation, and the subsequent care and handling of this most important nut tree.

Planting the Seed.

The pecan nurseryman starts at the beginning, i. e., the seed. These are planted in rows in about the same manner as peach pits, except that they are placed farther apart—usually four to six inches. Some nurserymen plant the nuts dry, in December or early in January; some stratify them in the fall and plant in February; still others let the pecans remain dry all winter, soak them in water about three days before planting and put them in the ground about the same time stratified nuts are dropped. Personally, I prefer the first method, and have always had the best success with pecans planted in this manner. When the time for starting growth commences, the seeds are lying in their places, snugly surrounded by damp soil and ready to start to work. No transfer, by which the seed may become dried out or mechanically injured, is necessary. The nuts should be covered with a large ridge of earth thrown over the drill, to keep them from becoming water-soaked. In the spring, if this is dragged down just as the seeds are sprouting, the young seedlings will find themselves growing in a perfectly clean seed-bed, which could not have been possible if either of the other methods had been practiced. Moreover, if a planter is used this plan would be almost imperative, as wet or sprouting nuts would be harder to plant and more liable to injury.

We were told when we first planned to plant our seed in the fall that they would be eaten up by wood rats, crows and moles, and probably water-soaked and rotten by spring. In two seasons' planting, however, we have experienced little difficulty from any of these things, and therefore do not hesitate to recommend this method of planting.

Grafting.

In most localities seedlings must be at least two years old before they can be worked, but at Monticello the climate and soil are so well adapted to the pecan that they can be grafted when one year old if they have been given proper care and attention. The method of grafting now most commonly used is the whip graft, which is put on the stock as it stands in the field. The scions are cut about six inches long and are grafted on the root of the seedling about five inches underground, about an inch or at least one eye being left above the level of the earth.

It is no small job to remove the dirt from the roots of these stocks, as it must be cleaned out at least six inches deep. We usually throw the earth away from each side of the row with a one-horse plow and then dig out the remaining ridge with a potato fork or some such tool. We then have a man to wipe off each stock with a rag, so that there is no sand to dull the grafter's knife or dirt to drop into the cuts.

The operation of putting on the scion is exactly the same as in the ordinary bench grafting, except that the position and movements of the operator are necessarily different. If the stocks are too large to work nicely with the whip graft, the cleft or wedge method is used. A good workman can put in a thousand grafts a day when conditions are favorable.

A tier follows each grafter and securely wraps each graft with waxed string.

The tying is almost as important as the grafting and must be looked after closely by each grafter. The arm is usually carried entirely around the long graft with each wrap of the string, and if the operator touches the scion he is apt to displace it slightly and break the close contact of the cambium layers, thus causing it to die, even if it had been grafted perfectly. We consider tight tying of pecan grafts just as important as tight tying of cherry buds.

A third man is usually employed to pack the earth securely around each union with his hands, and to fill up the furrow again after all operations are finished.

FORCING TOMATOES.

On page 25 of the REVIEW for September 3 there was a description of the houses used for the experiments in tomato forcing conducted at Macdonald College, Quebec.

Starting the Plants.

The plants for house No. 1 of this paper were started from seed sown September 16, in flats. These were pricked off into 3½-inch pots three weeks later, and carried in these pots to November 22, or nine weeks, when they were set into the permanent bed, being about twelve inches high at that time.

The plants for house No. 2 were started December 15, in flats, and pricked off a month later into 3½-inch pots. They were again shifted to 5-inch pots February 20, and set into benches March 12. The plants at that time were eighteen inches high. It will be seen that these plants were carried three months before benching. It is safe to say, therefore, that the period between sowing the seed and pricking off will be from three to four weeks. The plants can then be carried in 3½-inch pots from four to five weeks, but if a longer period is required a shift to 5-inch pots is necessary in order to keep the plants growing and healthy. It is also well to bear in mind that while it is possible to carry a plant in a 3½-inch pot during the early part of the winter, yet, owing to a much more rapid growth toward spring, this would be impossible without stunting the plant. In no case is it advisable to carry the plants longer than three months before benching.

Fruiting Period.

Plants set into benches in house No. 1, November 22, gave their first ripe fruit the middle of March. The time, therefore, required for the plants to come into fruiting was 113 days. These continued in fruit until the middle of May, or seventy-one days. Those set into benches in house No. 2, March 12, gave their first fruit May 12, or in sixty-one days, and continued in fruit till the end of July, a period of seventy-seven days.

It will be seen that the plants occupied the benches in house No. 1 about fifty-two days longer than those in house No. 2 before coming into fruiting. The fruiting period was of about the same duration in both houses. Allowing, therefore, that the plants set in house No. 1 could have been carried two weeks longer by shifting into a 5-inch pot, it still would have been necessary to carry these plants five weeks longer in benches in order to get ripe fruit during March and April than to secure fruit in house No. 2 during May and June.

Distance Apart.

The plants in house No. 1 were set diagonally in rows twelve inches apart and fourteen inches apart in the rows.

State of Business.

The supply of cut flowers has broadened out considerably, there being a larger variety to select from. A new crop of roses is now coming in. Most of the growers are cutting American Beauties. There are not many long-stemmed ones, but the medium and short stems are most in evidence and the quality is fine.

Brides and Maids are also coming in. They still show the effects of the heat, but are fair and have good length of stems. Killarney is being cut by most growers. Of these the stems are short, except in case of those that were planted extra early, but the flowers are fine.

Some new carnations from indoor planting are now in evidence, mostly Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, white and a few Winsors. The stems are still short, but the flowers are good.

Asters are plentiful—all that the market can find place for. The best stock sells well, but the large quantity of inferior grades keeps the price down. Dahlias are still coming in and are fairly good, the best ones coming from the Wilmore Dahlia Farm.

FRANK OECHSLIN, 2570-2606 W. Adams St., Chicago

Formerly Garfield Park Flower Co.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Trade is slowly picking up and it is commonly noted that in spite of being a cool month, September is gradually coming to be accepted as one of the vacation months, and city people are returning from their country places later in the season than they used to do.

The feature of last week, and continuing to the time of going to press this week, is the great glut of asters and roses, good, bad and indifferent, but the oversupply is mostly short-stemmed stock. Easter lilies are scarce and auratum lilies are practically off the market. There is a fine grade of valley to be had and it finds ready sale. Carnations are coming in more plentifully, but are small.

Various Notes.

Three of the children of Wm. B. Sands, of Ruxton, and his daughter-in-law, are seriously ill with typhoid fever and are in a hospital.

F. C. Baur is rapidly recovering from his illness.

Robt. L. Graham has opened a new store on North avenue, near Linden avenue. It was formerly used as a flower store by J. A. Ritter & Son.

John P. Wilkin, of Gardenville, has a splendid lot of mums. They are over five feet high.

The greatest show ever held under the auspices of the Maryland State Fair and Agricultural Society closed September 5. The exhibits in every department were more numerous and far above the average, and at least 65,000 people were in attendance during the week. The exhibits of flowers were extra fine and some asters and dahlias were shown with seed exhibits by J. Bolgiano & Son, who had one of the largest exhibits there. Griffith & Turner Co. had a fine exhibit of farm implements.

C. J. Bolgiano is away on his vacation and will be away for two weeks. Q.

MILFORD, CONN.—A. S. Nodine, of Sea Side avenue, left August 31 for Providence, R. I., where he may decide to locate. He intends to discontinue the business here.

GEO. WITTBOLD CO. 1657 Buckingham Place CHICAGO

WEST GROVE, PA.

Both of the big concerns here are busy distributing their autumn catalogues. The Dingee & Conard Co. presents a new rose to the trade. It is named after the venerable founder of the establishment, Charles Dingee, and as it is a rose of excellent quality, is destined to attain a wide popularity.

The trial grounds of the Conard & Jones Co. are more than usually attractive at the present time. Acres of can-nas and hydrangeas are now in full bloom and present to visitors a pano-rama not easily forgotten.

Baylis & Son have just completed three large greenhouses, built for growing car-nations and tomatoes. They have a large and promising crop of chrysanthemums and expect to place some superb blooms upon the market this fall.

Roney Bros. have already benched a nice crop of their leading specialty, car-nations.

The mammoth mushroom house at Dingee & Conard's is being rapidly pushed to completion.

Bennett Walton, of London Grove, is erecting two Lord & Burnham green-houses, 60x105 feet each.

D. H. Green anticipates a prosperous fall and winter season.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Trade has been rather quiet for the last two weeks, with stock scarce, outside of roses, which have been plentiful and of good quality. Carnations are good, but there are few of them in the market. Good asters are still at a premium here, as most of the growers report only about one-fifth worth cutting. Planting around here is about completed and stock is looking promising.

There has been some funeral work and that is about all we can count on here at present. It will not be long until the most of the travelers return, when we all expect business to open up somewhat.

Various Notes.

Last week was the state fair week and brought a big out-of-town crowd, with a good many in our line of business who came on business and pleasure combined.

The Florists' Club has held no meeting as yet since the summer vacation, and the outlook is that they will not be able to meet in their old hall, but will have to secure other quarters.

R. A. Currie, accompanied by his wife and two eldest daughters, left September 6 for Lake Muskoka, Canada, via Cleveland, Buffalo and Niagara Falls, where they will visit relatives for a couple of weeks.

Sherman Stephens reports funeral work heavy last week and quite a number of grave linings.

Mrs. George Bauman is improving slowly, and we all hope she will soon be able to be in our midst again. J. M.

MONONGAHELA, PA.

Current Comment.

Everything outside here is dried up. We have had no rain for several weeks.

The I. S. Crall Co. has just completed a house 40x125 feet and has it planted to mums.

E. I. Rawlings, who was with J. A. Keeney last year, has gone to Albany, N. Y.

James A. Keeney has begun walking again, with the help of a cane. He walked with crutches for a year after his accident, but now is on deck again and intends to make an effort to build up his business once more. He will be ready with 50,000 rooted cuttings of geraniums and 10,000 petunias this winter. He will build a sash house, 10x80 feet, next month.

ST. PAUL.

A Retrospect.

A brief retrospect, after a month's vacation, may not be amiss. When I left, August 1, the grass was green, the trees were all glorious with their wealth of foliage, and all nature seemed full of life and vigor. Early asters gave promise of a bountiful crop.

On my return, August 31, the grass is brown and withered, many of the shade trees are leafless and the withering hand of drought has stricken everything in the vegetable kingdom. What few asters have survived are small and inferior.

Business has been good. Who ever saw it poor when there was a scarcity of flowers? The cool fall evenings are calling the wanderers home from lake shore, mountain top and ocean's wave, and soon society, that great factor in promoting our business, will be in full sway and creating demands unheard of during the summer months.

Various Notes.

The state fair, which has just closed, broke all records for attendance and displays, even surpassing the great Toronto fair. While the premiums offered for floral displays were not at all commensurate with the material used, there were still a number of exhibitors. A. S. Swanson, of St. Paul, the Minneapolis Floral Co., James Souden & Co., E. Nagel & Co., R. A. Latham and John Vasatka were the principal contestants, the prizes being pretty evenly distributed among them.

The annual meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Society, for the election of officers, was adjourned from September 3 to September 15, at 8 p. m., at which time a splendid attendance is hoped for.

O. J. Olson went duck hunting September 1, returning with fifty fine birds September 3.

S. D. Dysinger has returned from his vacation. X. Y. Z.

TEWKSBURY, MASS.—Chester and Jesse Trull are erecting an additional greenhouse, 30x200, on the John Trull place.

SPARTANBURG, S. C.—C. A. Moss is planning a new place; when this plant is finished it will consist of 65,000 feet of glass. It will take several years to complete the plant, building a few houses each year. Carnations will be the principal flower grown. Business is about the same as last year.

A Wonderful New Nephrolepis Nephrolepis Superbissima

Introduction of 1908

We desire to call attention to this new fern, which originated with us and which we are introducing this year. It is a very unique and distinct novelty—as distinct from Nephrolepis Piersoni and Piersoni elegantissima as they were from Bostoniensis. It is, in fact, a complete break. The fronds are very heavily imbricated, the pinnæ overlapping, making the fronds very dense and compact.

It differs from the other Nephrolepis not only in form, but also in color, being a richer and darker green—entirely different from the yellowish green of all the other Nephrolepis. The plant is very sturdy in its habit, the fronds never breaking down.

While a photograph shows a similarity to its predecessors, it is absolutely distinct, not only in the formation of the fronds and color, but also in its habit and general characteristics. It makes a much more dwarf and compact growth, the fronds being very dense, firm and rigid, and having a great deal more substance, so that it will stand more knocking around than any other fern of this type.

It is a sterling novelty. Experts who have seen it consider it by far the best fern ever sent out. It is a plant that needs to be seen to have its great value and sterling qualities appreciated. It really is not in the same class with the other varieties.

It was awarded a First-class Certificate by the Royal Horticultural Society at Crystal Palace in London, November, 1908, the plants exhibited there having been shipped from New York two weeks before that time. After being exhibited in London, the same plants were shipped to Edinburgh, Scotland, where they were again awarded a First-class Certificate by the Scottish Horticultural Society. This will indicate the value of the plant as a novelty, and also demonstrates in a very conclusive manner its fine keeping and shipping qualities.

We have just begun shipping advance orders, and new orders can now be shipped immediately on receipt.

Fine, strong plants, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100. 4-in. pots, $7.00 per doz.; $50.00 per 100. 6-in. pots, $1.50 each; $15.00 per doz.

CARNATIONS.

28,000 FIELD PLANTS.

I have a large supply of Enchantress. This is extra fine stock in splendid shape for benching now. The plants are strong, bushy ones, that break close to the ground, and have a good blue color, showing perfect health and thriftiness. There is absolutely no stem rot or disease in the field. This stock has an abundance of shoots to produce an early crop at about the right time, as well as smaller breaks for later crops. In fact I consider this the best stock I have ever offered the trade. I also have some good Queen and Harlowarden. Prices, $5.00 per 100, $45.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

A. A. Gannett, Geneva, N. Y.

PENNSYLVANIA'S JUDGES.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society has issued the schedule of premiums for the annual autumn exhibition, to be held November 10 to 13, to which is appended the list of premiums offered for the monthly meetings during 1908. The committee to examine and make awards on new or choice plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables is as follows:

Edwin Lonsdale, chairman. Plants—Robert Craig, Wm. K. Harris, J. D. Eisele, John Westcott, Alphonse Pericat. Flowers—Alex. B. Scott, Samuel S. Pennock, A. B. Cartledge, Henry B. Surman, A. M. Herr. Fruits and vegetables—W. Atlee Burpee, P. Pederson, John G. Gardner, J. Otto Thilow, Joseph McGregor.

Exhibitors of new or choice plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables are required to furnish, in writing, to the committee, whenever possible, full particulars about their exhibit, as to its origin; if a seedling, its parentage; if a foundling, under what conditions it was found; if a sport, what it was sported from; also its principal characteristics, and to inform the secretary of the society one week previous of their intention to exhibit.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—W. J. & M. S. Vesey cut their first Opah September 6, this being the earliest they have cut chrysanthemums. The shipment was sent to Smith & Feters, of Cleveland, to be used in a large wedding.

GHENT PLANT TRADE.

The plant trade of Ghent, Belgium, is perhaps unique in the way in which it is spread over the civilized world, and therefore forms a kind of barometer by which the horticultural trade of the world may be estimated. The following summary from L'Etoile Belge, of Ghent trade in 1907, may, therefore, be of interest to many of our readers:

Business as a whole is reported satisfactory; the total weight of plants exported was 1,747,100 kilos, showing an increase of 396,842 kilos over previous year. As regards individual countries—Russia showed decided improvement, but caution as to customers is still needed. The northern countries, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, take a lot of stuff, but trade with the south, Italy, Spain and Portugal, is insignificant. France remains stationary; Germany, in spite of a heavy tariff, remains the best customer. Exports to the U. S. A. showed a falling off in consequence of many growers being only able to half fill orders for palms, which have been scarce and high in price; Canada is becoming a considerable customer; Great Britain comes in for rather biting criticism as regards business methods.

SCHOOL GROUNDS TRANSFORMED

In reading of horticultural education in the REVIEW of August 27, I thought of the park around the grounds of a public school at my home town, Joplin, Mo. It is the pride of that section of the city. The work was started by residents of that vicinity.

When I attended the school, years ago, there were dump-piles from the mines where there is now a beautiful, well kept lawn, with shrubs and small trees. The parking extends around the school on three sides, with a privet hedge between it and the playground. On the fourth side there is a lawn, with a bed of alternantheras in the center, spelling "Columbia," the name of the school. There are also two round beds, one of cannas, and one of cannas and salvia.

The planting was done by Edward Teas, nurseryman. ROBERT TREGANZA.

FLOWER TRADE IN LONDON.

The editor of the London Express noted the often published statement that the cut flower trade in America amounts to $20,000,000 a year and sent a reporter to Covent Garden to see about it. This is what happened:

The statement that $20,000,000 a year is spent in America on cut flowers caused no surprise at Covent Garden. The dealers state that half as much again is spent every year in England. "In fact, I should say the sum paid for cut flowers in this country exceeds £6,000,000," said one of the largest wholesale florists.

"The average man," he continued, "would be surprised at the great quantities of cut flowers that pass through the market during one day."

"This is our slack season, because there are so many flowers grown in the open air now, but in our busy season—between October and June—nearly £20,000 worth of flowers pass through the markets each day."

"The cut flower trade has increased enormously during the last twenty years, and it is now five times as large as when I started business."

"At first, no doubt. £6,000,000 seems to be a large sum, but if you divide it you will realize that it is under the mark, if anything.

"In the first place, there are the big West End florists, who take a large quantity of flowers for parties and general decorative purposes. Then there are the provincial dealers and the army of hawkers—including the 'regulars' and those who turn their hands to all kinds of hawking. The latter sell fish one day, fruit the next and flowers the next—in fact, anything out of which they can make a little money."

"The hawkers who sell flowers are increasing rapidly, and I should estimate their annual turnover at more than £1,000,000.

"With regard to the West End trade, there are always a great number of parties each night of the season. It is quite usual for hosts to spend £100 for flowers for one party alone."

"The cut flowers sent here from France and the Channel Isles alone amount to nearly £1,000,000 a year."

Greenhouse Heating.

THE INFORMATION IS FREE.

I should like to have some questions answered in regard to my boiler and the piping of a house, 20x100. Will you please tell me how much it costs per question? Also state all other requirements. I am a paid-up subscriber to the REVIEW. O. E. K.

Please state the questions you wish answered as clearly as possible, giving all the dimensions of the houses to be piped, as well as the style and size of boiler, if questions involving heat are to be answered. We will endeavor to be of assistance to you without further expense. L. C. C.

STEAM FOR CARNATION HOUSE

Please tell me how many feet of 1 1/4-inch pipe it will take to heat one greenhouse with steam, for carnations. The house is 29x300, seven feet high to the gutter and fifteen feet to the ridge, with glass on both sides. The temperature in this part of Ontario sometimes gets as low as 15 or 20 degrees below zero. C. S.

To heat your house, 29x300, if the boiler room is at one end, would require either one 4-inch main under the ridge or two 3-inch mains along the purlins, and twenty 1 1/4-inch returns. If the returns can be fed from both ends and the returns emptied into a common return through the middle of the house, a 3-inch flow running in each direction from the center to the ends of the house will answer. This plan would reduce the length of the flows, as well as the returns, to 150 feet, which I think better than 300 feet. L. C. C.

WATER IN BOILER PIT.

May I take this opportunity to give my experience in keeping water out of my boiler pit? I saw in the REVIEW some time ago about a person who was troubled about getting his pit deep enough on account of the water not having drainage. I had the same experience.

My drain is but three feet deep, and GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two purchased of you last year. below that the water would fill the pit in a wet time, so I concluded to put in a cement box to keep the water out. I dug nine feet deep and had to pump to keep the water down, but succeeded in building the box, which is 9x16x25, with walls eleven inches thick at the bottom and six inches thick at the top, and a 10-inch floor, all of sand and cement. It has been in use three years and is perfectly dry. The water has been within two inches of the top at times, yet it did not leak.

If anyone would like to get details of the work, I shall be pleased to give them. Perrysburg, O. J. H. HUFFORD.

SUPERFLUOUS FLOW PIPES.

My greenhouse is 20x50 feet, eleven feet eight inches to the ridge, with concrete side walls five feet four inches high, including sixteen inches of glass. The house runs from north to south and is fully exposed on all sides. It is located in Missouri. At present I have four 2 1/2-inch flow pipes under the ridge and sixteen 2-inch returns under the benches. I want to take two flow pipes off, if you consider it right. If I do so, I shall have to raise the two remaining flows at least eighteen inches, to run them through the wall and bring them straight down to the boiler. A floor between causes the difference of eighteen inches. This would bring the flow pipes ten feet above the boiler. At present they are eight feet six inches above.

With this plan carried out, I will do away with three elbows near the boiler in each flow pipe, which I consider a great obstruction. I have three valves near the boiler, which I shall have to move to the far end of the house. I use them to cut out from one to three coils in mild weather, and they did good service last winter. Please state if you approve of the above plan. C. G. A.

HOUSES ON SLOPING GROUND.

I have a piece of ground sloping to the south, and 340 feet long from north to south, with a fall of about three per cent. I want to build a 6-room cottage 100 feet north of the greenhouses, and for this reason would like to place the steam boiler north of the greenhouses and plan to build future houses to the south.

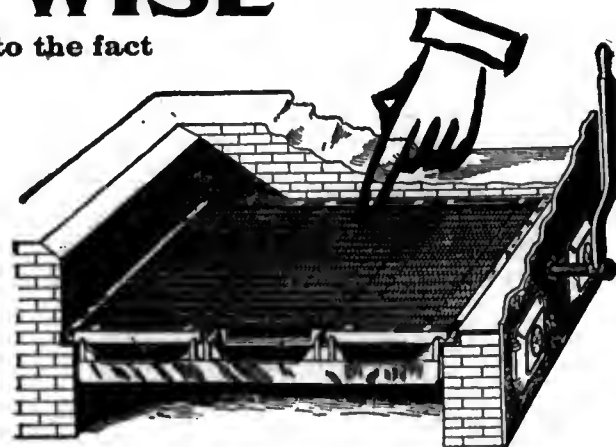

Would it not be advisable to begin building on the south side of the ground, placing the boiler south? This would leave the boiler 250 feet from the cottage. Would this be too far to heat economically, and what size of flow should be used to make the connection? For the greenhouse I plan to run the flow overhead, returning under the benches with 1-inch pipe. The house will be 27x200, heated to 50 degrees where the outside temperature drops to 10 and 15 degrees below zero. How large should the flow be? How many returns will be necessary and what size of main return should these connect with, at the end of the house, to the boiler? How low would the boiler have to be to make a steam trap unnecessary? How large a boiler will be required, in horse-power, including enough for an additional greenhouse, 27x200? I am located in Illinois.

G. J. B.

I do not think it would be safe to undertake to heat a plant such as you contemplate, allowing 800 square feet of radiation for the cottage, with a boiler rated at less than thirty-five or forty horse-power. The boiler should be placed deep enough so that the returns in the greenhouses will be at least two feet

Would it not be advisable to begin building on the south side of the ground, placing the boiler south? This would leave the boiler 250 feet from the cottage. Would this be too far to heat economically, and what size of flow should be used to make the connection? For the greenhouse I plan to run the flow overhead, returning under the benches with 1 inch pipe. The house will be 27x200, heated to 50 degrees where the outside temperature drops to 10 and 15 degrees below zero. How large should the flow be? How many returns will be necessary and what size of main return should these connect with, at the end of the house, to the boiler? How low would the boiler have to be to make a steam trap unnecessary? How large a boiler will be required, in horse-power, including enough for an additional greenhouse, 27x200? I am located in Illinois.

G. J. B.

I do not think it would be safe to undertake to heat a plant such as you contemplate, allowing 800 square feet of radiation for the cottage, with a boiler rated at less than thirty-five or forty horse power. The boiler should be placed deep enough so that the returns in the greenhouses will be at least two feet house main return will be ample, if well graded. With the slope you have, you should be able to work out a first-class gravity plant. L. C. C.

TWO CONNECTED HOUSES.

I have two connected houses, running east and west, the south one 8x50 and the other 24x50, open between, and I wish to heat them with steam, using 1-inch pipe. I propose arranging the pipes as follows: Five runs under the north outside bed; five runs under the next raised bed, which is five feet eight inches wide; two runs on each side of the center or solid bed, to be used for callas, smilax and sweet peas; four runs on the posts between the houses, under the gutter and over a 7-foot solid bed, to be used for vegetables, and five runs under the outside bed at the south. The height of the north wall is five feet, with no glass. The height of the south wall is four feet four inches, with twenty inches of glass. There is glass in the gables to within thirty inches of the ground.

I have a twenty horse-power tubular boiler. Would it be more economical to get a smaller boiler? I can get a six horse-power tubular boiler here for $35, in good repair, but I propose doubling my glass area next summer. The boiler is to be on the level of the floor of the greenhouses. I also propose running my flow to the far end of the house and back to the near end, as all returns flow to the west and I have the boiler at the east end of the house.

The temperature outside occasionally falls to 30 degrees below zero in this northern Wisconsin climate. I wish to grow carnations and general stock. Are my plans right? C. A. H.

The amount of piping you propose using should be sufficient to maintain a temperature of from 60 to 65 degrees during severe weather, with eight to ten pounds of steam pressure. You do not state your plan for returning the water to the boiler. This is a problem to be carefully considered if the boiler is set on the level of the greenhouse floor. It means a lift of some kind. L. C. C.

INDIANAPOLIS.

State of Trade.

Business has been slow for the last week, but improvement is looked for in all lines this week, as the state fair generally starts things going and the opening of the schools next week brings everybody home again. The drought is still here and the "probable showers" that the weather man kindly puts in his forecasts do not come off.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the Indianapolis Florists' Club, which should have been held September 9, is put off till September 16, on account of the state fair. At this meeting the election of officers for the ensuing year will be held, after which there will be a supper. It is expected that a record crowd will be on hand to participate.

The Smith & Young Co. has completed its greenhouse, and also a fine residence on the place at Cumberland.

William Billingsley has added much to the appearance of his store by the addition of a fine show case and ice-box.

The State Florists' Association holds its monthly meeting September 10 and hopes for a good attendance of members from out of town. S.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

There are now plenty of asters to pick from. We have had some heavy rains recently, which have spoiled a good many blooms. Vick's and Semple's are the late varieties mostly grown; 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen retail are the prices asked. Roses are coming in of fair quality for the time of the year.

A few carnations are coming in from the newly housed stock; they are still short-stemmed; 35 cents per dozen retail is the price. Sweet peas are about all done; the hot summer months were too much for them.

Most of the growers here have finished housing their young carnation plants. They are looking good and healthy. It has been a fairly good growing season.

Mums are looking well and, from present indications, there will be a good supply this coming fall.

Various Notes.

Sunday, September 13, will be flower day here, and it is hoped that there will be a good call for flowers. This will be the second year of the movement here.

A. H. Ashley has taken a new partner into the firm.

R. H. Woodhouse has made extensive repairs the last season, and now has one of the most up-to-date places around here.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There is not much change in the cut flower trade—one day good and two days bad, with much more stock than can be disposed of. This makes it rather unsatisfactory for the wholesaler who has to handle the unsold stock. The retailers are not doing much, but are taking things easy, waiting for the trade to come.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club had an enthusiastic meeting Tuesday, September 1.

P. S. Randolph, of Randolph & McClements, had a fine exhibit of crotons. Mr. Randolph is enthusiastic about this class of plants and did not hesitate to give all information asked for by the growers regarding the propagation and growing of his stock.

Nathan Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., showed a fine collection of asters, which were examined separately and were very favorably commented on.

The W. C. Beckert prize of $10, for best collection of ten vegetables, went to Mr. Price, gardener for Mr. Bainsdale, with Jas. H. Park's gardener a close second.

The committee appointed to make a design for a float for the sesquicentennial showed designs, but the whole thing was turned over to the committee for settlement.

Schenley park, as usual, was there with a good exhibition of asters.

There were reports from the members who attended the convention and they were all complimentary. Even the fact that Mr. McFarland, in his views of Pittsburgh, showed only unsightly things from our city when he might have shown some of the grand improvements which have been made, is considered all right if they will help him teach the lesson he desires, and we have been working in this city for a long time trying to get rid of the very things which he showed in his pictures. In one case we went into court to have certain signs removed, but failed.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements are putting a plate glass side in the greenhouse adjoining their store, next to Baum street, and when it is finished it will add another 100 feet of show windows, making actually over 200 feet of show windows on that one corner.

Mr. Zieger was also very busy putting his place in shape for the coming season, with good results.

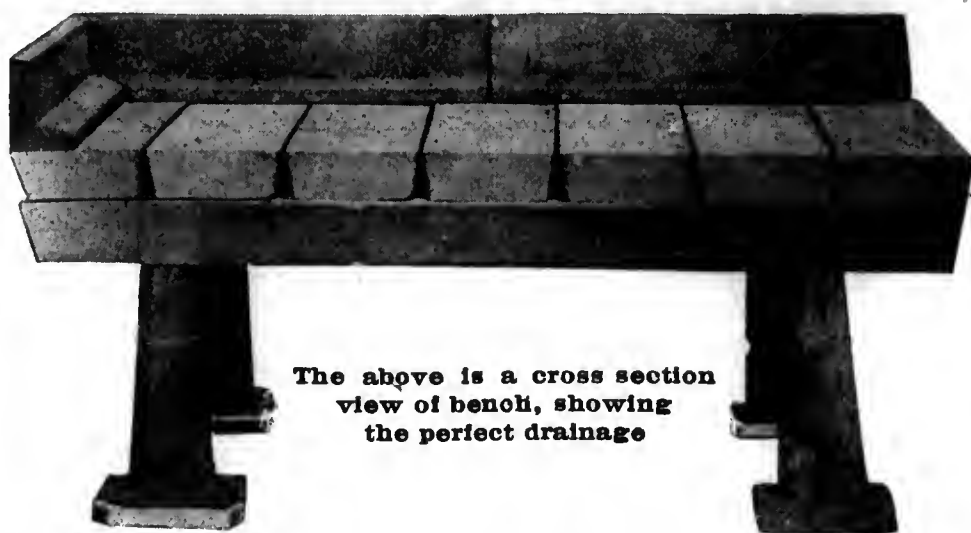

Frank Faulk says the cut flower business is anything but satisfactory, but he is working night and day in taxidermy, and the only thing bothering him now is whether it would be better to open a store in the city and take up this line as a business, or stick to his first love, flowers.

The Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. is sending the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. some fine yellow chrysanthemums, Kaiserin and Killarney. Hoo-Hoo.

MARION, IND.—Slack & Butterworth have succeeded to the business of Gunnar Teilmann, who has taken a government position.

We are completely sold out of carnation plants, thanks to one insertion of our advertisement in the REVIEW.—CLINTON FALLS NURSERY CO., Owatonna, Minn.

The Garland Concrete Bench

THE sections can be made during the dull season and set up in a hurry. The outfit is inexpensive and it is the cheapest and best bench on the market. It can be made at about the same cost as a good wooden bench. It can be used with cement posts, wood stringers, cement or tile bottoms and wood or cement sides. Complete mold outfits sold, or the mold for any part. Every florist should have at least one of these post molds, as the cement posts are cheaper than cedar and easier set, no hole being required; they are everlasting and can be used for complete cement construction if in the first place used with the balance of the bench made of wood. One of our largest growers has adopted this bench construction and now has 600 barrels of cement on the place to be used in this construction this winter.

For prices of the molds or other information, address

CHICAGO, ILL., October 31, 1907.

THE PULVERIZED MANURE CO.,
Union Stock Yards, Chicago.

Gentlemen: In reply to your inquiry of how we liked your Shredded Cattle Manure, would say that we took one car as a trial, then we gave you an order for two cars more and now we have just bought of you three hundred tons. We gave your manure a good trial test as follows:

We put nine hundred pounds on a bench three hundred feet long by five and one-half feet wide, as a mulch on Beauties, and on the next bench, of exactly the same size, planted also with Beauties, we put two thousand pounds of rough cattle Manure. After three days the rough Manure had become all washed out, nothing being left but straw and dirt, while your Shredded Manure lasted ten to twelve days and is still doing work.

In making manure water it is fully three or four times as strong as the rough Manure. The advantages of its even quality and the easy and unobjectionable way of handling the Manure, not a pound being wasted, make it cheaper in our opinion than the rough Manure which we can get for simply the cost of freight and loading. Respectfully, BASSETT & WASHBURN.

The Payne Dripless Steel Bar Greenhouse

One-half full size.

The Lightest Construction and Greatest Strength.

Pronounced by experts who have examined it to be the most decided step ahead in practical greenhouse construction. It consists almost entirely of steel, including the ridge, having just sufficient wood to hold the glass in place and protect it from the changes of outside temperature. The small wood bars employed are securely fastened to the "T" bars by means of bolts passing through both at frequent intervals. These bars are the means of insulating the glass from the iron and are arranged in such a way that they preserve the internal heat and prevent condensation; at the same time they are small enough to bring the "T" bars sufficiently close to the glass, to prevent the formation of ice at those points. There is absolutely no drip from this construction.

All of the wood is open to access at all times, and is not encased in steel, therefore, it has a thorough circulation of air around same, and can be painted at all times, thus making it beyond question the lightest and most durable construction yet manufactured. Greenhouses built on this principle are constructed with curved glass eaves, doing away with the shadows from the eave plate. The roofs are supported either by our skeleton iron rafter or by posts and the steel work throughout is galvanized. These features, combined with the minimum quantity of wood used, represent the highest type of greenhouse construction.

WE MANUFACTURE EVERY TYPE OF GREENHOUSES.

EVERYTHING FOR THE HEATING PLANT.

Our Steel Bar Houses are manufactured under patents granted and applied for. Let us estimate on your requirements.

High Quality, Not High Prices

WHENEVER we make a piece of material, it is our aim to turn out the very best that can be produced; high quality is our object, for nothing else will satisfy the man who wants to build a greenhouse and make a success. There can be no success without this striving after quality; without there be an effort to produce something better than was produced before. The man who believes in selling poor stock, low class goods, and gets what he can for his work, never progresses or succeeds permanently. We are working hard to make our construction more modern, to improve our patterns and our methods of manufacture; we must keep up with the times and stand at the head of the procession or drop out of the line. Prices are to be considered, of course, in everything, but it's quality that counts after all. You forget the price, but you don't forget the quality.

It's not what you pay, but what you get for what you pay--that is economy.

Geraniums

GERANIUMS IN THE SOUTH.

In the "Seasonable Suggestions" of the REVIEW of September 3 it was said that the first week of September is sufficiently early to start the propagation of geraniums in the southern states. Of course, I do not know what the writer means by southern states, but I will say that in Louisiana, or any other state of the same latitude, it is a loss of time to try to root zonal geraniums before October 15. Sweet-scented geraniums may be started two weeks earlier.

The suggestion of Mr. Pollard, of Eldora, Ia., is certainly the best adapted for our climate, but instead of using shallow flats we start the cuttings in the open ground. The way the cutting is cut does not amount to much. Still, it is better to cut it close under a joint. Any piece of well-worked garden soil will do. The more you expose them to the weather after being planted, the better it is. Even if the cuttings taken outside are a little soft, they will harden at once when the weather is fresh, without rotting, and form roots. As soon as they have roots, or even a good callus, they can be potted in small pots. Pot firmly. Use tight ground, but well open, so that the water goes out freely. Little animal manure or vegetable decay, if any, should be used. Bone meal is preferable.

In the south we grow all our geraniums in coldframes all winter until the blooming time, when we finish them in the greenhouse. Diseases or insects of any kind are entirely unknown to us.

M. M. L.

ROOTED GERANIUM CUTTINGS.

I have carefully read and noted what William Trillow and others say in the REVIEW of September 3, page 4, in regard to propagating geraniums, and I agree with Mr. Trillow that there is not enough discussion on handling this widely popular and large selling plant. According to Mr. Trillow, it is unusual to root successfully more than fifty or sixty per cent of geranium cuttings taken from plants grown outdoors, and the business is not especially profitable at this rate. Although he expects to improve on this, I think he will have to follow a different suggestion than was given by the other growers quoted in the REVIEW of September 3, page 4. The rooting of geraniums in pots or shallow flats filled with sand or soil and placed either in the greenhouse or outdoors after one thorough watering and then allowed to get dust-dry, would most likely be almost a total failure, because shallow flats filled with soil or sand, in which are placed the cuttings, and then placed outdoors in the sun and wind, would not last long—one wind or rain-storm would demolish all cuttings placed outdoors.

I start to take my cuttings from stock in the field the last week in August and generally try to finish the first week in September. While some of the readers of the REVIEW think that the cuttings taken from stock in the field are much softer, more apt to damp off and harder to root, I have found it to be just the contrary, with the exception of being more difficult to root, as my cuttings have always been much harder than those from stock grown under glass, consequently more difficult to root. I also claim that it is harder to root seventy-five per cent of geranium cuttings taken from outdoor stock than to root ninety-five per cent from stock grown under glass, simply because the stock grown outdoors is in a general mixed-up state, as part of the cuttings you will find to be soft, others medium and some quite hard. You cannot take such cuttings and put them on a bench in three or four inches of clean, sharp sand and give all the same treatment—to suit a batch of cuttings all in the same condition—but where the stock is grown under glass the cuttings produced will all be in about the same stage, namely, soft, and the whole batch will do well. These cuttings should be cut off, trimmed and laid on a shady bench for several hours before putting into sand. From such cuttings I can root from ninety-five to 100 per cent much easier and with more certainty than to root seventy-five per cent from stock grown outdoors. I also think that the only proper way of rooting geranium cuttings by the wholesale is on benches filled with clean, sharp sand to the depth of about three or four inches. Pound with a brick and run several heating pipes underneath.

Let us hear from those who find their cuttings to be softer from outdoor grown stock than indoor grown, also from those who are practicing the shallow-flat method, filled with soil or sand and placed outdoors. I hope that we will come to a better understanding in regard to successfully rooting geraniums by the million. E. A. MUCHOW.

UNDER GREENHOUSE BENCHES.

Are there any vegetables or flowers which could be profitably raised under greenhouse benches in a carnation house, also in a rose house? One bench opens to light and the other does not, but is not very dark. The distance from the soil to the hot water pipes suspended under the bench is twenty-one inches. I thought of trying rhubarb or asparagus, but am afraid carnation temperature is not high enough. R. E. G.

A carnation temperature is rather too low for asparagus and rhubarb. These should have 60 to 65 degrees at night and are better in the dark. Mushrooms would do if you can sufficiently darken them and not allow water to run on them. The fact that pipes are right over beds is the worst feature, as this would make the surface constantly dry. You could place many bulbous plants, such as tulips, narcissi and hyacinths, under the benches after they are well started and leave them there until flower buds show. Lilium longiflorum can also be grown there for some time. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

CATERPILLARS ON MUMS.

How would you prevent the striped little caterpillar or cutworm from eating off the tops of mums? I pick all off that I can find, but that does not save all the plants, and smoke does not seem to check them. A. W.

Persistent hand picking is the only real remedy for the caterpillar in question. Fumigating and spraying with soap or nicotine solutions will clean out aphids and thrips, but not this pest. A poisonous substance must be placed on the leaves to kill it. These will either discolor the leaves or burn them; therefore, hand picking, while slow and rather tedious, is the only safe remedy. C. W.

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

Water and Insects.

The buds on early varieties, and many of the exhibition kinds, are now swelling rapidly and a more careful use of the hose is called for. So long as the buds have not broken through their hard, husky covering they are all right, but once the petals push out, overhead spraying must be stopped or the water will lodge in the bud and rot the center.

Insects of all kinds must be entirely got rid of this month, because one cannot fumigate with safety when flowers are half developed. For the aphids I always use tobacco dust of the kind specially prepared for fumigating and know of nothing safer or cheaper. It is by no means unusual to see foliage badly burned by tobacco, and such stock not only sells poorly but is useless for exhibiting. I have never experienced any of this trouble when using the dust, which is why I always recommend it.

Red spider must be wiped out before the buds show color, or many flowers will be utterly spoiled. If any are showing on the foliage at this time, get a nozzle with a fine spray and wash every leaf so affected. Some growers use a spray pump and a solution of X L All or Ivory soap, but I have always argued that any preparation, if made strong enough to kill red spider, must injure the surface roots of the plants and just at present, when the buds are swelling, the plant needs every root to work and help push things along. Spider can easily be seen by the condition of the leaf, which always loses its dark, glossy appearance when spider is working on it.

Grasshoppers also must be closely watched at this time, as they have a playful habit of nipping through the stem just below the bud, or taking one side out of the bud, which is as bad, as either renders the flower useless. The mornings are cool now and the grasshopper can be caught easily enough with the fingers if one chooses to be an early bird and get around before the sun is up.

Feeding.

Now is the time that feeding is beneficial to the plant, because it is taken up by the bud and goes directly toward increasing the size of the flower. It seems unnecessary every year to caution against overfeeding, yet every year one sees or hears of losses from this cause. To feed lightly and all the time from now on is far better policy than giving a heavy dose and then changing off to clear water again. Liquid made from cow or sheep manure is fine, particularly if a chemical is used in between. Sulphate of ammonia is generally used for this purpose, though latterly I have been using a complete chemical, which seems effective.

A safe proportion of either of the chemicals is one pound in a 50-gallon barrel, and a bushel of sheep or cow manure in a bag will make a good liquid that will stand some thinning down for first applications.

The exhibitor with a perfect knowledge of his plants, and years of experience back of it, feeds much more heavily than could be recommended for general conditions, and, while the novice may be anxious to make a big showing, it is better to err on the safe side, and go slow till one is familiar with the effects of the different chemicals.

SPRAY OF CARNATIONS.

The spray of carnations is one of the funeral designs by C. H. Fox, Columbia avenue and Twenty-first street, Philadelphia. The groundwork for the spray is Cibotium Schiedeii, which is favored by Mr. Fox as a background. The carnations are Enchantress, arranged loosely to bring out the individual beauty of each flower. The spray is tied with gauze ribbon. PHIL.

A JAPANESE WINDOW.

Speaking of window decorating, I send herewith a photograph of a miniature Japanese tea garden, consisting of grounds, walks, lake, mountains, etc., which is placed in a window 9x10 feet, thinking it will interest readers of the REVIEW. It is in the window of the Weimar Floral Co., Mount Vernon, N. Y.

The entire piece of work is raised ten inches from the tile flooring of the window. The foundation is lumber, covered with club moss. The walks are made with sea gravel. The rustic tea houses, settees, bridges and sun shade are of twigs, the roofs of wheat straw. Small electric lights surmount the different posts or gateways which lead to the tea houses, and others to the mountains. In each house I have placed an electric light. In the lake there is an island of cement inlaid with large pebbles. On this island I have another house, reached by a rustic bridge. In the rear of the lake there is an inlet of water, also crossed by a bridge. Around different parts of the grounds there are rustic settees and miniature Japanese figures; a rustic well adds much to the show. In the lake I have a collection of Japanese fan-tail goldfish, also pond lilies. Running around the grounds are small, live terrapin, diamond-back turtles and southern chameleons, which are famous for the changing of their colors.

The mountain range consists of three mountains, first made of bent laths, to form the shapes, then covered with burlap, and last with sheet moss, the highest mountain being covered with white sand and powdered cement, to represent a barren mountain.

The plants used around the grounds are dwarf specimens of thuya, retinispora and pines. I also used variegated euonymus and Euonymus radicans pinned to the moss to represent the low-growing vegetation on the side of mountains.

The window has drawn immense crowds daily. SAMUEL J. CLARK.

SUGGESTIONS FOR WINDOWS.

An Idea From Museums.

During the last few months it was my privilege to visit two museums of importance. The impressions made upon my mind by the two exhibits are the best illustration at hand of the kinds of window display put out by florists of different tastes. The museum at A surpassed in the number and variety of specimens, preservation of which was apparently perfect, and the mechanical contrivances for protecting the individuals of the collection were all that could be asked. But it was a triumph of science without the touch of art. Hundreds of beautiful birds were mounted in a single case, with none but accidental regard for their homes and habits. They were roosted in rows, big and little, while across the aisle were fish and fish all headed the same way, neatly catalogued. All that a visitor could retain was a maze of birds, butterflies and a confusion of queer legs and fins. But it is no difficult matter to produce a long list of specimens viewed at the other museum. There was a group of Rocky Mountain goats climbing their native rocks, nibbling at the scanty grass under the snow. There was an eagle's nest constructed according to eagle orthodoxy, with the mother bird feeding her young. There were snipe, heron and birds of paradise, each mounted separately, according to its own locality and surroundings. There was a herd of buffalo, and their footprints behind them in the trail down to the drinking place. It is needless to add that there was a sufficient amount of sage grass in evidence. The pheasants were not only there in their Chinese plumage, but their haunts were there, too.

There could be no better object lesson for many a florist than to study this beautiful Burchert collection in City Park museum, Denver. If he could display his flowers as these animals are exhibited, he would show himself a capable artist.

A Sweet Pea Scheme.

Following along this line was an arrangement of sweet peas which would make an attractive window decoration. This was a plot in a Japanese tea garden: A rustic enclosure, about square, was set up of undressed poles, one horizontal piece three feet or less from the ground, supported at the corners by uprights. To these poles were trained low vines of a brilliant pink sweet pea, scantily planted, so that each vine showed its graceful lines of stem and flower.

A Japanese Garden Window.

The color of the flowers against the rough bark of the frame made a beautiful contrast. Within the enclosure were some small, low-growing plants of harmonious color. It was almost the simplest thing that could be constructed, but the charm of it will cling to memory for many a day. And that is what you want of a window—to cling in the memory of the passer-by and bring him back to purchase.

Use of Grasses.

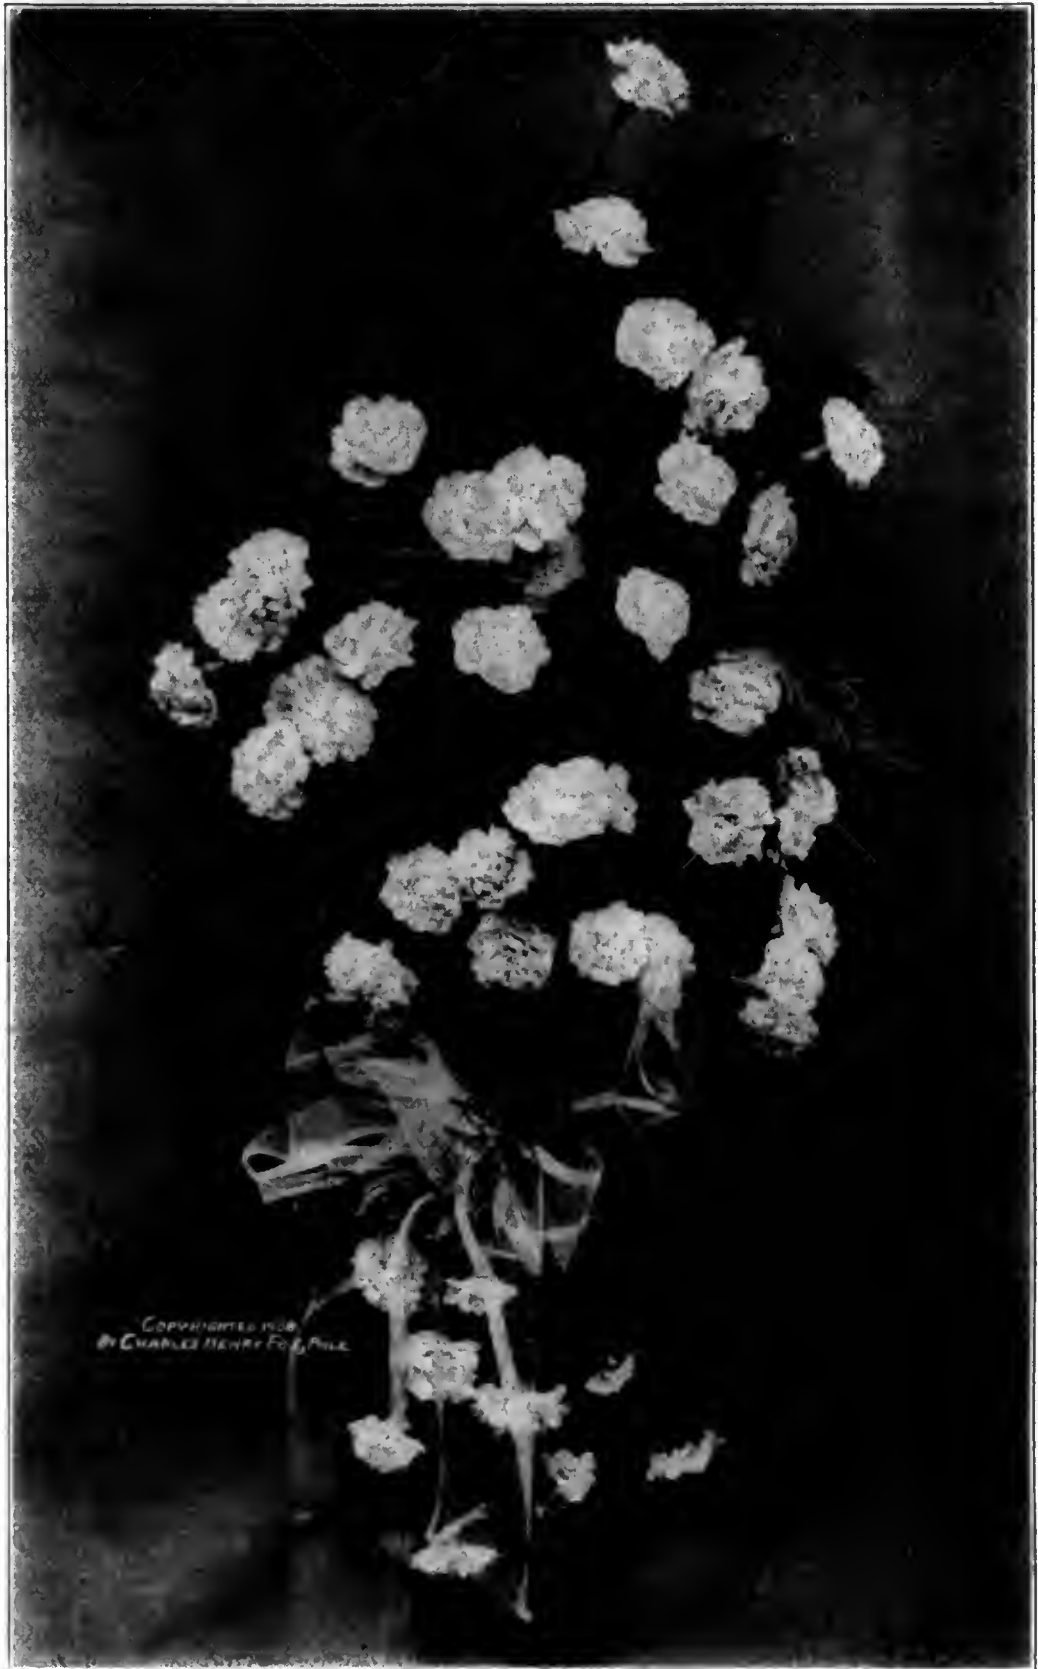

Wild grass will be found helpful for filling in landscape windows, red top and foxtail being common enough to be easily located almost anywhere. The large, cultivated kinds are beautiful with braid and rush baskets. Use like ribbon for wrapping handles and tying flowers. Carry out the idea farther, sometime when flowers are scarce or you wish a radical change in your window. Have an exhibit which shall include many of the grass family, the above as well as our native cereals, pampas grass, ribbon grass, etc. Arrange on a matting background, in sheaves, patches or sheaves. Trim or fill Indian baskets with a few wild roses or other field flowers. Announce the proceeding on a neat placard. This plan is good for a combination seed and flower store, with some grass seeds added.

Figures in Windows.

Occasionally a figure introduced into the window scheme is attractive, as one bulb window observed last fall, which brought excellent selling results. A pile of new bulbs was placed conspicuously near the front of the window, while behind it was a figure to represent a little Dutch boy in overalls and blouse, with a spade. He stood in the act of digging in the soil, getting ready to plant the bulbs. The Dutch boy grew to be quite a favorite in and about the store, and made his appearance again, once picking cotton, and again climbing a fence with his arms full of flowers to which he had just helped himself in a very informal manner. The practice of introducing any object as conspicuous as a figure, however, should be indulged at rare intervals and only appropriately.

Either on account of a taste not entirely unperverted, or to cater to a taste which longs for enough flowers to fill all the space in sight, it is often judged good policy to add some feature to the upper space of the window, even after the decoration proper has been completed. In a landscape or water window an overhanging branch with flowers or fruit attached will serve the purpose, something which has a distinct connection with the plan of the window.

Sometimes a window made up of hanging vases, baskets, etc., is a good arrangement. Suspend raffia-covered vases, Japanese hangers, or round-bottomed baskets at various distances above the floor, some nearly touching it, others as high as the eye line, and the intervening spaces dotted with the different sizes. If convenient or practicable, cover the floor with one large or a number of small mirrors as a background. Do not decorate the mirror space; reserve it for reflection. Or suspend one immense hanging vase against a handsome, soft background of silk or other good fabric. Let the hanging vase come quite low and be the source of garlands and tracteries of green and flowers extending irregularly in different directions from the central point. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

GREENHOUSE LUMBER FREIGHTS.

Manufacturers of greenhouse material have recently been making an effort to secure changes in the classification of their shipments to effect a saving in freights for their customers. In this connection, the following letter from the A. Dietsch Co., Chicago, addressed to the Official Classification Committee, New York, will be of interest:

"We have been referred to your committee, and wish you would kindly inform us if you have jurisdiction in the matter which we wish to submit to you below, and let us know your ruling in regard to the same. We are manufacturers of greenhouse material and as such we are working up considerable lumber in 1½-inch and 2-inch planks, shaping the edges of said lumber so as to make it fit for the purpose for which it is intended, such as plates, gutter, ridge, etc. We have been in correspondence with the inspector of the Pennsylvania railway, of this city, in regard to certain lumber which had been worked at both edges but otherwise was plain on the upper and lower face, and he ruled that the same had to be classified the same as carpenters' molding, while he stated at the same time that other lumber also worked on both edges to make it fit for flooring, siding, etc., etc., would take lumber rate. We cannot see any justice in this ruling. If strips of 1x4, etc., worked at both edges, take the lumber rate, why should 1½x4, 2x4, 2x6 and wider, pay a higher charge? These said pieces were bundled in the same way as is customary with flooring, and since there is no difference in any way, so far as handling, weight or responsibility is concerned, his ruling seems to be unjustified. You will please note that the shipment in question was not end-matched. We would be thankful, however, also, to receive your views in case these pieces had been end-matched, as hardwood flooring is being worked."

TEMPERATURE.

At what temperature should Killarney, Richmond and Enchantress be kept?
E. P. L.

The best night temperature for these varieties is from 56 to 58 degrees, with ventilation whenever it is possible.

RIBES.

ROSE LEAF BLIGHT.

There seems to be some trouble with some of our roses, the Richmond, Killarney, Brides and Maids. The Golden Gate in the same house do not show it. We had it last year in winter and now we see it on young stock that has been growing most thriftily so far. It is not black spot, but it might be called brown spot. It shows on the young, tender shoots and, by the time the bud has developed, the leaves below show big brown spots, or some of them dry up or fall off entirely, or sometimes the bud and top wither, as if for lack of water. A leaf at first shows a darkish spot, usually toward the tip and from the upper side, but in time the substance of the spot is gone, leaving a dead looking place on the leaf, if it does not spread to the entire leaf.

We enclose some leaves, but are afraid they will not be in condition to show the trouble. I shall be most grateful if you can name the trouble and cause, and any remedy or treatment.
Z. K. J.

The leaves were somewhat shriveled when they reached me, but they furnished sufficient evidence to show the effects of some fungous trouble. The fungus appears to be the rose leaf blight, which, if unchecked, will cause a lot of trouble in a short time. It may not be this identical fungus, but it would be safe to treat it as such.

Spray with the carbonate of copper compound, using five ounces of carbonate of copper to three quarts of ammonia and sixteen gallons of water. Spray once a week, using a nozzle that makes a fine spray, and wet every part of the leaves. This is a sovereign remedy for many of the fungi which trouble the rose under glass.
RIBES.

A SLOW START.

We are mailing you under separate cover a rose plant and sample of the soil the stock is growing in. They do not seem to be doing as well as we think they ought to, and would like to trouble you for a little help if you can give us any, as to how we shall proceed to better their conditions.

The soil was taken from a pasture lot that had not been plowed for twenty-three years, the sod being plowed under in March and replowed in April. About the middle of May we hauled it near the greenhouses and piled it up and mixed in about one-fourth of cow manure. The plants were small 2 1/4-inch stock and were planted on the benches June 25. The black soil you will find is the soil they were in when we got them from Chicago. About ten days after planting we gave them a sprinkling of lime and raked it in, and in about three weeks we raked in a sprinkling of bone meal. They have had plenty of ventilation and have not been overwatered. For the last three weeks we have watered them once a week with nitrate of soda, using a 4-inch potful to fifty gallons of water. Are we right in doing this? The varieties are Bride, Maid, Richmond, and Uncle John. The Bride and Maid are doing better than the others, but have not made the growth we think they should. I have been growing plants all my life, under glass and outside, but this is my first attempt at roses under glass, so anything you can tell us to do to make these roses grow will be greatly appreciated.

S. F. P.

The soil, though a little deficient in fiber, is excellent for rose culture and the proportion of cow manure is right. The sprinkling of bone meal would also be beneficial. It is, however, a mistake to try to force growth on such young stock by the use of nitrates. The black prairie soil in which the young plants were originally potted, although presenting a poor appearance, has nothing to do with the present condition of the plants, as it is capable of producing high-grade stock.

Cultivate freely, at least once a week, to the depth of an inch; keep the plants tied up; give plenty of water; night temperature 56 to 58 degrees; day temperature 75 to 80 degrees, always with ventilation whenever possible; keep the syringe going to keep down spider and produce a humidity in the atmosphere.

As the stock is suffering from no disease, they will soon outgrow the present weakness.

PLANTS FOR FLORISTS' GROUNDS

The Irises.

Those florists who have home grounds are missing an opportunity if they do not plant a bed of irises. Such a one as shown in the accompanying illustration, even if it be not so large, will, when in bloom in spring, be the means of bringing a good number of orders for similar planting.

Too many people still think of the iris as the old blue flag of the fields and do not appreciate the beauty of the modern iris. The accompanying illustration is from a border of German irises in the garden of Z. G. Simmons, at Kenosha, Wis., where John H. Wilcott is gardener. This is an ideal spot for the iris, as it faces the east and is backed by a hedge of mulberry trees, which were planted for the purpose of screening the neighboring back yards from the view. The hedge also serves the purpose of keeping the ground moist and breaking the strength of the afternoon sun. This gives a splendid border effect the entire length of the garden and is also ornamental in spring, before the garden is all planted. The soil is a rich, sandy loam and the irises are planted in large clumps. Mr. Wilcott spreads plenty of manure on the ground early in the spring and, if sufficient rain does not fall, he gives the ground a good soaking with the hose. This starts the irises into immediate growth.

The Yucca.

The yucca is another plant with which the florist can do good business, but which is now largely neglected. Almost anyone who has room for the plants will order a few if he sees on the florist's grounds such a bed as is shown in the accompanying illustration, also from a photograph made on the grounds of Mr. Simmons, at Kenosha. This bed contains about fifty plants, but only one corner of the bed shows in the illustration. They are 8 years old and planted in the poorest sandy soil on the place, which suits the yucca excellently; they are six to eight feet high. Early in the spring a liberal supply of manure is spaded into the ground and the bed is given a liberal soaking. After this little attention is needed until the next spring, as they stand a great deal of dry weather. Mr. Wilcott has the bed planted with the butterfly weed, Asclepias tuberosa, and the cardinal flower, Lobelia cardinalis, which give a succession of good effects, as all three are hardy plants. The yuccas are planted two and one-half feet apart and remain in bloom nearly all summer.

The florist who wishes to handle yuccas can buy a stock of plants for his own grounds from almost any leading nursery. He then can propagate an abundance of stock for sale, from offsets or by using stem-cuttings, or the rhizomes, which may be cut into short lengths and rooted in the cutting bench.

STOCKS AND SNAPDRAGON.

Could I sow ten weeks' stocks now and have them blooming in pots at Easter, 1909? What temperature? Also the same for snapdragon? R. E. G.

It is rather too early to sow stocks for Easter. Start them early in December. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night will suit both these and snapdragons. Sow the latter at once, or, better still, if you can secure good cuttings, get them into a propagating bench at once. The snapdragons will not give you much flower before Easter if sown now. C. W.

FLOWER SUNDAY.

Flower Sunday is observed in a large number of cemeteries, especially in the east, as a second Memorial day, and wherever given the proper trial is proving a great success. It is up to the cemetery officials to start the movement. They should send out a printed notice to each lot owner and should make the same preparations as are made for Memorial day. Where this has been done for two or three years in succession, it has been found that more flowers were brought to the cemeteries on Flower Sunday than ever were on Memorial day. One reason for this, of course, is that so many more outdoor flowers are available, but wherever flowers are used the florist gets his share of the benefit.

In speaking of the observance of the day, Charles H. Vinal, chairman of the cemetery board, at New Bedford, Mass., said:

"We take the Sunday after Labor day for the observance of Flower Sunday. It is the time just before the winter's frost, when nearly every family has an abundance of flowers growing in private gardens. On Memorial day, as a rule, there are not many flowers in this section, and the people have to resort to the greenhouses for their decorations. This, of course, necessitates an extra expense which Flower Sunday avoids. The board is having its lawns and plots trimmed so that Flower Sunday decorators will have surroundings that look as well as on Memorial day."

DAISIES FOR CUT FLOWERS.

Will you kindly tell me how to grow daisies for cut flowers, what temperature is required, what varieties are best, etc.? B. D. S.

We presume you refer to the Paris daisies, Chrysanthemum frutescens, more commonly known as marguerites. These may be had in bloom from Christmas until Memorial day. Cuttings rooted now will give you nice blooming plants for Easter. For early blooming, in December, January and February, cuttings should be rooted in the spring and carried over summer in pots, pinching the shoots regularly and removing all flower buds as they appear. A temperature such as you give carnations will suit daisies, but they can be grown 10 degrees lower if required. The heat should never exceed 55 degrees at night and 50 degrees is better.

If you want quantities of fine flowers for cutting, plant your stock in shallow benches, or stand the pots on soil and let them root through. The best whites are Queen Alexandra and Coronation. There are two good yellows; one named Etoile d'Or has smaller flowers than the other variety, but flowers more freely and makes a nicer pot plant. C. W.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Stem-rot.

Before you put on your carnation supports you will find it a good plan to replace whatever plants may have died out on account of stem-rot or for some other cause. If you were wise you potted up a few plants of each variety at benching time. You can always count on a few plants dying out, and plants lifted at the time the benches were planted will be well established now and will plant without a check, while plants from the field will wilt quite badly and will lag behind those originally planted for a long time.

It is a strange thing, the experiences one hears about from different growers. For instance, a few days ago the introducer of one of last season's novelties inquired as to our experience along that line with his variety. On our place, as well as his own place, the variety has done unusually well so far; not more than two per cent have been lost from various causes since the rooted cuttings arrived last February. Another grower has replanted more plants of this variety than he originally planted. This same introducer, however, complains of the same trouble with Beacon, he having replanted about as many as he first planted. Now, why do these things occur? The soil used on both benches is the same, I understand. The more one studies this disease the more perplexing it seems to become. Recent observations convince me that this fungus attacks the stem of the plant and not the roots, as is claimed by some. A strong and conclusive proof was found in plants which rotted off well above the ground and sprouted afterward from eyes below the rotted place. Plants like this, when lifted, showed no unhealthy condition of the roots, they being as plump and white inside as any other. Of course, where there is a complete suspension of growth, as where no eyes break into growth, the roots will soon become clogged and unhealthy, giving the impression that they are probably the cause of the trouble. I find that other growers have made the same observations.

But to get back to the replanting. The safest way is to remove most of the soil immediately around where a plant stem-rotted, and fill up with new soil before replanting. I have seen two and three batches of plants destroyed where the soil was not removed; but, on the other hand, I have seen hundreds of plants set right in the same soil where plants had died out and go right ahead as though it was new soil. That would indicate that a plant must be in proper condition to take the disease. Plants established in pots will be less liable to attack than plants lifted from the field just prior to being set in the vacancies. Air-slaked lime sprinkled around will help some, too.

GRUBS IN CARNATION BEDS.

About four weeks ago—August 6—I planted a solid bed of large, fine Eucharist. They never wilted, but started finely and are coming on nicely. About ten days ago I found grubworms in the bed. Will you please tell me how to get rid of them? H. W.

I suppose the grubs you complain of are the common white grub, which is usually found in sod soil. This grub is generally found in limited numbers, but they are very destructive if allowed to work unchecked. We usually dig up the soil under a wilted plant and destroy the grub, which is easily found if the trouble is caused by that pest. We have never had them in any great numbers, and have not found it necessary to resort to any other method of destroying them. I have been told that the poisoned bait recommended for cutworms is quite effective against this grub. This bait is made of bran, molasses and either arsenic or Paris green.

If they have become very numerous and a menace to your crop, I would advise you to use carbon bisulphide against them. That will surely destroy them. For full information on using it, send to the United States Department of Agriculture for Farmers' Bulletin No. 145, "Carbon Bisulphide as an Insecticide," by W. E. Hinds. That will tell you all about it better than I could do it.

We have seen slaked lime used with good effect. Either sprinkle it on the beds and water it in, or else make lime water and saturate the beds with it. Use a peck of lime in fifty gallons of water.

A. F. J. B.

SCALE ON OLEANDER.

I have an oleander tree that has scale on it. What shall I do to get rid of them? Is there any solution I can use to destroy them? A. R.

The only way to entirely remove scale from your plant is to sponge it over. This is, of course, slow and tedious work. To make it presentable it will, however, be better to do this. If you want to kill the scale, put a wineglass of kerosene to each three gallons of water. Keep it agitated with the syringe and wet every part of the tree with it, or you can use such special insecticides as fir tree oil, or lemon oil, which are soluble in water diluted in thirty to fifty times their own bulk. Once you get your plant clean, use a good force of water on it frequently, and to make sure that no scale, bug or other pests harbor in it, give it a syringing every three months with one of the soluble oils mentioned.

C. W.

Mignonette.

Seeds of mignonette sown in beds or benches early in August will now be making rapid headway. Any necessary thinning out of the seedlings should have been done while the plants were small. If neglected, it is better even now to attend to it. You cannot get fine spikes where the plants are left too close together.

Some of the shoots will now be running up to flower. It is better to let these show the flower buds before pinching them back quite hard. If done while the shoots are short and tender, the new breaks will be somewhat weak. The larvæ of the white butterfly are troublesome at present and a careful search should be made for these green pests at least once a day, or they will soon ruin a lot of plants.

Keep the surface soil scratched over and, as mignonette resents anything in the nature of coddling, leave on full ventilation at all times until frost threatens and even then, if a minimum of 40 degrees is maintained, it will be sufficiently high.

Calceolarias.

The cool September nights are needed to galvanize life into the herbaceous calceolarias. They simply refuse to grow satisfactorily in hot weather, such as we have experienced a large part of the summer. A frame where the little plants can be shaded from direct sunshine, with ample ventilation all the time, is what calceolarias require.

Do not on any consideration let them become potbound before giving them a shift. The compost in the early stages may be largely leaf-mold and loam, but for the later pottings some well pulverized cow or sheep manure should be added. Finely broken charcoal and sharp sand are also helpful ingredients, and potting should not be done too firmly. If packed in fresh tobacco stems, the arch enemy of this useful spring flowering plant will not be able to get a foothold.

Freesias.

The present is a good time to get in a further batch of freesia bulbs. Nothing is to be gained by delaying the latest plantings after October 1. These late batches never seem to produce the vigorous spikes of the earlier ones, the bulbs, no doubt, losing much of their vitality from being out of the soil so long.

Where Christmas flowers are wanted, the earliest batch should now be placed on a shelf in a light, sunny house kept at 52 to 55 degrees at night. Remember that freesias are more often ruined by too little water at the roots than too much, and when watering these see that the pans or flats are thoroughly soaked. Scratch the soil occasionally and pull out the little weeds, which will be plentifully showing themselves by this time.

Sweet Peas.

The early sowings of sweet peas are now commencing to climb up their supports and will flower a little by the first week in October. They will grow better and make stockier haulms as the solar heat declines. Plants should not have been left any thicker than two or three inches apart and, if you want fine flowers, have courage to thin where they have germinated too thickly. It will pay you well in the end.

This is a good time to make an additional sowing in pots where it is intended to follow early chrysanthemums with them. Keep in a cool, airy house, or, better still, a frame. The seeds will soon germinate and care must be taken to give the little seedlings light supports before they fall over. There can be no better varieties to sow now than Christmas Pink, Mont Blanc and Watchung. It is too early to start any of the regular outdoor varieties, but any of the Zvolanek sorts can be sown at any time.

Do not give sweet peas any fire heat until obliged to. They will not be injured by the temperature falling to 45 degrees on cold mornings, or even a degree or two lower.

Marguerites.

Excellent cuttings of marguerites are now obtainable on stock plants outdoors. Get in a good batch before frost comes. These can be grown along into shapely 6-inch or 8-inch pot specimens for Easter. The yellow varieties, beautiful as they are, appear to make much blind wood and give much fewer cuttings than the white sorts. If some of the old plants are cut back fairly hard now, they will soon give a nice crop of suitable cuttings. Select those which do not show flower buds. These latter will never make plants.

Plants carried over the summer in pots make useful Christmas plants. Pinching of these may now be discontinued. Keep them outdoors as late as possible, and when housed let them have a cool but sunny house.

Smilax.

It will not pay to delay stringing the benches of smilax. Unless this is attended to before the plants start to run, there will be an unenviable job in trying to disentangle them. If the plants are looked over once in three or four days, there will be little danger of their running wild.

If you are carrying old plants over, it is to be hoped you have not forgotten to give them a mulch of well decayed manure. Sometimes cutworms are destructive on smilax. Lay poisoned sweet bran as a bait for them if they appear.

Stevia.

While a mere breath of frost will kill stevia, it should be kept outdoors as late as possible. The plants all should have been lifted and potted before this time and should stand in a sunny place. As the shoots are extremely brittle and would be broken or bent by wind storms, place a moderately stout stake in each pot and tie the leading shoots to it. When threatened frost necessitates the housing of stevia, place in the coolest house you have.

Propagation.

Frost may come any time after the middle of September, so that it will be good policy to get in batches of cuttings of any bedding plants which may have been overlooked, especially those of a tender nature, including coleus, achyranthes, alternantheras, heliotropes, erions, dracenas, pandanus and abutilons.

All of these root better where they can have a little bottom heat. Do not trouble to lift any scarlet salvias. They are so much more easily raised from seed.

Peonies.

September is the best month in the year to divide and transplant peonies. The ground for them should be liberally manured and plowed deeply. Plants should be set three to four feet apart each way. The more room they have, the better chance is there to properly cultivate them. Do not bury the eyes over four inches deep, and if you do any retail trade in peonies, see that they are correctly labeled. Better discard some of the poor, washed-out colors and procure from a reliable dealer varieties of pleasing shades, which are sure to attract purchasers.

Dutch Bulbs.

The early shipments of Dutch bulbs are coming to hand and appear to be of fine quality. Unpack and lay the bulbs in boxes on arrival until you find time to get them into the soil. Prepare a good pile of compost and get flats, pots and pans in readiness for compost. Use well decayed cow or horse manure one-third, or in place of it a similar proportion of that from spent hotbeds, and two-thirds fibrous loam. All bulbs like a good proportion of sand in the soil and a few shovels of soot and some fine charcoal are also useful ingredients, although good bulbous flowers can be grown without these latter. It is better not to use bone or any chemical fertilizers. These will do more harm than good. In a later issue, the special culture of the various Dutch bulbs will be referred to in detail.

PEONY WAGNER PARK.

At Sidney, O., the Wagner Park Conservatories has for several years devoted much of its attention to peonies, and it has found these one of its most satisfactory items of stock. Although a large line of hardy material is grown for landscape gardening, there are few items which afford such opportunity for profits as does the peony: cut blooms in the spring, autumn wholesale deliveries of roots to other growers of cut blooms, and plantations in practically every job of landscaping.

In addition to trying out all the leading sorts in general cultivation, the Wagner Park Conservatories has raised some new sorts of its own, which have been introduced to the trade. One of these is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is named for Wagner Park, where B. P. Wagner established his business. Mr. Wagner says that this peony resembles the American Beauty rose and he considers it to stand among peonies as the Beauty does among roses. It is a large, well-formed flower and can be cut on stems of great length. Another valuable variety introduced from this place is named Mary Elizabeth. It is blush white with creamy center, a strong grower, with large flowers on long, strong stems.

VIOLETS IN COLDFRAMES.

Can California and Princess of Wales violets be grown as satisfactorily as Marie Louise in coldframes? How should they be treated? Can the same bed be run a second year? B. D. S.

The single violets, like Princess of Wales and California, do just as well in frames as the doubles. They are better not planted before October. Treat precisely as you would doubles, once they are in the frames. They will not afford many flowers until the middle or end of February, but always give a heavy spring crop of dark blue flowers. Give them soil which has plenty of rotted manure in it. Air freely on all favorable occasions, and give a light shading when the flowers come on plentifully, to hold the color. It will not pay to run the same plants a second year. Use rooted runners. Plant outside late in April and lift in fall for best results. C. W.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business shows a little improvement, but prices remain much the same. Outdoor flowers continue abundant, especially asters, which are of splendid quality; Semple's, Vick's and Giant Comet especially so. Victoria is much seen also. Gladioli are not so abundant, but ample for all requirements. Quite a few tuberose, cosmos, dahlias and other outdoor flowers are also seen.

Roses are steadily improving in quality. American Beauties are making slightly better prices, but the general run of roses remain much the same. Carnations are not yet abundant, but some of these from early plants or indoor-grown stock have good stems. There is a good sale for all grades of carnations.

Violets have appeared, a few of both Princess of Wales and Lady Hume Campbell being seen, but are small yet. Chrysanthemums are seen only in small lots and with the abundance of fine asters are really not needed. Lilies and lily of the valley are each in moderate supply, and there is a fairly steady demand for green stock.

In the way of choice flowers, Vanda caerulea, Cattleya Harrisoniae and Oncidium Rogersii are seen, among others; also some nice dendrobiums, phalaenopsis, gardenias and Bouvardia Humboldtii at the better class stores. Plant trade is improving a little, there being more inquiry for palms and foliage plants, but it is too early for real activity.

Dahlia Exhibition.

The exhibition held September 11, 12 and 13 was chiefly notable for the magnificent display of dahlias from R. & J. Farquhar & Co. This exhibit was so arranged as to bring out the most beautiful blending of colors, being in the nature of a big floral design, with palms and other foliage plants as a background, broken by handsome vases of dahlias on large stems. Some 20,000 dahlia flowers were used and the display was the finest of the kind ever seen in Boston and probably has not been equaled in America. All classes of dahlias were represented, several hundred varieties being shown.

In the competitive classes there was keen competition, the flowers being of splendid quality. The chief prize winners were J. K. Alexander, Mrs. H. A. Jahn, W. D. Hathaway, F. L. Tinkham, Taole Dahlia Gardens, Joseph Thorpe, W. H. Simmonds, W. H. Cruft and Dorchester Dahlia Farm. The W. W. Rawson silver cup for best display by a private gardener was won by W. A. Riggs. The exhibition of dahlias far outclassed any previous ones held in Boston.

Blue Hill Nurseries were first and third for thirty varieties of herbaceous plants, Bellevue Nurseries being second. First-class certificates were awarded to L. W. Goodell for a splendid strain of verbenas, and to Peirce Bros. for Chrysanthemum Golden Glow. Harvard Botanic Gardens had a fine display of annuals and perennials; F. J. Rea, herbaceous plants; B. Hammond Tracy, a splendid lot of gladioli; W. C. Winter, Mrs. E. M. Gill and William Whitman, general displays. F. W. Fletcher received honorable mention for Marguerite asters, also for Violet Baronne Rothschild, and an improved form of Physostegia Virginiana named grandiflora. H. A. Dreer received a similar award for a tank of aquatics.

C. W. Parker had a collection of twenty varieties of hardy roses, Wilfrid Wheeler asters, Vick's Pink, and helianthus; the Boston Park department, flowers of tamarix, buddleia, etc., and Gen. S. M. Weld, Thomas Coles gardener, a collection of herbaceous plants. Mrs. J. C. Whitin, W. McAllister gardener, had the best collection of foreign grapes. There were excellent displays of seasonable fruits and vegetables.

Club Meeting.

There was a splendid gathering of 120 members September 15, in Horticultural hall, when club meetings were resumed. Six new members were elected. In place of a regular lecture there were vacation experiences from quite a number of the members. M. A. Patten spoke of S. A. F. convention and a Canadian trip; Robert Cameron talked on Nova Scotia; Geo. Butterworth on horticultural sights in England and Holland; Kennett Finlayson on Bar Harbor, and Wm. Downs on Amherst College. Mr. Farquhar made a report on the landscape classes.

Messrs. Palmer, Wheeler and D. Finlayson were appointed a committee to draft resolutions on the death of Emil Johansson. Several members spoke feelingly on his untimely death.

The committee appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of Warren W. Rawson, a member of the club, presented resolutions which were unanimously adopted. The committee consisted of Thomas J. Grey, J. A. Pettigrew and William P. Rich.

The committee on the late picnic, through Peter M. Miller, made a financial report, which was accepted and votes of thanks were passed to all prize donors. There were also short reports on field days at Amherst Agricultural College and the New England Nurseries.

Exhibits included Dendrobium Phalaenopsis from D. Finlayson, Violet Baroness Rothschild and Marguerite asters from W. S. Fletcher, and Bouvardia Humboldtii from W. N. Craig.

Refreshments were served and the evening proved a pleasant one for all who attended.

Various Notes.

F. W. Fletcher continues to make a specialty of Physostegia Virginiana, which, under the name of Texas heath, has attained quite a little market popularity.

The attendance at the dahlia show at Horticultural hall was much the largest of the present year. Interest in dahlias continues to grow apace in Massachusetts.

The annual fruit and vegetable show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will occur October 10 and 11. The annual chrysanthemum show comes November 6, 7, 8 and 9.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are receiving some fine Beauties and other roses, and their lily of the valley is excellent. They are anticipating good fall business.

The various seed houses have received a good consignment of Dutch bulbs and expect sales to equal those of a year ago, more especially in kinds for outdoor planting.

Funeral services for the late Joseph de Lara Galvin occurred September 10. There was a large concourse of mourners, including quite a number in the trade, and floral souvenirs were numerous and beautiful. W. N. CRAIG.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market last week was dull; the appearance of the wholesale houses showed plainly that little was going on among the retailers. The weather has been warm, and we have not had a drop of rain for a month. Even funeral work was scarce all last week. The opening of the public schools brought in a little extra work Tuesday, September 8, but the wholesalers said it was one of the duller weeks we have had for a long time.

There are plenty of roses and fairly good stock in all varieties, with considerably longer stems, but the hot spell made them soft. Carnations, too, are coming better, with plenty of them, but still short in stem. Asters have come in heavily and thousands found their way to the dump. The same can be said of tuberose stalks and other outdoor stock. There are plenty of dahlias, too. All greens are plentiful.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club spent Thursday afternoon, September 10, at the home of J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; it was the most enthusiastic as well as the best attended meeting of the year. The members met at the east approach to the bridge and left at 1 p. m., arriving in Edwardsville at 2 p. m. Before the meeting the members inspected this well-kept place of 50,000 feet of glass. We found the young stock looking fine, especially Ivory, Killarney, Alice Roosevelt, Rhea Reid and Perle. In carnations, White Enchantress, Queen Louise, Enchantress and Beacon looked good, and there also was a good house of chrysanthemums. Those who had not seen Mr. Ammann's place for a couple of years were surprised at the great improvements and all said that they had never seen a better arranged or a better kept place.

The meeting was held in the packing house, next to the office, and fifty were present when President Young called to order. After routine business the following names were presented for membership: W. H. Ossie, Louis Mourer, Julius Koenig, J. H. Kahrs, L. A. Giger, O. H. J. Landel, T. F. Barrman, L. W. Spangler, L. W. Schviever, Sr., and L. W. Schviever, Jr. Two members were reinstated to membership. J. J. Burke was elected to membership.

The president then called upon C. C. Sanders and J. J. Beneke to take charge of the installation of the new officers. Henry Ostertag, trustee, was the first officer installed, followed by Secretary Bentzen, Vice-president Denker and W. C. Young, who was re-elected president. Treasurer Weber has not as yet returned from Europe. He will be installed in office at the next meeting. All the officers made speeches on taking their respective chairs, the address of President Young being quite lengthy. W. C. Smith was requested to read a paper at the next meeting on "In What Way Socially Can the Members of This Club Be Brought Closer Together?"

There was quite a discussion on the advisability of the club holding six evening meetings and six afternoon meetings during the next year, which was finally left to the trustees to report at the October meeting.

Before adjournment Mr. and Mrs. Ammann were called before the meeting and presented with a handsome cut-glass water set. It was a complete surprise.

An excellent lunch was served.

On the way home the younger members had a good time in the smoking-car and initiated Mr. Burke and several other new members in regular form.

Various Notes.

Adolph G. Fehr, of Belleville, Ill., recently spent a day in the city, buying supplies. Mr. Fehr reports his summer trade good, with a great deal of funeral work.

C. Young & Sons Co. have issued a handsome fall catalogue and orders for bulbs are coming in daily.

W. C. Smith & Co. have finished their improvements, which give them much more room.

Mrs. James Young served as a good Samaritan last week, when a motorman was crushed in a collision in front of her home, 5508 DeGiverville avenue. She made him as comfortable as possible until the city ambulance came to remove him to the hospital. The spectators were loud in their praise of Mrs. Young for her efforts to comfort the injured man.

Dr. A. S. Halstead, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, Ill., has invited all the florists to attend the county fair at Belleville this week, September 15 to 18. He says that his company will make a big display of decorative stock at the fair.

Richard Frow & Sons are building two new houses at their new place in Normandy. They will run the old place on the Natural Bridge road until next summer, when the property will be sold for building lots.

William Winter, of Kirkwood, is running for school director and it is the wish of all local, as well as the Kirkwood florists, that he be elected.

John Steidle, at Central, will have a fine cut of roses, carnations and violets this season. Mr. Steidle's entire production is handled by Fred C. Weber.

J. W. Dunford, of Clayton, has fine prospects for carnations and violets, which are mostly consumed at his retail establishment, the Gallagher Flower Shop.

Henry Felter, on Lexington avenue, will have a fine lot of pot chrysanthemums, as usual, this fall.

F. H. Weber and Mrs. Weber have returned from their trip to Germany and report that they spent a most enjoyable summer abroad. J. J. B.

OBITUARY.

William Butcher.

Stricken with heart trouble while riding his bicycle September 9, William Butcher, of Providence, R. I., 73 years old, fell heavily to the street and died a few minutes afterwards at the Rhode Island Hospital.

Mr. Butcher was one of the oldest and best-known florists at Providence. He had just left his greenhouse at 38 Pitman street when he was seen to sway and then pitch headforemost over the handlebars of his bicycle. A passer-by went to his assistance, but finding that he was unconscious summoned an ambulance from the hospital. Mr. Butcher was taken to that institution, but died before he could be removed to a ward.

Mr. Butcher was born in Yorkshire, England, and came to this country in 1866. He leaves a widow, but no children. He had no other relatives on this side of the water, it is said. He came to this country at the request of ex-Governor William Sprague, one of the three surviving war governors, who placed him in charge of the greenhouses and conservatories belonging to the extensive Sprague estate on Young Orchard avenue, Providence. After the failure of the Spragues, in 1873, Mr. Butcher entered business for himself. He was one of the original members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island and was identified with the Rhode Island Horticultural Society and was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity.

Emil Johansson.

Emil Johansson, Brookline, Mass., whose acute illness was reported in last issue of the REVIEW, died September 12 of brain fever. Mr. Johansson was a native of Sweden and had been in America about fifteen years before taking charge of the well-known orchid collection of James E. Rothwell, of Brookline. He was for some years in charge of the orchids at the Lincoln park collection, Chicago. He worked for two or three years for E. G. Uihlein, Chicago, and before coming to America was with Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England. The deceased was a first-class orchid grower, and since coming to Boston, his exhibits of cut orchids, as well as groups arranged for effect, have been among the star features of the exhibitions at Horticultural hall. He was an expert raiser of seedlings, many fine novelties having received silver medals and certificates.

He was a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and during the present year had efficiently acted as one of the members of the plant and flower committee. He was also an active member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and one of the committee on awards for some years, as well as one of the executive committee for the present year. His geniality and gentlemanly demeanor endeared him to all who came in contact with him, and his early death is sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends. He was 36 years of age and had not married.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, September 14, from the chapel of Newton cemetery, when many of his old friends in the Gardeners' and Florists' Club attended. The attendance would have been much larger had it been possible to get adequate notices to the membership in time. W. N. CRAIG.

Charles E. Richardson.

Charles E. Richardson, for sixteen years treasurer of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, died September 14 at his home in Brookline, Mass. He was 72 years of age and well known among those who attended the meetings and exhibitions at Horticultural hall, Boston. He held office up to 1906. The funeral was held September 16 and largely attended.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

The weather last week was the warmest of the year. A big cut of roses has accordingly resulted. Carnations are also coming in a little more freely, as well as asters and other outside stock. While trade has been excellent, still the supply has kept ahead of the demand.

Various Notes.

The St. Paul Dispatch gave an aster and dahlia exhibition last week, for amateurs. This brought out a number of contestants and there was keen rivalry in some classes. Some fine flowers were shown and a much needed interest evoked in this class of flowers. The judges were Mrs. A. S. Swanson, O. J. Olson and Mr. Mather, of L. L. May & Co. This is the third flower exhibit of the summer given by this paper, which is to be commended for its enterprise in promoting them.

J. J. Karins, of H. A. Dreer's, and C. S. Ford, of Philadelphia, were callers.

Holm & Olson are showing some fine white chrysanthemums. They are the earliest ever seen in this market.

X. Y. Z.

BOZEMAN, MONT.

The writer has traveled through all the principal cities in the United States, but has failed to find a place where they can grow sweet peas as good as in Bozeman.

On a visit to M. Langohr, on South Tracy street, I found an up-to-date place of eight greenhouses. Three houses are planted to carnations, one to roses, Bride, Maid, Gate and Richmond, one to mums and the others are in violets and general plants. Mr. Langohr reports business picking up, but not so good as last summer.

W. H. Tracy & Co., Mendenhall street, have added two houses to their plant and are breaking ground for another 50-foot house to be built this fall. Mr. Tracy is comparatively new in the florists' business, having started about three years ago on a small scale. He has now got about 8,000 feet of glass planted to carnations, mums, asparagus and general greenhouse stock. This firm also has a large mail-order business.

THE WEEKLY
FLORISTS'
REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly,
 New York; vice-president, George W. McClure,
 Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan
 Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
 Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine,
 Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett,
 Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19
 to 22, 1909.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kaating, Buffalo, chairman; J. H. Burdett, secretary, 1411 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

COURTESY is one of the best business assets. The ability to give an unwell-come answer in a way to avoid offense earns many a man his living.

A FLORIST who has been making changes to modernize his place this summer writes: "One has no idea what an improvement cement walks make in a greenhouse till he tries them."

FIFTY cents will pay for enough printed letter-heads to last the average grower half a season, yet many still send orders to houses that do not know them, written on "any old thing" in the way of letter paper.

DON'T be a kicker. If you have a reasonable complaint to make, by all means make it, but use temperate language; to overdo your protest is to arouse anger and lessen the chances of prompt and satisfactory adjustment.

BE a good collector. One of the evils of the flower business is its lax credits.
 Do your part toward working the whole trade onto a better footing by collecting your own bills when due and meeting your own obligations promptly.

THE gate receipts for the recent two days' flower show at Shrewsbury, England, described by C. H. Totty in the REVIEW for September 3, were $15,040, and this was $2,390 less than the receipts for two days in 1907, due to rain.

THE business conditions of the year last past have proved conclusively that flowers are no longer considered a luxury, at least by a goodly proportion of the people. It has demonstrated that the flower business is on a solid, permanent footing.

THE premium list has been issued for the exhibition of the American Institute at the Berkeley Lyceum, New York, November 11 to 13. The prizes are liberal. Copies may be had by those interested by addressing W. A. Eagleson, secretary of the board of managers, 19
 West Forty-fourth street, New York city.

It is not so much what you grow as how well you grow it that counts.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

More Special Premiums.

Several special premiums have been offered since the publication of the preliminary premium list for the national flower show. Through Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., W. Wells, of Merstham, England, offers a gold, a silver and a bronze medal for six flowers of W. M.
 Moir chrysanthemum, to be shown in one vase on stems two and a half feet long.
 J. A. Peterson offers for the best five plants of Begonia Agatha, $25. The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, offers a cup for the best bride's bouquet of which the main feature shall be lily of the valley and white orchids, or all lily of the valley, with the usual shower trimmings, ribbon, etc.

It is urgently requested that all firms and individuals who contemplate offering special premiums communicate at once with the secretary, in order that their offers may be included in the final issue of the premium list, which will go to press in about two weeks.

It is requested by the premium committee that any new special premiums be offered for classes which appear in the premium list already published, rather than for a new class.

J. H. BURDETT, Sec'y.

No Trade Exhibition.

It was suggested to the national flower show subcommittee on local management that a trade exhibition of supplies, heating and ventilating apparatus, greenhouse construction materials, etc., would interest many trade visitors at the November show, and accordingly on August 29 letters, inclosing postal cards for reply, were addressed to ninety-five exhibitors at previous trade exhibitions held in connection with the annual conventions of the S. A. F. Forty-four replies were received up to September 7, inclusive. Thirteen of the replies were in favor of such a trade exhibition, eighteen opposed to it and thirteen undecided. The subcommittee, at a meeting held September 7, therefore decided not to take up the project.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chairman,
 Local Management Committee.

INSURANCE ON BULBS.

Please give us the following information: Is there a place in the country where we could insure bulbs and roots when stored inside of a building? We have tried fire insurance companies, but they decline to take this class of goods for insurance. We shall thank you for any information you can give us.

Deerfield, Ill. FRANKEN BROS.

ISMENE CALATHINA.

An English writer says that it does not seem to be generally known that Ismene calathina is improved in health by being planted outdoors after flowering, where it should remain till frost destroys the leaves. The bulbs should then be lifted and placed under the stage in a warm house and kept dry. By this method of treatment the bulbs increase in size and vigor, and develop two or three flower-spikes. As these develop early, the bulb would, in any case, be greatly weakened if it were dried off immediately after flowering.

KAISERIN

Best Hot Weather White Rose

Last week's return of hot weather has brought our crop of Kaiserin to the front again. While Bride came soft, Kaiserin was not affected and we are sending out the best white roses the market affords. The crop is large. Order some today.

Beauties

You will like our Beauties. They are selling well, but the crop is large and your order can be filled—any length of stem.

Asters

The end of the season is approaching, but our stock is second to none in this market.

Green Goods

You have known our house for years as "headquarters for Green Goods." For the fall decorations we can supply Asparagus and Smilax in any quantity. Long strings, and we can quote special prices on large lots. Also plenty of Sprenger, Adiantum, Farleyense and all outdoor greens. Best Ferns in the Market.

All Other Stock in Season

Carnations

Once more in good supply; quality improving every day. Enchantress already has fair stems. You will find us headquarters for fancy carnations again this winter.

Valley

You need Valley every day and we can supply Fancy stock in any quantity, at any time.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market suffered a relapse to mid-summer last week, for there were four days in succession with temperatures 90 degrees or above. The result was a large increase in supplies and the inevitable falling off in demand. Also, the quality of stock suffered greatly and it was difficult to find satisfactory material with which to take care of the little business there was doing.

The greatest glut was of asters. These came in by the wagon-load and most of the wholesale houses were choked with the accumulation before the end of the week was reached. Only a small part of the stock was really first-class, and there was good sale for any stock worth 2 cents to 3 cents, while buyers would not stop to look at asters offered at from $1 per hundred to as low as the buyer cared to make the price. Ridiculous quotations were heard and the majority of the stock was jobbed off at a few dollars per table, or ice-box, or whatever the receptacle might be. There was, of course, a large percentage of waste, and returns to the growers were small indeed.

Roses also came in heavily, and the heat deprived them of the good quality recently noted. Under the influence of the hot weather, each day's receipts were of wide open stock, which was practically unsalable. The few good, tight roses sold well. More mildew is noticed than for a long time, weather conditions seeming specially favorable for this affliction of the growers.

The present week sees slight improvement, but with a few days of cool weather much better things are looked for. The receipts of asters are not so heavy, although there continue to be great oversupplies of the poorest grades. Gladioli also are overabundant and there are unsalable dahlias, for this latter flower never goes any too well in this market.

Carnations are coming in more heavily every day, but a considerable part of the receipts might better not be shipped to town. The discolored whites are not salable, and little or nothing can be done with the stock with stems three or four inches long. There is a good market for the best grades of carnations, and Enchantress is seen with stems a foot or more in length; but not enough of this grade to go around.

Chrysanthemums are seldom seen, the supply as yet being only enough to take care of advance orders, but before the end of this week daily shipments are promised by a number of growers.

The market for green goods is looking up; the fall openings and the weddings make a demand for strings of asparagus and smilax.

Winterson's Asters.

It is probable that the E. F. Winterson Co. had more asters on hand Saturday morning, September 12, than ever had been seen at one time in any wholesale house in this market. E. F. Winterson estimated the lot at from 85,000 to 90,000, mostly the receipts of Friday, but partly the accumulation from earlier in the week. Large consignments were received from as far away as western New York. There were all kinds, colors and conditions, but, unfortunately, little demand. A good many people dropped in just to see the display.

Plans for Fall Show.

There was a joint meeting at the Union restaurant, September 11, of the reception committee for the national flower show and the entertainment committee of the Florists' Club. Subject to the approval of the club at a special meeting of the club to be held September 18, it was decided to hold the annual banquet at 6 p. m., Tuesday, November 10, and to invite visiting ladies to attend. Chairman August Poehlmann appointed a banquet committee, as follows: P. J. Foley, chairman; Leonard Kill, C. Frauenfelder, C. Cropp, Wm. Kroeschell, C. A. Samuelson, D. A. Robertson, M. Barker, C. L. Washburn, Walter Scott, Ed. Enders, John Zeeh, T. E. Waters, E. F. Winterson, C. W. McKellar. A committee on hotel headquarters was appointed as follows: F. Lautenschlager, chairman; N. J. Rupp, J. B. Deamud, Ed. Hauswirth, W. O. Johnson. A committee to publish a pamphlet of information is M. Barker and T. E. Waters.

The executive committee of the national flower show will be held here September 18.

Various Notes.

Fred Weber tells E. C. Amling that his Beauties never were so promising as at the present time. Mr. Amling says there is a brisk sale for the stock now being cut from the four large houses.

C. L. Washburn and his son, E. B. Washburn, are hunting in the woods of northern Wisconsin this week.

It is reported that on the night of September 10 fire threatened the summer homes of the Chicago colony at Silver Lake, Wis., where the family of E. Wienhoeber is staying. The summer visitors formed a bucket brigade and by hard work saved the cottages.

C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, reports that the Poehlmann Bros. Co. is now at work erecting concrete benches of the Wittbold one-piece pattern. August Poehlmann is on record as being of the opinion that wood benches will shortly be displaced by concrete in all up-to-date establishments.

It is reported that a number of growers at Bowmanville have come to the conclusion that real estate there is too valuable for greenhouse purposes, and that within the next few years there will be a quite general removal of the plants to a location farther from the city.

D. E. Freres has opened in the Flower Growers' market and is handling some good stock.

Scheiden & Schoos, in the Flower Growers' market, are receiving consignments of asters from White Bros., Gasport, N. Y.

Fred Schram was in town September 14, well tanned up as a result of six weeks' steady work with the carnations. He says little stock is yet being cut at Park Ridge, but that the growers there are all in good shape, with the stock in the houses looking better than it usually does at this date.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is receiving quantities of dahlias from Michigan, but they are not selling nearly so well as the same stock did last year.

Joe Dunn is spending his vacation at Shelby, Ind.; and Phil Schupp and Harry Manheim spent Sunday and Monday with him, fishing.

The E. F. Winterson Co. received a car of Dutch bulbs September 14.

Perey Jones says that the Kibbe asters are the best coming to town and that growers who visit the Kibbe place, at

C. W. McKellar and wife have been spending a few days with friends in Michigan.

Several wholesalers are interested in the failure of the Booth Co., as they have ferns and other greens in cold storage there. The business will go on as usual.

H. N. Bruns is preparing to largely increase his output of cut valley, having invested $3,500 in a new house and improved facilities this summer.

E. H. Hunt is receiving quantities of new fall supplies, one of the novelties being a raffia mat, like the Porto Rican mat, only being made of dyed raffia.

Henry Klunder, on Drexel boulevard at Forty-third street, has a larger store than is needed for the flower business, and since the end of June has had a soda fountain and ice cream as a side line. It has brought in a great many people, from 100 to 300 a day, and they all are pleased with the store, which is one of the handsomest in that section of the city.

Schiller's west side store, originally planned as a building of one story, exclusively for the florists' business, is being completed as a two-story building. The upper story is to be used as a free reading room by the Christian Scientists, and it is being arranged to meet their requirements.

A study of the rose show report indicates that the show of itself was a financial success, clearing $71, but the entertainment was otherwise unprovided for and caused the loss.

The contributors to the San Francisco relief fund have received a statement showing that seventy-five per cent is returnable to them. Many have directed the secretary to turn their share into the Florists' Club's treasury.

One of the well-liked young men in the market is Frank Hagen, of George Reinberg's store force. He has the sympathy of everyone in the death of his mother, which occurred September 14. She was 70 years of age and one of the oldest residents of Bowmanville. She was well known to most of the florists in that section. The funeral was held September 16, with interment at Rose Hill.

State of Trade.

Not only one, but all of our local florists are complaining of dull business for the last week. There was plenty of stock, but no demand for it. Only a few funeral orders here and there keep a portion of the stock moving from day to day. Roses can be had in any quantity, and they are good. Carnations, as yet, are not any too plentiful, but there is enough to supply the present demand. Asters can still be found, but the quality is not the best.

The drought is becoming a general topic for discussion. Not a drop of rain has fallen in the last month. Everything is drying up.

Various Notes.

John Young, one of Dayton's oldest florists, met with a serious accident September 11. He was hastening to catch a car, when he fell and broke his left arm.

Dayton last week, each received a liberal number of premiums. The Dayton Floral Co. had a large display of palms, bay trees, ferns, etc., which were artistically arranged in a pyramid in the center of the exhibition building. Among the several prizes this company captured, one was first premium for general display and first for table decoration. H. H. Ritter's display of various decorative plants was handsomely arranged. Among his many premiums was the first prize for cut flower collection. The Advance Floral Co. also had a fine array of plants and cut flowers and won first premium on bedding plants. A large sod pig exhibited in their display was a great attraction. John Boehner had a fine display of cannas, which took first prize.

John Evans, of Richmond, Ind., called September 12, and from here went to Youngstown and Cleveland.

Walter Matthews, the eldest son of Warren G. Matthews, proprietor of the Dayton Floral Co., and Miss Emma Pauley were married September 12. The event was a complete surprise to their many friends. They left immediately for Kansas City, and the best wishes of the Dayton florists go with the young couple. R. A. B.

WASHINGTON.

State of Business.

Business has been anything but good and there is an abundance of stock, roses especially. The opening of the schools will help some, especially the many young ladies' seminaries around Washington. They cut quite a figure in the cut flower business. Most of them open October 1. The public schools open September 21. A new crop of roses is now coming in. Bride, Maid, Killarney and My Maryland are much better and have fairly good stems. Carnations are still short-stemmed and not much in demand.

Various Notes.

Gude Bros. are cutting some fine Beauties for this season of the year.

A look in at F. H. Kramer's F street store found him picking out the good points of a bunch of seedlings he had just received from his Anacostia plant.

Among the best was a pink sport of Richmond and a large shell-pink on the order of his Queen Beatrix but much lighter in color. He also had a fairly good vase of Rhea Reid and a vase of the yellow rose he exhibited at the show last year; he calls it Kramer's Pet.

Violets made their debut last week at Gudes'. They were the single variety.

Theo. Dietrich, who has grown violets successfully for years, says his double violet crop is a total failure this year. He will commence to throw them out this week and get the houses ready for other stock. His single crop never was better.

Miss Ballenger, of the Washington Florists Co., has returned from her outing in Maryland.

Mr. Prichard, of Gudes', is back at the old stand.

H. Gottenkieng, of Gudes', is off on a two weeks' gunning expedition. Miss Brueninger, Gudes' bookkeeper, is off to the seashore for a couple of weeks.

Geo. A. Comley is putting in a twelve horse-power boiler at his plant at Dominion Heights, Va.

G. A. Phillips opened his Fourteenth street store September 15. He has been experimenting with some glass at his country home at Hyattsville, Md.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., is in town this week. O. O.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

There is little doing here in the way of cut flower sales, but funeral work is heavy and there are plenty of asters to do it with. A few carnations are to be seen, but stems are short. Roses are improving.

September 13 was Flower Sunday. The cemetery board sent out thousands of postals to grave owners, and there was a fairly good demand for cut stock, although many relied on their gardens.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society held its annual exhibition September 10 to 12. There were some fine dahlias on exhibition and John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park, N. Y., made an excellent display of gladioli.

Ashley & Henberger are growing only the newer sorts of carnations this season, and the stock looks well.

William Mosher will be strong on violets this year. He reports a good call for Flower Sunday W. L.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

It was a non-inspiring condition that prevailed throughout last week and quantities of the commoner grades of asters and roses were unsalable. Every farmer within a hundred miles of New York seems to be growing asters, just as everybody around Rhinebeck has felt the call to grow violets. Now that the building of violet houses has largely ceased, and many of the growers have rested on their oars, we may see the violet rearing its head again and better values prevail. Charles Schenck reminded me of the days away back when he sold them at wholesale for $4.50 per hundred. But that was nearly twenty years ago. Last week the shipments began, small in number and smaller in size. Nobody wanted them. Far better keep them away until they are worth while. Their coming now only serves to cheapen them and demoralize the future market.

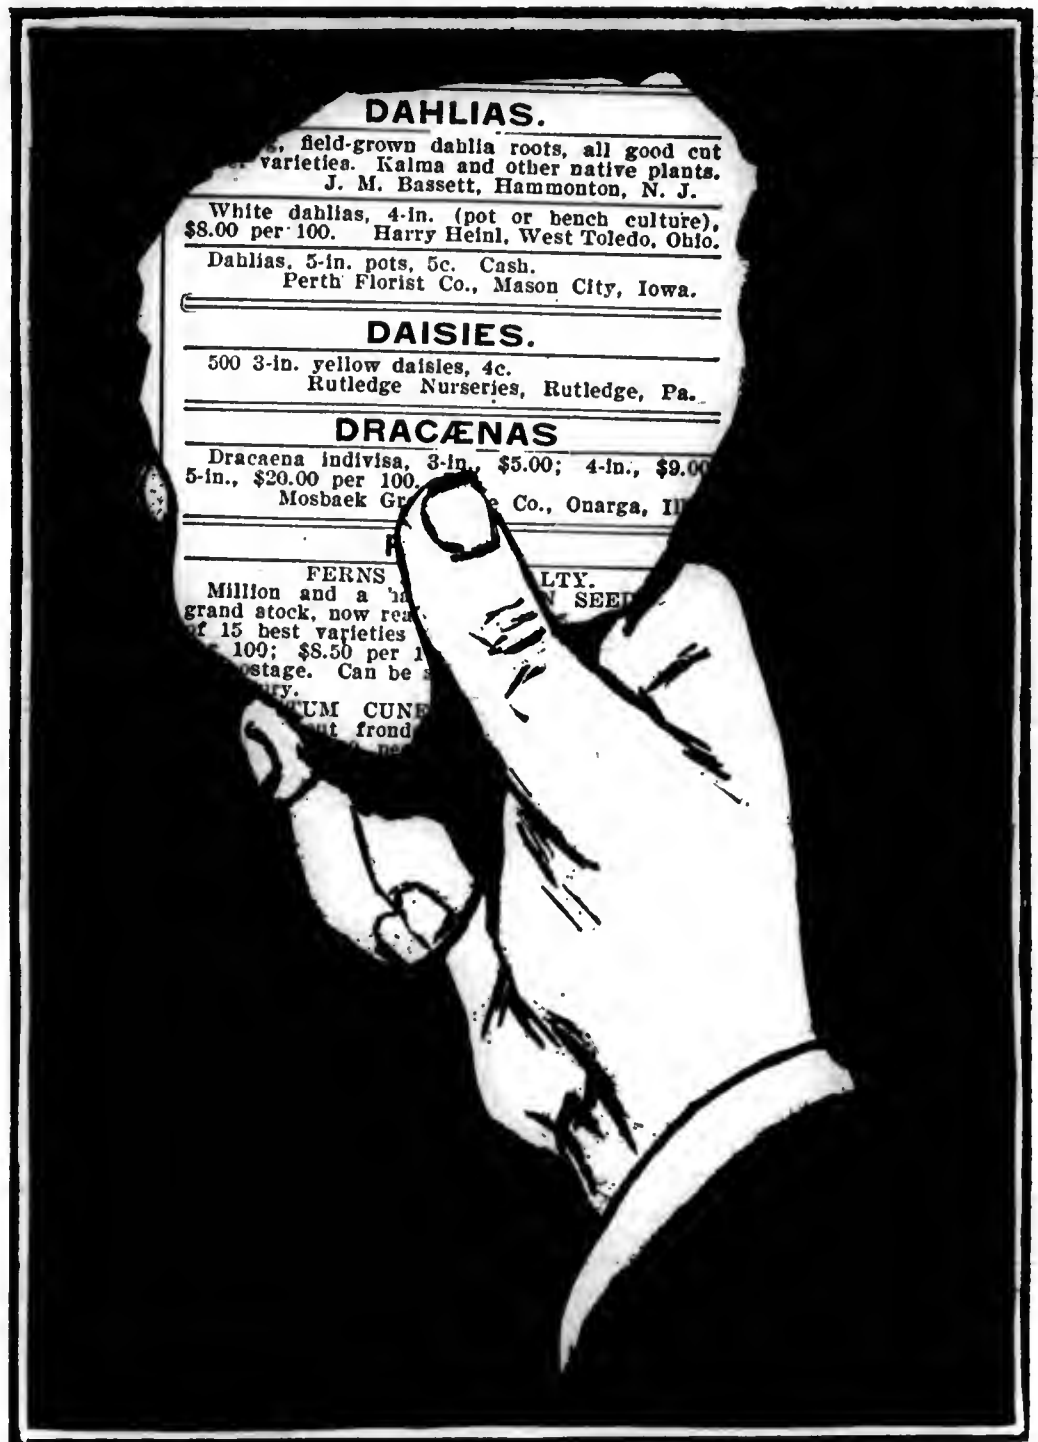

The weather is again summer-like, too warm for roses, but carnations have wonderfully improved. The theaters are using many American Beauties. Every first night sees lobby and stage loaded with baskets and bunches of them for the popular stars. The orchid is now entering the stadium, in the Marathon race of the flowers, and there is no doubt where it will be at the tape. Where do all the gladioli come from? The new varieties, and America, are superb. Most of the stock arriving is above the average this year. It is well worth the trip to Berlin or Floral Park to see the acres of color of the largest of the growers. Some fine cosmos is arriving. The water lily windows are attractive, especially Small's, on Broadway, with its fountain playing, its water plants and grand lily stock in great variety. A crowd may be seen admiring the artistic and beautiful exhibit constantly.

The closing of the Coney Island and other watering center seasons next Saturday will bring our friends, the sidewalk merchants, back to tackle the surplus and save from the debris much that now goes to waste.

Club Meeting.

Seventy-five enthusiastic members attended the first fall meeting of the New York Florists' Club, with President Weathered in the chair. Mr. O'Mara reported for the transportation committee. For the outing committee Chairman Marshall announced an outlay of $1,161 and a profit for the club's exchequer of $30. It was decided that the surplus should be retained as a separate fund for outing purposes.

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

Resolutions on the death of James Shanley were read by Secretary Young.

J. J. Coan was elected to membership and Ambrose Cleary and L. W. Kervan were nominated. The resignations of George M. Geraghty, George A. Skene and Robert C. Pye were accepted with regret.

A letter from David Fraser, secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, in behalf of closer relations with the club, was read and referred to the trustees for report at the next meeting.

Benjamin Hammond, of Fishkill, delivered an interesting lecture on "School Gardens." He gave many personal experiences and referred especially to the potency of the public schools in the formation of character and the value and necessity of ample playgrounds in behalf of the physical health of the children.

The transportation committee received a hint as to the possible need of special rates for the national flower show at Chicago. New York will probably send you twenty visitors.

Committees were appointed to draw up resolutions on the deaths of Alexander Wallace and David Rose.

The shield won by the bowlers was on exhibition.

It was announced that Antoine Wint-zer, of West Grove, Pa., will lecture at the October meeting on "Clematis and Other Hardy Vines."

Mr. Hendrickson, with John Lewis Childs, exhibited a grand vase of Gladiolus America, which was awarded a certificate of merit. Fred Hollender, of Ozone Park, showed Dahlias Bill Taft, Jupiter, Grand Duke and Glory de Lyons and received the club's thanks. A. L. Miller showed grand stock of Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and Firerain dahlias, and these, having already won the society's certificates, were awarded the thanks of the club.

J. C. Spencer, of Utica, was a visitor.

F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, made a striking plea in behalf of the fall show of the New York Horticultural Society. The trustees have given the museum for the exhibition free and no entrance fee will be charged visitors. Premiums for the retailers will be a special feature. Mr. Totty regretted the lateness of the date, because of the passing of many of the best chrysanthemums. Mr. Marshall suggested prizes attractive to the market gardeners. Mr. O'Mara spoke of the educational character of the proposed exhibition and the great attendance probable.

President Traendly, of the S. A. F.,

made an eloquent speech, considering his hay fever, on the convention, and thanked the committee and the club for its loyal devotion. Mr. O'Mara said it was the best convention the society had ever enjoyed. As to bowling, Joseph Manda explained why the first prize did not come to New York, giving credit to those who kept their nerve and so nearly won the highest honors.

Charles H. Totty, just back from England, gave an interesting account of his travels.

The president appointed as the club's nominating committee, Messrs. Sheridan, W. Rickards, Traendly, Burnham, Miller, Donaldson and Totty.

Various Notes.

These are the days of horticultural fairs and the Saengerbund in Brooklyn, and the Richmond company show on Staten Island last week beat all records for attendance and display. Bobbink & Atkins, Stumpp & Walter Co., and J. L. Childs were much in evidence. Harry Bunyard is visiting his parents in England, with his wife, the first visit since he came to this country. Meantime Mr. Boddington and his force are working nights, and the fall rush is on in earnest. The seedsmen and the bulb men are all busy and say the outlook was never better.

The clam bake of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers, September 15, was a great success. Fully 100 were present and Chairman Miller's management caused everything to pass off most pleasantly. There were a number of special events on the program for which prizes were offered, and dancing was continued until a late hour.

The Horticultural Society of New York completed arrangements last week for a flower show at the Museum of Natural History, Columbus avenue and Seventy-ninth street, November 17 to 19. With the interest taken in this exhibition by the New York Florists' Club, and the splendid building and locality chosen, an old-time success may once more be possible.

aged the business successfully while he was away.

A new firm was established last week, Blauvelt & Dierks, at 50 West Twenty-ninth street, and Lexington avenue and Eighty-sixth street. The latter store was opened Tuesday, September 15. Mr. Dierks was with A. Warendorff for some time. Both are practical men, and the new store on Lexington avenue is in a fine locality. Mr. Blauvelt says they will do both a wholesale and retail business.

The Starke Co., Inc., is established, with Edward Schumacher president, John Kessler vice-president, and A. M. Starke treasurer. Mr. Schumacher is a real estate man. Mr. Kessler has had much practical experience with J. J. Foley, of the Bowery. The conservatory at 52

West Twenty-ninth street is already well stocked with palms and ferns.

Richard Walsh, for some fourteen years with Mansfield, opens his new retail store this week at Eighty-third street and Lexington avenue. If new stores are straws showing the blow of the wind, there seems to be no lack of enterprise and faith in the future.

Miss A. Levitt, bookkeeper for Joseph A. Fenrich for four years, has accepted a similar position with A. J. Guttman.

Burnett Bros. are moving this week to 72 Cortlandt street, a splendid location, close to the ferry and handy for their Jersey suburban customers. The new store is much larger than their old one on West street. George A. and Samuel comprise the firm, the former doing the bulk of the traveling, assisted by Jack Hunter, son of James Hunter, of Lambton Castle, England, now retired. The firm does a large trade with the private gardeners.

Wertheimer Bros. are receiving many compliments for the origination of the new decorative material, Sparkling Dew-drop chiffon. They report a large number of orders for the article.

Reed & Keller are preparing a new book of photos of original and up-to-date designs. William Hanft, formerly with Thomas Young, Jr., has had charge of the work.

J. J. Coan, manager of the John King Duer establishment, at 644 Madison avenue, has thoroughly beautified the artistic store and evidently expects a boom this winter. Around Fifty-ninth street and Madison avenue there is a veritable hot-bed of up-to-date florists. Myer is close at hand, with his original windows and his newly decorated front, one of the most unique in New York.

Mrs. Frank Millang met with a severe accident last week at her country home, the horse running away. Her side was badly wrenched and her face and body badly bruised. She was unconscious for some time. Mr. Millang says he will never drive any horses but his own hereafter.

Geller & Co. have been working overtime for a month, and the supply industry seems to feel already the revival in that department of the trade. All the florists' supply houses are rushed with the early fall orders and the importations of novelties are arriving daily.

Harry Hoffmeyer has been so well pleased with his branch at Atlantic City that he has decided to remain there for the winter.

Will Rickards is holding the fort while his brother swings around the circle of fall exhibitions and Lieutenant Dugan enjoys his business and pleasure trip in Dixie.

Will Elliott's voice has been well rested and manicured and sandpapered for its mellifluous stunts beginning September 22, at 42 Vesey street, where from now on the auctions will be in full swing until the snow flies. The first sale has a lot of fine stock from Biltmore.

There is some talk of a violet and carnation combination following the disintegration of the union of growers that was to open on West Twenty-seventh street and didn't, and a dozen of them were looking at the Hicks store on Twenty-eighth street as a likely spot for the venture.

W. E. Marshall has been holidaying with his man Friday, in his partner's 45-foot yawl from the Bergen Beach Yacht Club, and brings back the usual fish stories.

Gunther Bros. are receiving a lot of fine dahlias from Pennsylvania growers. Another week will see the market overwhelmed with them, but, as with all else, the new and best stock will sell readily and the common had better be kept at home.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There is a slight improvement in the cut flower market, although conditions are far from favorable. The quantity of poor flowers and of outdoor flowers flooding the market is so large that it is impossible to find an outlet for nearly all of them. Really choice stock is in fair demand. Beauties are and have been selling as well as any flowers on the list. Cattleya labiata has made its appearance in sufficient quantities to warrant a reduction in price, and from now on buyers are reasonably secure in placing their orders at listed quotations, which are one-third below those of a week ago. Valley is fine, but not in demand.

Carnations are beginning to merit the name, Enchantress and Boston Market being obtainable in sufficient quantities to mention. Asters are slightly on the wane, but they are far more plentiful than was anticipated a week ago, and prices have not stiffened in the least. Dahlias are arriving in larger quantities. There is some demand for the really fine sorts, such as Kriemhilde, Lyndhurst, and others. Hydrangeas are beautifully colored, and for these there is this week an outlet in some of the department store fall openings, which, while only of moderate dimensions so far, have a slight effect on the market.

Violets have made their appearance. A few singles are seen in the commission houses, but they are not yet up to shipping requirements.

Edward Reid Takes Issue With Phil.

Edward Reid, the well-known wholesale florist of this city, takes exception to the views expressed in this column last week under the head of "Mr. Guille's Visit." The part of the article to which Mr. Reid excepts is the statement that the law of supply and demand regulates the production of cut flowers. Mr. Reid asserts that the production of cut flowers under glass should be protected from the unfair competition of outdoor-grown stock, just as our products in this country are protected by a tariff from the unfair competition of cheaply produced foreign goods. Mr. Reid says that the grower who has the courage and enterprise to erect glass houses and heat them with expensive fuel merits the protection of public sentiment against the inroads of cheaply grown outdoor stock from a warmer clime. Mr. Reid says that there can be no question that the indoor-grown products would bring better prices were outdoor flowers out of the way, and that he, as a wholesaler, who wishes to protect the interests of his growers, will discourage to the utmost of his ability the dumping of outdoor-grown flowers on this market.

Founders' Week.

As everybody knows, this city will be the scene of great outdoor celebration during Founders' Week, October 5 to 10. It is of interest to note that among the many floats being prepared for the parade during that celebration there is one, at least, of special interest to florists. Philip Freud, of the Henry F. The center of this lawn will be ornamented by a bed of hyacinths, red, white and blue, in honor of the nation's colors, while at the four corners there will be pillars, draped with the city's colors, blue and yellow, surmounted by Boston ferns, and surrounded by blue hyacinths and yellow tulips. Four handsome horses will draw this miniature garden, which Mr. Freud asserts will be well worth coming miles to see.

Hardy Phloxes.

George A. Strohlein, Riverton, N. J., honored Phil with an invitation a few days ago. The invitation ran something like this: "Will you come down to Riverton to see our hardy phloxes? Mr. Sim and I will be glad to meet you at the station and drive you over to Locust Farm." A chance like this was certainly not to be missed and the invitation promptly was accepted. On the day appointed Mr. Strohlein, accompanied by Mr. Sim, met the Philadelphia train at Riverton early in the afternoon with a trap. There were some joking allusions on the part of the hosts to a Jonah, owing to the fact that it had rained continually during the preceding night, and as everybody knows, it is not conducive to bringing out the colors of hardy phlox or, in fact, any other colors. The weather cleared, however, soon after, and by the time the fields of phloxes were reached the sun was shining, bringing out the colors nicely.

These fields of phloxes are certainly worth going a long way to see. Fancy row after row of plants covered with bloom, each variety filling one or more rows of 1,000 plants to a row. Then fancy 300 or more rows ablaze with color, and you have the phlox fields of Henry A. Dreer's Locust Farm, near Riverton.

Two hours were spent going back and forth through the rows—hours that passed so quickly under the guidance of Harry C. Sim, who has charge of these fields, that the time seemed too short. Mr. Strohlein commended highly the work of the German hybridizers, who have given us some surprisingly fine varieties of hardy phlox. The novelties under trial this year show a more decided step in advance than for several years. Nearly all appeared to be self colors, bright and clear. The colors were more like those seen in Azalea Indica, or in well grown hydrangeas, than are usually seen in plants of this class.

The most striking novelty Mr. Sim pointed out was the new variety George A. Strohlein, an orange-scarlet with large flowers somewhat resembling the ordinary variety Coquelicot, although not of that strain. The naming of this variety was interesting. Mr. Strohlein was in Germany a few years ago, when the grower on whom he called asked him to pick out the handsomest of his seedlings. The visitor pointed out the variety in question, whereupon his host at once named it George A. Strohlein; the appearance of this variety fully justifies Mr. Strohlein's belief in its merit.

At the other end of the field from George A. Strohlein was Sieboldi, a variety strongly resembling it, the flowers being so closely alike that a comparison is necessary to all but the practiced eye. Unlike George A. Strohlein, Sieboldi is of Coquelicot strain. While the individual trusses are not so large, it is of stronger habit and freer blooming.

Among the whites, Mrs. Jenkins still holds first place; it is large flowered, free blooming, improving in both qualities the second year. F. C. Von Lasburg, the purest white, is a close second, but, unlike Mrs. Jenkins, the flowers attain full size the first year. Jeanne d'Arc is a beautiful white, dwarf and compact, an important Riverton strain of this variety, unlike the original blooms the first year.

Mauve is a leading color in phloxes. An important German acquisition to this class, with a ferocious sounding name, is Gruppenkonigin, translated Queen of the Bedders. This variety bids fair to become the standard in its class. La Vague is also mauve of attractive shade.

In soft pink Elizabeth Campbell is pretty. Vesuvius, bright red, a Dreer introduction, is strong, vigorous and full of promise.

The complete list of standard and novel sorts grown in quantity would cover perhaps sixty or more varieties, the cream of the European and American sorts, all meritorious. Their season in this latitude lasts for perhaps eight weeks, from mid-July until early in September. The majority of the varieties are classed as mid-season, coming into bloom hereabouts during the first week in August. A few are earlier, a few later.

The interest in phloxes has reached the point where nearly all buyers want varieties that will bloom at the same time when planted in one bed. The stock is shipped in the fall and early spring from the open, but pot-grown stock is invariably shipped during April and May. The increase in production this year is about 50,000, which speaks volumes for the solid, substantial growth of the business done in this most satisfactory hardy plant.

Emil H. Geschick says that at the Leipsie Palm Garden flower show, held in the end of July, the handsomest bed of roses was planted with one-third each Richmond, Etoile de France, and Liberty; and Richmond, the American rose, was by far the most free blooming rose in the whole garden.

Richard Umphried says that the quality of the roses grown in the south of France, outdoors, and sold in the markets of Stuttgart and Bremen during the summer, fully equals that of our own grown under glass and sold here during the same period of the year. Long stems are not so much desired, stems fifteen inches in length being considered sufficient.

The Market.

Business does not show much improvement, in spite of the fact that most of the flower buyers are at home again and that there have been several funerals which ought to have used up a large quantity of flowers. As it turned out, the demand was light and only now and then was there anything which looked like real business.

Roses continue to arrive in large quantities and to sell slowly. The hot weather of the last few days has given them a back-set and the quality is below par. The buds are small and they do not keep well. Beauties are in good supply and sell better than other varieties, but that is not saying much. Carnations are arriving in larger quantities, but you cannot place much dependence on them as yet. They keep poorly and sell likewise. Asters continue to arrive heavily. There is no lack of them in any color; they are almost a glut. Gladioli are doing fairly well and so are dahlias. Cosmos fills the want for something cheap.

Various Notes.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Current Comment.

The parade of the Portuguese Fraternal Association September 6 was notable for the large number of floral designs shown; it is estimated that there were more than $2,500 worth of bouquets and designs carried. An immense floral replica of the Old Stone Mill of Newport was carried by one of the Newport societies. It was made by F. L. Ziegler, of Newport. Another of the conspicuous displays was by Providence, at the head of whose line marched seven men, each bearing an immense floral letter, about thirty inches high, spelling the word, "Welcome." The letters were of roses, made by Swan Peterson.

William B. Hazard, of Providence, has returned from a vacation on Long Island.

William Tarbox, of West Greenwich, reports that his crop of dahlias and asters is better this year than ever. He is cutting an average of 3,000 asters every morning. The honor of being judge at the dahlia show in Boston, September 15 to 19, has been conferred upon him.

Farquhar Fraser is now located at the post-office building, Riverpoint, with a full line of plants and cut flowers.

The sudden death of Wm. Butcher is reported in the obituary column this week.

The autumn exhibition of the Newport Horticultural Society will be held in Masonic Hall, September 12 to 14.

George L. Stillman, Westerly, has more than 300 named varieties of dahlias under cultivation.

The first meeting for the fall of the Rhode Island Florists' and Gardeners' Club will be held September 21.

F. L. Ziegler, Newport, has been especially busy on decorative work recently, for dinners, luncheons and receptions. A noticeable piece was an immense floral horseshoe, with jockey's cap and whip, in carnations, roses and orchids, which was shown at the big annual horse show.

Edwin J. Collamore has been appointed a member of the Prohibition State Central Committee.

The first frost of the season was reported on the morning of September 8, in East Providence, near the state line.

J. F. Schellinger, of Riverside, is visiting relatives at Sag Harbor, Long Island.

Florence A. Willard has just purchased a lot of land with improvements from Amasa Sprague, on the northerly side of Montgomery avenue.

The September exhibition of dahlias and other flowers by the Rhode Island Horticultural Society will be held in Frances Willard hall September 17 to 18. The first meeting of the society will be held September 16. W. H. M.

KIRKWOOD, MO.—William Winter was elected school director September 12, having a handsome majority. A new florist has arrived at the home of A. Scheidegger. G. E. and A. G. Ahner have each built one new house this summer. Arthur Faerher, formerly with H. Neimeyer, is building a house for himself.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—Harry Hoffman has organized a stock company, to be known as the Harry Hoffman Floral Co. The new concern has purchased five and a half acres of land near the corner of Diamond street and Michigan avenue, and will take possession February 1. As soon as possible after that date extensive greenhouses will be built and the plant will be equipped in a most up-to-date manner.

EMIL FROMHOLD, Naumburg-on-Saale, Germany, has taken over the seed growing establishment of V. Fromhold & Co.

H. FRANK DARROW, New York, reports that Eugene Schaettel, representing Vil-morin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, will arrive September 26 to make his usual trip through the United States and Canada.

C. P. COY, Waterloo, Neb., said September 11 that "cucumbers, muskmelons, watermelons and citrons are so near a failure that the harvest will not equal the seed planted. Squashes and pumpkins are a rather light crop."

CHARLES HENDERSON, of Peter Henderson & Co., New York, who has been in Europe with his family during the last three months, has returned to the city. Mr. Kirby, of the same house, who has been in London the last six weeks, is also at home.

NORTHROP, KING & Co., Minneapolis, say the crop of wild rice seed this fall will be short, owing to high water prevailing in the wild rice fields. The demand is unusually heavy and they say they do not expect to be able to fill all the orders they will receive. They recently have issued a neat little booklet, entitled "Wild Rice," which ought to go some way toward moving the stock in a good crop year.

THE creditors of the St. Louis Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo., have received notice that the company was adjudged bankrupt September 9 and that a meeting of the creditors is to be held September 22, following the usual legal form. Walter Retzer, an officer of the company, while at Chicago this week, stated that a large majority of the creditors have accepted the company's offer to compromise through the payment of 33 1/3 cents on the dollar and that it is expected to be in a position early in October to go ahead with the reorganized business, with larger capital than before.

LEONARDS BRANCH OUT.

O. L. Daily, formerly the manager of the Canadian branch of the Cleveland Seed Co., is now with the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago.

Mr. Daily, whose portrait appears herewith, is one of the best posted men on peas and beans in the country, having had thirty-five years' continuous service with the Cleveland Seed Co., first with the elder Cleveland, who, with Mr. Daily's help, worked up and put on the market the Alaska pea; then, after the father's death, with the son, A. B. Cleveland, until he discontinued the seed business, and up to June 1 of the present year with the new Cleveland Seed Co.

In the thirty-five years with the Cleve-lands he had the growing, handling and picking of many thousands of bushels of choice stocks, and knows what such stocks should be. No one knows what an Alaska should be better than he, as he helped originate it. Mr. Daily also has to his credit the Eclipse or Surprise pea, which he worked up from a single pod found among some growing trials at Picton.

Mr. Daily has charge of the field work,

MICHIGAN PEA AND BEAN CROPS.

W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, Mich., wrote September 11: "We had a rainy spring and the driest summer I ever experienced, so that the pea crop is short; it will not average over fifty per cent. The inclement weather has, of course, also affected the bean crop. Until recently the prospect was for a fair crop, but two heavy frosts have killed a good many fields. However, it is impossible to say today to what extent the general crop has been injured. The drought still continues, so that the sample is liable to be good; that is, clean. Of course beans will be undersized on account of the dry season."

NEBRASKA SEED CROPS.

J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb., set down the following summary of the condition of seed crops in his territory September 11:

"The cantaloupe and cucumber crops in eastern Nebraska are a total failure. In the Waterloo district there will not be a pound of seed harvested. In the central and western part of the state there will be a few crops that will make from twenty-five to seventy-five pounds of cucumber seed to the acre.

"Few watermelons are grown in the immediate vicinity of Waterloo, owing to the low price at which they have been selling. Our watermelon district will give us some seed of this class.

"The squash crop will be light, as well as pumpkins, but there will be some crop.

"Corn of all kinds, including sweet, flint and dent varieties, will average about seventy-five per cent of a normal crop. Some varieties will be filled in full, while the delivery on others will fall as low as twenty-five per cent. The

WM. EMERSON'S VIEW.

William Emerson, manager of the Western Seed and Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb., writes in part as follows, September 14: "We can not give actual figures on crop conditions just at this time. The different localities in Nebraska where different growers have sweet corn grown are subject to different conditions, and the character of the soil and position of the farms vary to a large extent. It is therefore easy to understand that the reports from the different rieties will be total failures, while others will range from fifty to seventy-five per cent.

"The field corn crops also vary, and we expect to be short in filling some varieties of flint corn, but hope to make fair deliveries of nearly all varieties. The same conditions will apply to White and Yellow Dent varieties of field corn.

"The vine seeds, especially cucumber, muskmelon and watermelon, have been seriously damaged throughout the entire west by the excessive moisture following the very hot weather during the latter part of July and early part of August; the ground being saturated with water becoming overheated, so as to cause steam or vapor to rise under the vines, causing blight and the rapid increase of the melon aphid. Many crops have been entirely destroyed on the above account, while all of the crops have been more or less damaged. It is therefore impossible to tell just what the crops will yield on account of the spotted condition of the fields. A few varieties will be total failures, and others will range from twenty-five to fifty per cent of an average yield, and in a few cases possibly sixty to seventy-five per cent.

"The pumpkin and squash are somewhat better, but we have lost a few crops of some varieties by floods and damage by the striped beetle when too late to replant."

ONION SETS.

Referring to onion sets at Chillicothe, O., Schilder Bros. write as follows, under date of September 12:

"The set crop here is short of last season—perhaps ten per cent short—but quality very good; they are keeping nicely. The acreage was a little larger. The actual yield was about fifteen per cent smaller, but owing to the increased acreage we should say the difference in bushels from last year is about ten per cent. Demand is heavy and prices advancing. We are paying the growers here in our neighborhood about 25 cents more per bushel than we paid this time last season."

Schilder Bros. are said also to have an interest in some 10,000 bushels of sets grown this season in the territory south of Chicago.

eties will be total failures, while others will range from fifty to seventy-five per cent.

"The field corn crops also vary, and we expect to be short in filling some varieties of flint corn, but hope to make fair deliveries of nearly all varieties. The same conditions will apply to White and Yellow Dent varieties of field corn.

"The vine seeds, especially cucumber, muskmelon and watermelon, have been seriously damaged throughout the entire west by the excessive moisture following the very hot weather during the latter part of July and early part of August; the ground being saturated with water becoming overheated, so as to cause steam or vapor to rise under the vines, causing blight and the rapid increase of the melon aphid. Many crops have been entirely destroyed on the above account, while all of the crops have been more or less damaged. It is therefore impossible to tell just what the crops will yield on account of the spotted condition of the fields. A few varieties will be total failures, and others will range from twenty-five to fifty per cent of an average yield, and in a few cases possibly sixty to seventy-five per cent.

"The pumpkin and squash are somewhat better, but we have lost a few crops of some varieties by floods and damage by the striped beetle when too late to replant."

ONION SETS.

Referring to onion sets at Chillicothe, O., Schilder Bros. write as follows, under date of September 12:

"The set crop here is short of last season—perhaps ten per cent short—but quality very good; they are keeping nicely. The acreage was a little larger. The actual yield was about fifteen per cent smaller, but owing to the increased acreage we should say the difference in bushels from last year is about ten per cent. Demand is heavy and prices advancing. We are paying the growers here in our neighborhood about 25 cents more per bushel than we paid this time last season."

Schilder Bros. are said also to have an interest in some 10,000 bushels of sets grown this season in the territory south of Chicago.

sums up the whole onion set situation as follows:

"Onion sets show about the same yield in Louisville as last year. Chillicothe reports eighty-five per cent of last year's yield, and Chicago probably has more onion sets than last year, but heavy sales that have been made relieve the situation to such an extent that prices have been advancing very rapidly. Prospects seem good for a brisk, high winter and spring market on sets."

GRASS SEED REPORT.

Gustav Schott, of Aschaffenburg, Bavaria, says that the greater part of the new crop of natural grass seeds has now been brought to market, having been harvested during fine weather and earlier than usual. The yield on the whole has not been satisfactory and proved disappointing on some kinds, which have not seeded so well in consequence of the earlier cold and rainy weather.

"Of Cynosurus cristatus (crested dogstail) the acreage is larger than last season and market returns show an average in some districts, whereas in other parts the crop is reported short. The harvest has been secured in excellent condition. No stocks were on hand from last season anywhere, but still fine seed will be selling below last year's quotations.

"Of Dactylis glomerata (cocksfoot) the producing centers in New Zealand are short of seed and the whole of the crop has been absorbed by a heavy home demand. There is practically none left for export. During the month of June a few small parcels were placed on the market at high figures and as much as 98 shillings per hundredweight were asked. In the States the crop in the largest producing districts is reported as a fairly good one. The quality is excellent and values followed the rising market already. France is reporting an average crop.

"Of Festuca duriuscula and ovina (hard and sheep's fescue), contrary to expectations that prevailed early in summer and which indicated a full average crop at that time, the yield is disappointing. It is a certainty that less seed has been harvested than last year. Stocks being exhausted, markets were cleared rapidly at advancing prices. Farmers' lots are unclean this year, being delivered in an undressed state, full of weeds, also clovers. Machining will turn out expensive, particularly for the medium and fancy qualities."

Of other items Alopecurus pratensis (meadow foxtail), Avena elatior (tall oat grass), Poa trivialis and P. pratensis (meadow grass) are almost the only ones on which average crops are reported.

BODDINGTON'S Gigantic Cyclamen

The seed of Cyclamen is often sown too early in the year, September is the best time. Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen are unequalled for size and quality of bloom. A magnificent strain of Cyclamen, with flowers of extraordinary size and substance.

Gigantic White Butterfly. Pure white; immense flowers.

Gigantic Snowflake. The largest of all white Cyclamen.

Gigantic Cherry-red. Most brilliant and effective.

Gigantic Rose. Immense flowers of a pleasing shade of light rose.

Gigantic Pink. Exquisite shade of soft pink.

Gigantic Crimson. Most striking color; under artificial light appears to be almost luminous.

Gigantic Crimson and White. A magnificent flower of the largest type.

Gigantic Syringa Blue. (New.) A charming color.

Gigantic Lilac. A very pleasing color, lighting up well at night.

Any of the above varieties, trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50; per 1000, $12.00.

Gigantic Mixed. A mixture of all the above varieties in proper proportion. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.25; 1000 seeds, $10.00.

PRINCESS MAY. A very pretty type of Cyclamen. Color, pink with suffused blotches of crimson at base of petals. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

SALMON QUEEN. Undoubtedly one of the most distinct and beautiful salmon colors found in cyclamen. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Cyclamen giganteum Salmonium splendens. The finest salmon-pink variety. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Cyclamen giganteum, Rococo, mixed colors. The beautifully fringed flowers measure 5 inches in diameter. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Cyclamen giganteum, Bush Hill Pioneer. A beautiful new feathered cyclamen in various colors. Trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.50.

Six Grand Novelty Cyclamens

Bridesmaid. New Cyclamen of the "Papilio" variety, with large, well-formed flowers of a pure white, with a red eye, while the beautifully fringed petals are broadly edged with bright red. Trade pkt., 50c.

Peach Blossom. An exceptionally handsome variety of an intense rose color. Tr. pkt., 50c.

Purple King. The best of all crimson varieties and strikingly beautiful. Trade pkt., 50c.

Phoenix. Bright cherry-crimson flowers, freely produced. Trade pkt., 50c.

Rose of Marienthal. Soft shell-pink; a very pretty variety. Trade pkt., 50c.

Vulcan. The rich crimson color is very striking and contrasts admirably with the pure white of Butterfly. Trade pkt., 50c.

CYCLAMEN, JAMES' NEW SWEET-SCENTED

A fragrant Cyclamen, having a particularly pleasant odor, resembling that of the Honey Locust, or of the Lily of the Valley. The colors are pink, flesh-pink, with carmine base, and white. Trade pkt., 50c.

Vegetable Forcing.

FORCING TOMATOES.

In the REVIEW for September 3 and 10 there appeared Prof. W. S. Blair's account of the experiments in forcing tomatoes at Macdonald College, Quebec, with a description of the methods employed in starting the plants and planting the two houses employed, also a table showing the yield, both in weight of fruit and in money value.

Average Yield From Different Rows.

The plants in house No. 1 occupied the central part of the house, and were on a raised bench. In house No. 2 a raised bench taking three rows of plants extended along the south, west and north sides. The south side bench is next to a glass partition; the west and north benches extend along the outer wall. The bench in the central part of the house is wide enough to take in seven rows of plants. The sides are solid and only ten inches high. This bench is supplied with good drainage material at the bottom. The same depth of soil was used in this as in the other benches used.

The following table gives the average yield of fruit per plant from rows located at different positions in this house:

Bench. Location	Average yield per plant.
South—Row 1. Next to glass partition...	55 3/4
South—Row 2. Center row	71
South—Row 3. Next to walk	89
West—Row 4. Next to outer wall.....	71 1/4
West—Row 5. Center row	83 3/4
West—Row 6. Next to walk	100 3/4
North—Row 7. Next to outer wall.....	49 1/2
North—Row 8. Center row	85
North—Row 9. Next to walk	97 1/4
Center—Row 10. Next to south walk.....	101 1/4
Center—Row 11. Second row to south walk	88 3/4
Center—Row 12. Third row to south walk.	87
Center—Row 13. Central row	90
Center—Row 14. Third row to north walk.	78
Center—Row 15. Second row to north walk	90 1/4
Center—Row 16. Next to north walk.....	98 3/4

The raised benches in this house gave an average yield per plant of seventy-eight ounces and the center bench an average of ninety ounces per plant. These two benches came into fruiting about the same time, and the quantity of fruit picked to July 1 averaged approximately the same per plant on the ground bench as on the raised bench, but the plants continued fruiting longer on the center bench, due, no doubt, to having more head room than those on the side benches.

Method of Handling.

The variety Frogmore was selected for use in these experiments. As already stated, the benches contained six inches of soil. There is some little difficulty in transplanting from a 6-inch pot to this depth of soil and we think that a 6-inch pan would suit the plant as well, and be better for transplanting on account of being shallower.

The plants were trained to a single stem, and supported with No. 10 wire stuck into the soil at one end and fastened to wires running over the benches. These supports were five and one-half feet long. To these the plants were tied, whenever it was necessary, with raffia. Strong, coarse wool twine makes a good support. This twine is tied to a wire running across the bench below, and to a similar wire above. The plants are tied to this the same as where wire is used.

A BED OF MUSHROOMS

Raised from our Spawn, will bear longer and yield better than from any other variety of Spawn. This is proven by facts. Full particulars and information how to succeed in mushroom raising free. We warrant you, if using our method of growing mushrooms, that all will go well.

The plants were trained to a single stem by pinching off all-but the upper or primary shoot. In pinching off the side branches or suckers it is necessary to go over the plant every few days, for they make rapid growth and, unless removed when small, they take considerable strength from the plant. When the plants in the pots are getting large it is advisable to use No. 10 wire, about eighteen inches long, as a support.

Temperature and Ventilation.

The temperature was kept at 60 degrees during the night, and in the daytime also, during very dull weather, the house registered about this mark. During bright days the temperature would go up to 70 or 80 degrees, according to the day, and in the late spring sometimes to 90 degrees.

Tomatoes require plenty of fresh air in order to make stocky, thrifty growth; therefore particular care in ventilating is necessary. Avoid cold draughts.

It is quite important not to water too heavily. The soil should be thoroughly wet to the bottom of the benches and kept moist, but not saturated. In winter, two waterings per week are usually quite sufficient. As the season advances and the plants increase in size, more of course will be required. During the early growth of the tomato the atmosphere is better kept somewhat moist, but a dry atmosphere is the best for aiding in pollination and preventing rot. The leaves of the tomato plant are better and more healthy if not syringed at all.

Pollination.

As already stated, tomatoes require a dry, warm atmosphere to facilitate pollination. The pollen is shed freely during the middle of bright days and it is at this time that the plants require hand pollination. This point is a very important one, especially in northern districts, and unless considerable attention is given to it, the profits from the crop will not amount to much. Various devices are used for doing this work, but we found a rabbit's tail, tied to a short stick, the best. With this, one can go over the plants very rapidly and, as the fruits were all regular and marketable, this device evidently is one that we can safely recommend for pollinating the plants.

Marketing.

The bulk of our fruit was sold on commission in Montreal. It was shipped in three and four-pound till boxes, four boxes to a crate. This we found to be the best method for handling this fancy fruit, and all plants grown in greenhouses should produce fancy stock. The three-pound till boxes are the most convenient. The crates are made the depth of the till boxes and three 3-inch slats put across top and bottom.

Troy, N. Y.—J. G. Barrett has the newest thing in a cement ice-box, which does away entirely with woodwork with the exception of the front. While not so handsome in appearance, it is admirable for storage purposes.

PACIFIC COAST.

ELMHURST, CAL.—E. James has bought the interest of his partner in the firm of Hutchins & James and will continue the business.

BERKELEY, CAL.—C. A. Hutchinson, who has been associated with H. M. Sanborn, has about completed one of the most attractive and conveniently arranged flower stores in this part of the state. The new building, which is of the mission style of architecture, is located on a large lot belonging to Mr. Hutchinson, at 2315 Telegraph avenue, which is in the heart of the business section at Telegraph avenue and Bancroft way. The salesrooms and conservatory will be under the same roof, but will be separated by a long, plate glass partition.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

State of Trade.

Business in general is picking up. A marked improvement is noted in the last few weeks. The retailers seem to be busy with general counter trade, there is quite a little funeral work and all hands are apparently fairly busy and happy. Carnations and roses have, in the last few weeks, improved in quality. There seems plenty on hand to go around.

Rising & Dunscomb have moved to more commodious quarters and are now located on Third street, between Main and Spring streets, in the heart of the city. Their new location is more desirable in every way than the old one.

Club Notes.

Eagles' hall has been secured as a permanent home for the Florists' Club. A lively but friendly discussion took place at the last meeting between a few of the members in regard to the "yellow peril" proposition in the florists' business on the Pacific coast, which seems to all of us to be a genuine peril. They are naturally a progressive race and what they have learned from their white brothers in regard to floriculture they have put to good use, but in the writer's humble opinion this generation has little to fear on that score.

Below follows a list of the officers of the club: President, O. C. Saakes; vice-president, Dr. Houghten; secretary, G. S. Dunscomb; financial secretary, H. N. Gage; sergeant-at-arms, H. W. Turner. C. E. M.

DEMAND FOR ORNAMENTALS.

It is rather too soon to tell what is going to be in demand on the Pacific coast during the coming season, in the line of ornamental stock. The excessive dryness of last spring had the effect of curtailing greatly the late planting, and many projected improvements have remained "in statu quo" since that time. The nurserymen and tree growers have large stocks on hand and everything is in readiness for a good season's business.

The financial difficulties, according to canvassing agents, have curtailed the buying proclivities for almost every class of stock, excepting such as will be planted to obtain revenue from. I refer to fruit trees, small fruits, etc. These will be used heavily in certain localities, but the range of varieties called for is limited and planters will confine themselves almost entirely to well tried varieties. Planting for speculative or experimental purposes will not be heavily indulged in.

The planting of ornamentals in large quantities, judging by orders booked by several of our large nurseries, will be considerably less than that of last season. Smaller lists for the beautification of city lots are about as numerous as those of last year. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There is no excess of fancy stock of any kind at the present writing. Plenty of carnations from the new plantings are being offered to the retailers, but they are usually short of stem. Roses are entirely off crop with everyone, and there is a healthy demand for everything offered in that line. Asters are on the wane and the growers are gradually raising the prices. Sweet peas hold their own, however, although the stems are getting shorter daily. Japanese lilies are holding out well, but most of the stock sent in shows the lateness of the season. Amaryllises are practically over for this year. Valley is in fair supply and moves slowly. Gladioli, except for a few late kinds, have disappeared from the show windows. Dahlias in the newer colors and shapes are being used quite freely for decorative purposes, but the public do not buy them as freely as the quality of the flowers warrant; probably another season will find them in greater demand. Chrysanthemums have not yet made their appearance, from the outside, except in a few instances. A fair supply of the early yellow and white kinds is shown. They are greenhouse grown and cost the stores about $2.50 per dozen. Other kinds of outdoor stock move slowly.

There is a slight increase in business since the schools opened, and funeral orders have been fairly active. The weather is warmer than it was at any time during June, July or August.

Over in Oakland and Alameda the retailers have had quite a run of funeral work and prospects are bright for the fall trade.

Various Notes.

The Thorsted Co., of Fruitvale, has opened a neat retail establishment on the corner of Fourteenth and Washington streets, Oakland. This firm is largely interested in shipping cut flowers to in-

State of Business.

There is a better tone in business circles, the last two weeks showing a healthy revival. The fall trade is opening up satisfactorily, which we hope is a good sign for a prosperous winter. The first crop of roses is in great demand, especially the whites, as September is a month of weddings and this year is no exception. A much needed rain the latter part of August has improved the outdoor supply of cut flowers, particularly the asters, which are at their best. With favorable weather we will have them and sweet peas for a month yet. Lilium auratum, rubrum and album are selling well and are most useful in helping to keep up appearances.

Various Notes.

Henry Jewell, of The Dalles, was in town last week, buying glass and a boiler for a greenhouse. Mr. Jewell said that while he is not a florist, his wife and son have excellent taste for the business, and he is going to start them right.

We were also glad to meet Mrs. Frank Zimmer, who succeeded the late Mrs. Rosa Bausch, of Eugene; W. H. Morton, of Hillsboro, and Mrs. G. A. Hannah, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who was here visiting her father, Jay Gould, of Kern Park.

A half holiday on Labor day enabled us to pay a few social debts and we decided on a trip to Oregon City. The greenhouse establishments along this car line are becoming more numerous and our first stop was at Meldrum station, where George Betz & Sons built 18,000 feet of glass last year. This, with the Williams avenue range in Portland, makes a total of 40,000 feet, and eight acres of ground here gives them ample space for further expansion. This firm expects to dispose of everything at retail and has just opened an attractive little store at 349 Morrison street, Portland.

Another range of 5,000 feet at Meldrum station was built last year by Byron

The next call was at Gladstone, where Wilkinson & Hughes grow miscellaneous stock for the wholesale trade. Planting of the houses was in progress there.

Arriving at Oregon City, it took us an hour to climb 6,000 feet to Falls View, where we called on R. G. Pierce. He welcomed us cordially, remarking that had he expected us he would have met us at the foot of the hill with his air-ship. NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE nurserymen are beginning to get busy with fall deliveries.

THE Kansas State Horticultural Society reports apples as forty-one per cent of a full crop.

DEALERS in hardy plants will be interested in the notes on phloxes in the Philadelphia letter this week.

DIGGING and shipping peonies is well under way. There is a good volume of business in the better sorts, but not much doing in the cheaper varieties.

THE Schroeder-Son Nursery Co., Lafayette, Colo., writes: "Our engine house burned down Tuesday afternoon, September 8, and is a total loss. Our well is also burned out eighty-two feet in length, leaving thirty-six feet which are not damaged, three of our largest pumps going down in the well. The engine and boilers were pretty well damaged. The loss was fully covered by insurance and we started the next day to build again."

THE PECAN IN THE NURSERY.

[A paper by R. C. Simpson, of Monticello, Fla., begun in the Review of September 10, 1908.]

Propagating.

Perhaps the easiest and most certain method of propagating the pecan is by budding. The ordinary shield bud, which is commonly used in working most fruit stocks, is not successful on the pecan. The annular bud, or some of its modifications, seems to be the most efficient method. This ring bud usually entirely encircles the stock, but if the tree is large it may go only part-way around and do just as well. The buds are tied with waxed cloth and usually by the budder himself, as he wishes to leave the bud exposed to the air as short a time as possible. The wraps should come off in fourteen to eighteen days.

If the budding has been done early in the season the buds should be forced out; if done late in the summer they should be left dormant. We find one of the best ways to start the bud is by cutting the top about half off or breaking it over; then, as soon as the bud breaks, make the second cut just over the bulge above the top ring. If the stock is cut off at the bud at first, it is apt to bleed considerably.

At Monticello the budding season lasts from June until September and occasionally into October. Grafting can be successfully done from the first part of December until the first part of March. As spring budding is also practiced to some extent in April and chip budding in March and April, it is seen that propagation may go on almost throughout the entire year.

Digging the Trees.

By no means the least of the pecan nurseryman's problems is that of digging. The pecan, as you all know, has a tap-root which is often longer than the top, and to get this root, or enough of it to satisfy our customers, it is necessary to dig the trees by hand. If the weather happens to be very dry, as is often the case in the fall of the year, a pickaxe is sometimes a necessary adjunct to the spade. It costs us about 3 cents each to dig an average-sized pecan tree with the labor at our command.

The cost, however, is not the chief difficulty; it is the time required that gives us the most trouble. As the average negro will not dig over twenty-five 3-foot to 4-foot trees in a day, if one had to ship, say, 2,000 trees on a day's for most of us. Of course, a 1-foot to 2-foot or 2-foot to 3-foot tree can be dug a little faster and handled more rapidly than the larger ones. We usually furnish a root running from eighteen to thirty inches long, depending on the size of the tree.

We believe if we were to run the tree digger under the one-year-old seedlings and cut the tap root five or six inches underground, that the trees worked on these stocks could be dug with the digger. The cutting of the tap root would cause several new tap roots to form and also more laterals, so that the entire root system would be kept much nearer the surface of the ground.

Packing and Shipping.

The pecan tree, being a high-priced product, should be packed with exceeding care. In our work we use nothing but sphagnum moss or excelsior and always "paper-line" the packages, even bales sent by express. Trees packed securely in this manner will reach their destination in as good condition as they left the packing shed. We have had bales which were lost by the express company and were opened up in first-class condition after being packed a month. The roots of pecan trees, consisting chiefly of straight tap roots, admit of very snug, tight packing, and when the trees are properly tied up they make an ideal looking bale.

Our shipping season commences about the middle of October—earlier than it should, as the trees are not fully dormant until the last part of November. Trees sent out early in the season should, therefore, be handled and packed in the very best manner, to insure successful transplanting. We find that dipping the roots in a thin mud just before packing is beneficial and adds but little to the transportation charges.

Development of the Business.

In conclusion, we will say that the pecan nursery business is gradually becoming more and more like any other branch of the trade. Buds and grafts of the select varieties are each year becoming more plentiful, so that the production of trees in the future will not be necessarily limited, as it has been in the past. Unless some unforeseen disease or insect enemy appears, however, we believe the demand will continue to keep pace with the supply. It will not be long until the buyer can telegraph an order for 1,000 pecan trees of a certain variety and grade, just as he would an order for any other fruit trees, and be for most of us. Of course, a 1-foot to 2-foot or 2-foot to 3-foot tree can be dug a little faster and handled more rapidly than the larger ones. We usually furnish a root running from eighteen to thirty inches long, depending on the size of the tree.

We believe if we were to run the tree digger under the one-year-old seedlings and cut the tap root five or six inches underground, that the trees worked on these stocks could be dug with the digger. The cutting of the tap root would cause several new tap roots to form and also more laterals, so that the entire root system would be kept much nearer the surface of the ground.

Packing and Shipping.

The pecan tree, being a high-priced product, should be packed with exceeding care. In our work we use nothing but sphagnum moss or excelsior and always "paper-line" the packages, even bales sent by express. Trees packed securely in this manner will reach their destination in as good condition as they left the packing shed. We have had bales which were lost by the express company and were opened up in first-class condition after being packed a month. The roots of pecan trees, consisting chiefly of straight tap roots, admit of very snug, tight packing, and when the trees are properly tied up they make an ideal looking bale.

Our shipping season commences about the middle of October, earlier than it should, as the trees are not fully dormant until the last part of November. Trees sent out early in the season should, therefore, be handled and packed in the very best manner, to insure successful transplanting. We find that dipping the roots in a thin mud just before packing is beneficial and adds but little to the transportation charges.

Development of the Business.

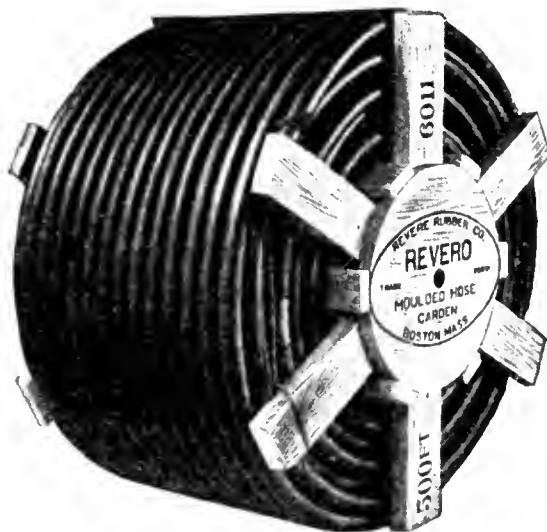

In conclusion, we will say that the pecan nursery business is gradually becoming more and more like any other branch of the trade. Buds and grafts of the select varieties are each year becoming more plentiful, so that the production of trees in the future will not be necessarily limited, as it has been in the past. Unless some untoward disease or insect enemy appears, however, we believe the demand will continue to keep pace with the supply. It will not be long until the buyer can telegraph an order for 1,000 pecan trees of a certain variety and grade, just as he would an order for any other fruit trees, and he almost as certain that they will be shipped at once. Nothing, however, will facilitate the handling of pecan trees on a large scale more than a pecan tree digger. Let us hope that it will come in the near future.

DAVENPORT, IA.

Reports of those who have recently attended the florists' convention were heard at the meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Association at the home of Harry Bells, September 10. John Temple, who attended the national convention at Niagara Falls, reported on the convention proceedings and also told of the trip through the east. Theodore Ewald and John Temple reported on the Iowa state florists' convention at Des Moines, and Emil Boehm, who attended the convention of the superintendents of parks at Minneapolis, related interesting occurrences at that meeting.

Every member was present and the many interesting and instructive talks made the session an especially good one. Following the meeting the host served refreshments.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Ludwig Stapp, of Rock Island, and the discussion of the evening will WOBURN, MASS. Gustave Olsen, formerly of this city and who until recently has been engaged in the florists' business at Hartford, Conn., has secured a greenhouse on Bow street and will begin business at once.

ELM GROVE, W. VA.—C. S. Carr, who has been manager at Waddington farm for eight years, has handed in his resignation, to take effect October 15. At the time Mr. Carr took charge of this place it was almost a wilderness and the improvement made is much to his credit. About 10,000 feet of glass are used for roses, carnations, vegetables, etc., together with bedding plants, of which over 20,000 were used last spring. Mr. Carr will go to Denver for a rest at the home of his son, Charles Carr.

Carnation Plants

We have about 1000 more plants to offer of May at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Don't delay in ordering if you want to plant this variety this season.

We also have fine plants of Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Crimson Glow and Mrs. Lawson to offer at $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

These plants are stocky and well matured and are in fine shape for planting.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There are ripples of business here and there on the quiet summer sea of business, indicating that fall has come and acting as forerunners of increased activity. There are good days and bad ones, with just enough of the former to keep the latter from becoming unduly depressing. There is an excess of arrivals, which makes cleaning out more than a problem, and much goes to the ash barrel. Asters rule the market and there is a good sale for white and pink, but purple and red are at present entirely too numerous to keep pace in price with the lighter shades.

Dahlias are scarce and find ready sale. The shortage is due mostly to the dry season, which caused them to make poor growth. One of the largest growers of dahlias has not shipped any so far and has poor prospects of shipping any, on account of the aster bugs.

Some fine blooms of My Maryland have been sold at the Florists' Exchange and were eagerly bought up. This rose seems to meet all the requirements of the commercial grower.

Various Notes.

The park board has decided to abandon the greenhouses at Carroll park, and expects to offer them for sale in the near future, believing that enough plants can be grown in the other districts to take care of Carroll park district. The range of glass is a large one, and it also has a large collection of cacti which belongs to the Cacti Club, housed in several houses.

The Florists' Exchange has handled a large number of carnation plants and finds a steady demand for the leading varieties. It handles a full line of florists' supplies for the greenhouse, and the plant department is filled with a fine variety of decorative plants.

Hugo Walther, of Park Heights avenue, has been cutting extra fine asters and finds a ready sale at his stand in Lexington market.

Current Comment.

Trade is picking up as the cool weather sets in. Considerable business has been done in ferns this summer. Boston, Pieris, Whitmani and Amerpohlii sold well in large sizes. Immense hanging baskets of Boston fern and of Asparagus Sprengeri were seen on display at Baur's.

G. B. Maynadier, of the Bureau of Soils, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., was in Erie recently and called on the local florists.

G. H. Baur and W. O. Baur took part in the Trial Scene of the Merchant of Venice, given at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. September 3. They took the parts of Antonio and Bassanio, respectively.

C. E. Hapgood, of Warren, Pa., formerly manager of Niemeyer's flower store in Erie, has taken a position as city salesman for P. Minnig & Co., wholesale grocers of Erie.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wallis are visiting relatives and friends in Cleveland.

Clarke & Robb have dissolved partnership. Mr. Clarke is growing roses for J. V. Laver at present. Mr. Robb is running the greenhouses under the name of the Robb Floral Co.

Henry Hapgood, of Warren, Pa., is spending the summer with his uncle, Henry A. Niemeyer.

Miss Anna Schultz, saleslady at Baur's floral store, has returned from a three weeks' vacation.

The Baur Floral Co. has purchased a 10-acre plot of ground at West Twenty-second street and Brown avenue, and is erecting new greenhouses on it. One house, 40x300 feet, is nearly completed. Violets, carnations, Asparagus plumosus, etc., are already planted and the greenhouse is built over them. The ground is level and well adapted to the purpose. Gas and water have been drilled for and were found in abundance. G. H. Baur is superintending the building of the new place and expects to complete one house before the cold weather sets in. A. J. Baur is taking care of the large plant on West Twenty-sixth street and Brown avenue. B. P.

ESSEX, CONN.—C. G. Cheney's new greenhouse is nearly completed.

MONTREAL.

Current Comment.

September 10 and 11 Lyric hall presented a scene of much attractiveness, when the Montreal Horticultural Society held its annual exhibition. The display of plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables was much better than of late years, and a large number of visitors appreciated the show. Mr. Wilson-Smith opened the exhibition, and on the last evening he presented the prizes to the lucky winners. F. C. Smith won most marks in the plant section, C. A. Smith in the cut bloom section, George Trussell in the fruit and vegetable section and F. S. Watson in the amateur section.

Business is once more becoming brisk, flowers are more plentiful, and young, fresh ferns and palms are beginning to make their appearance in all the stores.

J. Bennett has returned from a visit to Ottawa, Toronto, Buffalo and other places.

Miss Carmichael has decided to give up her store for the next year, until times are better.

Campbell's are, as usual, doing a lot of business in every branch, and their store always looks a bower of beauty.

The death of Mr. Pinoteau, superintendent of the Montreal parks, was a great loss to all, and much regret is felt by the club men.

We have been having cool evenings, though the days are warm enough. Bush fires are raging and rain is much desired, as everything is being burnt.

TOMMY.

FITCHBURG, MASS.—W. H. Ritter has purchased the Pethybridge greenhouses, in West Fitchburg. These have been used for cucumbers, but Mr. Ritter will devote the space to growing cut flowers, in charge of Percy Rogers.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Superintendent Nussbaumer, of Como park, made special effort this year to decorate world's fair grounds attractively a results are said to be most gratifying. Two beds representing a star and crescent, in front of the agricultural building, were particularly pleasing.

....GERANIUMS....

OUR SPECIALTY is growing Geraniums in 2-in. pots. We have a fine lot ready for immediate shipment in a collection that is second to none in the country. We have good standard sorts, such as

DETROIT.

The Market.

The days are getting shorter and carnation stems longer. Each is a sign of approaching winter. Business was not any too lively last week, probably owing to another spell of warm weather. We have not had any real fall weather, so far, and therefore can hardly expect business to open up.

There are a lot of poor asters on the market and these get no farther than the dump. As reported last week, good stock sells readily. Many fine roses are obtainable at reasonable prices. Robert Klagge is sending in some fine La Detroit.

Various Notes.

Antoine Wintzer, of West Grove, Pa., spent Sunday, September 6, in Detroit, as the guest of J. F. Sullivan.

Charles Frahm is building up a nice little retail business on the east side. Ordinary work he makes up himself and the larger pieces he turns over to B. Schroeter.

Many complaints are heard of the poor express service in this city. Stock arriving on the early morning trains from the west is carried around town the better part of the morning. No satisfaction can be had at the head office, as they claim not to have enough wagons.

H. S.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The floral exhibit at the state fair was well filled, considering the dry weather. Those who made exhibits deserve great credit, as all outdoor flowers were practically spoiled. The dahlias were entirely gone and the mixed flower exhibit was small as compared with other years. The gladioli and asters showed the effect of the drought. Fred Dorner, Jr., acted as judge and in a satisfactory manner to all concerned. He awarded prizes as follows:

Floral design, John Rieman first, Alfred Warner second.
Bride's bouquet, John Rieman first, Alfred Warner second.
Basket of flowers, John Rieman first.
Vase of cut flowers, John Rieman first.
Display of gladioli, Wm. Hack first, W. W. Coles second.
Display of asters, Wm. Hack first, W. W. Coles second.
Collection of flowers, W. W. Coles first.
Fifty red carnations, Alfred Warner first.
Fifty white carnations, Alfred Warner first, W. W. Coles second.
Fifty pink carnations, Alfred Warner first, W. W. Coles second.
Red roses, W. W. Coles first.
White roses, W. W. Coles first.
Pink roses, W. W. Coles first.

Facts Worth Learning

LOOK, BROTHER MINE! LISTEN!

What GODFREY ASCHMANN, the Philadelphia Hustler, the great foreseer, has got to say. He never goes wrong.

HE PREDICTS GREAT PROSPERITY!

NOW BEFORE THE DOOR

You will sell everything you have at good prices. After a hot spell follows a cold one; after rain, sunshine; after a panic, money plentiful, and you have got a chance

TO FILL YOUR POCKETS IF YOU WISH TO DO SO.

ARE YOU PREPARED FOR THE RUSH?

Brother, think it over; it is high time. When will you start in? Now, of course. Waiting means suicide.

NOT ASLEEP.

We are well prepared to meet all demands. The Araucaria King means to sell his Araucarias, and the motto of the moveman means Keep a Moving. Eighteen years of experience of importing, growing, shipping and handling of Araucarias brings us in the foreground of any merchant in the business; so well known that any florist from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean can sing a song of Godfrey Aschmann's Araucarias.

CHEAPER THAN EVER—FERNS TO BEAT THE BAND.

Four houses full of choice Boston, Whitman and Scottii Ferns, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in., all pot-grown, raised in snug houses which protect from stiff frosts; never were so fine as this year. Next on the program we carry a fine stock of choice Kentia Palms, Rubbers, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which stand a challenge with those of all the notable growers of America and Europe.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 tiers, 10 to 12 inches high, 40c; 5½-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 15 inches high, 50c; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 years old, 3, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 16, 18, 20 to 22 inches high, 60c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, 6-in. pots, 3 years old, 3 tiers, fine, beautiful plants, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, specimen plants; spring, 1907, importation; suitable for lawns or porches, 5 to 6 years old, 7-in. pots, 5 tiers, 25, 30, 35 to 40 inches high, same in width, beautiful plants, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 to $4.00 each.

Boston and Scottii ferns, 4-in., 20c; 5-in., 30c to 35c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, as big as a bushel basket, 75c to $1.00. Scottii, 8 to 9-in. pans, made-up of 3 plants, 75c to $1.00 per pan. Whitman, 4-in., 20c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c. Whitman, in 8-in. pans, three large plants in a pan, 75c. Whitman, in 9-in. pans, 3 large plants in a pan, $1.00. We have a big stock of these varieties and they are pot, not bench, grown. Amerpobill, 5-in., 30c, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5½ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 20 inches high, 85c to 40c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, a large one, about 40 inches high, in the center, surrounded by three smaller ones, $4.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 36 inches high, $2.00; specimen, 7-in., 40 to 50 inches high, $2.50 to $3.00; 6-in., 30 inches high, $1.50; 6-in., 25 inches high, $1.00; 6-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5½-in., 50c.

Cocos Weddelliana, bushy plants, 3-in., 15c, 18c and 20c; 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for Dishes, 2½-in., $4.00 per 100. A big stock, best assortment.

A Wonderful New Nephrolepis Nephrolepis Superbissima

Introduction of 1908

We desire to call attention to this new fern, which originated with us and which we are introducing this year. It is a very unique and distinct novelty—as distinct from Nephrolepis Piersoni and Piersoni elegantissima as they were from Bostoniensis. It is, in fact, a complete break. The fronds are very heavily imbricated, the pinnae overlapping, making the fronds very dense and compact.

It differs from the other Nephrolepis not only in form, but also in color, being a richer and darker green—entirely different from the yellowish green of all the other Nephrolepis. The plant is very sturdy in its habit, the fronds never breaking down.

While a photograph shows a similarity to its predecessors, it is absolutely distinct, not only in the formation of the fronds and color, but also in its habit and general characteristics. It makes a much more dwarf and compact growth, the fronds being very dense, firm and rigid, and having a great deal more substance, so that it will stand more knocking around than any other fern of this type.

It is a sterling novelty. Experts who have seen it consider it by far the best fern ever sent out. It is a plant that needs to be seen to have its great value and sterling qualities appreciated. It really is not in the same class with the other varieties.

It was awarded a First-class Certificate by the Royal Horticultural Society at Crystal Palace in London, November, 1907, the plants exhibited there having been shipped from New York two weeks before that time. After being exhibited in London, the same plants were shipped to Edinburgh, Scotland, where they were again awarded a First-class Certificate by the Scottish Horticultural Society. This will indicate the value of the plant as a novelty, and also demonstrates in a very conclusive manner its fine keeping and shipping qualities.

We have just begun shipping advance orders, and new orders can now be shipped immediately on receipt.

Fine, strong plants, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100. 4-in. pots, $7.00 per doz.; $50.00 per 100. 6-in. pots, $1.50 each; $15.00 per doz.

CARNATIONS.

28,000 FIELD PLANTS.

I have a large supply of Enchantress. This is extra fine stock in splendid shape for benching now. The plants are strong, bushy ones, that break close to the ground, and have a good blue color, showing perfect health and thriftiness. There is absolutely no stem rot or disease in the field. This stock has an abundance of shoots to produce an early crop at about the right time, as well as smaller breaks for later crops. In fact I consider this the best stock I have ever offered the trade. I also have some good Queen and Harlowarden. Prices, $5.00 per 100, $45.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

A. A. Gannett, Geneva, N. Y.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE Detroit Steam Trap Co., Detroit, writes as follows: "On page 60 of the REVIEW for September 3 there appeared a statement from the Morehead Mfg. Co., of Detroit. We have been inserting an ad in your issues since August 20, under the name of the Detroit Steam Trap Co., for the Detroit Steam Trap. This trap is entirely different from the one which the American Blower Co., of Detroit, was advertising previous to the above mentioned date. As to the Detroit trap, which we are advertising in your columns, we assert positively it is not mixed up in any litigation whatsoever."

A COIL BOILER.

I have two greenhouses in Illinois, one 18x50 and the other 9x90, which I should like to heat with a coil boiler, and I should like you to give me any information which would help me to make one. I have 4-inch pipes in the houses. Please state the size of boiler and pipes to be used.
G. R.

You fail to state the temperature desired in your houses, but I have assumed that in your climate a 60-degree temperature will give you ample radiation for most plants that you will care to grow. The two houses, on this basis, require a boiler capable of carrying 900 square feet of radiation. The boiler, to carry this amount of pipe, should con-

BANG? WHO NEXT?

PLEASANT HILL, Mo., Sept. 26, 1907.—A boiler exploded early today in the conservatory of Geo. M. Kellogg, three miles from here, partially destroying the plant and causing damage estimated at $75,000. Over half of the plant was saved. The conservatories are among the largest in the west.

With a CAPITOL BOILER this explosion would have been impossible. Safety is better than insurance. The actual property loss may be covered by insurance, but the loss of business cannot.

Be on the safe side. Equip your greenhouse with a Capitol Boiler and you will have safety from explosion, the lowest possible fuel expense, the lowest expense in attention and the most in heating efficiency. Add to this long years of service, and quick repairs, when repairs are necessary, by reason of the divided sections. These days of keen competition leave no room for experiment. The Capitol Boiler is a necessity of every florist.

DEAR SIR:—If the Morehead Return Trap cost ten times what you ask for it, it would be cheap when time, labor and cost of repairs are considered, in comparison with the steam pump I had installed before getting your Trap. How to Keep Your Chimney Cool

First—Don't skimp your boiler. Buy one large enough so you don't have to leave the draft door open a good part of the time and force the burning gases so rapidly that they reach the chimney before the heat is more than half extracted.

Second—Buy a Burnham, because it is the only boiler with cross fire channel having side flue openings, or with a fire travel three times the boiler's length before reaching the smoke outlet. No other cast iron sectional boiler is constructed especially for greenhouse heating. Send for catalog.

tain 120 square feet of heating surface. To build such a heater of 1½-inch pipe will require 240 lineal feet of pipe. The details of the construction of a pipe boiler include the construction of a brick furnace in which to arrange your heating surface. It will probably be not much more expensive and possibly much more satisfactory to buy one of the moderate priced heaters advertised in the REVIEW.
L. C. C.

CEMENT FOR CAST-IRON PIPE.

Portland cement makes a good joint. I have one house piped with 4-inch pipe and the joints were made with Portland cement and have been used for fifteen years. The joints are made the same as with iron filings; that is, first a layer of oakum and then cement, filling the sleeve nearly full, and then a layer of oakum, plastering over the outside with cement. The advantage is that one can make three joints with cement while he can make but one with the iron filings. This is in answer to the inquiry of C. J. in the REVIEW for August 27.

MUSHROOM HOUSES.

We are building two mushroom houses 16x100, with a rhubarb forcing house on the north side, 16x100. On the south side we will put a greenhouse and boiler-room, with office, packing house, etc. But we may not put up the greenhouse this fall. How much pipe will it take to heat the mushroom houses to 50 degrees in zero weather? Also, what size of boiler will be needed?

H. H. C.

Each house 16x100 should be provided with 600 square feet of radiation to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees during severe weather. If you use 1½-inch pipe and hot water at 180 degrees it will require 1,200 feet of pipe. If 2-inch pipe is used, 960 feet will give the same amount of radiation. To handle the three houses contemplated the boiler used should be rated at not less than 2,000 square feet of radiation.
L. C. C.

TOO LITTLE RADIATION.

I am building two greenhouses, each 17x60, which I will heat with hot water, using 4-inch pipes. These houses are built north and south, with the boiler-shed at the north end. They have concrete walls all around and no exposure except the roof. Will it be safe to run a 4-inch flow half-way up the roof and drop at the south end into three 4-inch returns under three beds? Will it be Greenhouse Heating.

The Detroit Steam Trap Co., Detroit, writes as follows: "On page 60 of the REVIEW for September 3 there appeared a statement from the Morehead Mfg. Co., of Detroit. We have been inserting an ad in your issues since August 20, under the name of the Detroit Steam Trap Co., for the Detroit Steam Trap. This trap is entirely different from the one which the American Blower Co., of Detroit, was advertising previous to the above mentioned date. As to the Detroit trap, which we are advertising in your columns, we assert positively it is not mixed up in any litigation whatsoever."

A COIL BOILER.

I have two greenhouses in Illinois, one 18x50 and the other 9x90, which I should like to heat with a coil boiler, and I should like you to give me any information which would help me to make one. I have 4-inch pipes in the houses. Please state the size of boiler and pipes to be used.
G. R.

You fail to state the temperature desired in your houses, but I have assumed that in your climate a 60-degree temperature will give you ample radiation for most plants that you will care to grow. The two houses, on this basis, require a boiler capable of carrying 900 square feet of radiation. The boiler, to carry this amount of pipe, should con-

BANG? WHO NEXT?

PLEASANT HILL, Mo., Sept. 26, 1907.—A boiler exploded early today in the conservatory of Geo. M. Kellogg, three miles from here, partially destroying the plant and causing damage estimated at $75,000. Over half of the plant was saved. The conservatories are among the largest in the west.

With a CAPITOL BOILER this explosion would have been impossible. Safety is better than insurance. The actual property loss may be covered by insurance, but the loss of business cannot.

Be on the safe side. Equip your greenhouse with a Capitol Boiler and you will have safety from explosion, the lowest possible fuel expense, the lowest expense in attention and the most in heating efficiency. Add to this long years of service, and quick repairs, when repairs are necessary, by reason of the divided sections. These days of keen competition leave no room for experiment. The Capitol Boiler is a necessity of every florist.

Low boiler with socket connections, for shallow cellar.

A glimpse into the fire box, showing the cross fire channels, side flue openings and the deep water ways directly over the fire.

How to Keep Your Chimney Cool

First—Don't skimp your boiler. Buy one large enough so you don't have to leave the draft door open a good part of the time and force the burning gases so rapidly that they reach the chimney before the heat is more than half extracted.

Second—Buy a Burnham, because it is the only boiler with cross fire channel having side flue openings, or with a fire travel three times the boiler's length before reaching the smoke outlet. No other cast iron sectional boiler is constructed especially for greenhouse heating. Send for catalog.

tain 120 square feet of heating surface. To build such a heater of 1½-inch pipe will require 240 lineal feet of pipe. The details of the construction of a pipe boiler include the construction of a brick furnace in which to arrange your heating surface. It will probably be not much more expensive and possibly much more satisfactory to buy one of the moderate priced heaters advertised in the REVIEW. L. C. C.

CEMENT FOR CAST-IRON PIPE.

Portland cement makes a good joint. I have one house piped with 4 inch pipe and the joints were made with Portland cement and have been used for fifteen years. The joints are made the same as with iron filings; that is, first a layer of oakum and then cement, filling the sleeve nearly full, and then a layer of oakum, plastering over the outside with cement. The advantage is that one can make three joints with cement while he can make but one with the iron filings. This is in answer to the inquiry of C. J. in the REVIEW for August 27. J. G. W.

MUSHROOM HOUSES.

We are building two mushroom houses 16x100, with a rhubarb forcing house on the north side, 16x100. On the south side we will put a greenhouse and boiler-room, with office, packing house, etc. But we may not put up the greenhouse this fall. How much pipe will it take to heat the mushroom houses to 50 degrees in zero weather? Also, what size of boiler will be needed? H. H. C.

Each house 16x100 should be provided with 600 square feet of radiation to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees during severe weather. If you use 1½-inch pipe and hot water at 180 degrees it will require 1,200 feet of pipe. If 2-inch pipe is used, 960 feet will give the same amount of radiation. To handle the three houses contemplated the boiler used should be rated at not less than 2,000 square feet of radiation. L. C. C.

TOO LITTLE RADIATION.

I am building two greenhouses, each 17x60, which I will heat with hot water, using 4 inch pipes. These houses are built north and south, with the boiler-shed at the north end. They have concrete walls all around and no exposure except the roof. Will it be safe to run a 1 inch flow half way up the roof and drop at the south end into three 4 inch returns under three beds? Will it be all right to couple both the returns, one for each house, on to one pipe at the boiler? The boiler is in the center of the two houses. My idea is to run a flow pipe in each house, but to couple all six returns into one pipe at the north end to return to the boiler. The two flows have five and one-half feet drop at the south end and the return has about three and one-half feet drop at the boiler. These houses are for miscellaneous stock. I have only about six inches above the flow pipe at the boiler for my expansion tank. It holds forty gallons. Where should I couple the tank; on which flow?

S. R.

I fear the piping you have planned to install will not maintain a satisfactory temperature for all winter work with a miscellaneous lot of plants. I would not consider it safe to figure on less than a 60 degree temperature for mixed stock. This would require nearly 400 square feet of radiation in the houses, which would require at least five lines of pipe. You plan for four. If you think 45 degrees safe for your stock, then your plan will probably be all right. I would not attempt to use an overhead flow with 4-inch cast-iron pipe, but should plan to put all the pipes under the benches. Make the high point in the system at the south end and give the pipes a good grade. Connect the expansion tank with the main return near the boiler, not with the flow. Carry the expansion tank several feet above the highest point in the system, even if you have to build a box or tower on top of the boiler-shed to house it. I would suggest eight to ten feet in your case. If the boiler has two openings into which returns can be carried, I would prefer to return each house independently to the boiler. If there is only one return opening, carry them close to the boiler before uniting them.
L. C. C.

HEAT FROM RESIDENCE.

I am building a greenhouse 14½x47 feet, four feet to the eaves and nine and a half feet to the ridge. I expect to grow a general line of plants. Please state how you would pipe the greenhouse from a hot water boiler in the cellar of the residence, about thirty feet away. What size of pipe should be used for the flow and what size for returns, and what is the most practical way of placing them? How would you protect the flow and return between the residence and greenhouse, so as to prevent loss of radiation? My location is southern Ohio.
W. B.

A good plan to follow will be to carry a 2-inch flow and a 2-inch return directly

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

With three holidays, hot weather and the state fair, business for the best part of last week was anything but brisk. Friday and Saturday found the shipping trade somewhat stronger.

The State Fair.

Friday, September 11, the Wisconsin State Fair for this year came to a close and, with no rain and a good attendance, it again was a financial success. The cash prizes for flowering beds were awarded as follows: First, $50, Janesville Floral Co., Janesville, Wis.; second, $40, Heitman & Baerman, Milwaukee; third, $30, Rudolph Preuss, Milwaukee; fourth, $20, Fred Kaiser, Milwaukee; fifth, $10, Alex. Klockner, Wauwatosa, Wis.

W. E. Dallwig and Hunkel's Seed Store made creditable exhibits, the latter making a good showing of vegetable seeds in quantity, while the former had more of a variety in his exhibits. The competition in the cut flower class was not keen and, owing to very hot weather, it did not show up to any great advantage. Among the local exhibitors were: Alex. Klockner, Currie Bros., John Dunlap; also H. W. Koerner, with quite a collection of gladioli. The Coe, Converse & Edwards Co., Ft. Atkinson, Wis., also had an exhibit.

Various Notes.

On September 17 and 18, members of the committee on awards of the Outdoor Art Association will visit the different public schools and judge the merits of the flowers grown by competing pupils. Jardinieres containing ferns will be

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held Wednesday evening, September 9, with President Jaenicke in the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and approved, the communications were read. A letter was read from President Roosevelt, accepting election as an honorary member. Walter Shaw and Wm. A. Finger accepted invitations to act as judges at the dahlia show. There were three active members nominated and two honorary.

Special prizes for the fall show were offered by several gentlemen, also from the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.; Rickard Bros., New York, and F. H. Matz, Glen Cove. It was decided that the executive committee meet Saturday evening and rearrange the schedule for the fall show.

A letter inviting affiliation with the Chrysanthemum Society of America was left over till a later date.

The awards for the monthly competition were as follows: George Wilson, Roslyn, onions, 88; H. F. Meyer, eggplant, 81; Valentine Cleres, sedum, 78. Honorable mention: V. Cleres, gladioli; E. H. Roehrs, orchids; George Wilson, double dahlias; S. Drombrowski, single dahlias; H. F. Meyer, peaches; J. Drombrowski, squash and celery; Mr. Fleischer, roses, helianthus and tomatoes.

By request, Mr. Mackenzie told how he had grown the onions for Mr. Wilson. Mr. Roehrs spoke on orchids, and S. Drombrowski answered a few questions about his single dahlias. The meeting then adjourned.

CALLA, OHIO.

The sale of the Calla Greenhouses, which recently went into bankruptcy, took place September 10. The sale was well attended and it is the general impression that the sale was a fair one, although some of the articles sold under their valuation. The real estate, consisting of fifty-two acres, and eight dwelling houses, together with the greenhouses, sold for $10,150 and was purchased by Mr. Lyons, of Youngstown, a real estate and insurance broker. It is the general impression that he was purchasing for other parties. The office furniture and fixtures sold well, but many articles of the printing office went for a song. It is understood that the old firm will re-embark in business.

DEATH NOTICE

Died. Millions of Green Fly, Aphis, Thrips and other Greenhouse Pests are killed daily by those using Our Tobacco Fumigating and Dusting Powder.

Destructive to insects but harmless to plant life. Its effectiveness makes it the cheapest insecticide on the market. It does the business. Try it.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Trade last week was quiet, there being no special call for any kind of stock. Asters, of course, are on hand by the carload, but there is sale for only a part of those sent in.

Roses are improving; the quality of stock received is good for this time of the year. Kaiserin is still in the lead and coming in heavily.

Carnations are of the best quality seen here in years, for so early, but the demand is not what it should be for such good stock. Gladioli have had their day and the demand for them is unsteady at present. Some dahlias are to be seen, but it is too warm for good stock of these yet.

Various Notes.

Harry Jones, of the J. M. Gasser Co., spent an enjoyable day at Portage Lakes last week, visiting friends.

The James Eadie Co. has several houses of chrysanthemums that are in fine shape. A house of early planted carnations is also looking well.

Guy Bate and T. R. Williams are enjoying a lake trip to Duluth on one of the large freight boats.

J. Kirehner had some large funeral orders last week, buying quantities of stock.

Mr. Albright, formerly with C. M. Wagner, and Mr. Smith, of the same place, will open a retail store on Erie street, opposite the Rose building, about September 21.

Smith & Fetters have been showing some beautiful and attractive windows of late.

Visitors: Henry Heepe, Akron, O.; Mr. Werner, Painesville, O. B.

PEORIA, ILL.

The Democratic state convention was held here September 9 and 10, but did not help business.

A. M. Augspurger has returned from Chicago, where he disposed of a large quantity of Boston, Whitman and Amerpohli ferns and a lot of cyeas.

J. Nelson is cutting some nice chrysanthemums.

The following were Peoria visitors during last week: W. W. Davis, of Davis Bros., Morrison, Ill.; Mr. Snider, of the El Paso Carnation Co., El Paso, Ill.; C. W. Moore, Clinton, Ill.; Mr. Jacobs, Canton, Ill., and Mr. Winters, La Salle, Ill. H. C. R.

LANCASTER, PA.—Walter A. Hammond, who has been twenty years with Schroyer, and Wm. H. Gompf, Jr., will open a retail flower store at 19 West Orange street and do business as Hammond & Gompf.

Are You Making Repairs?

To say the least it is a hard job to repair greenhouses. At the same time it costs money and cuts down the profits.

If you are "fixing up" the houses for winter you will want a few bars, some putty or fittings, and you will want these things in a hurry. Send us your order and we'll get it out without any delay.

We have in stock various lengths of sash bars and can ship small repair orders in a day or two. Such things as pipe carriers, purlin fittings, gutter hubs, putty bulbs, putty, glazing points, galvanized nails, etc., we have on hand at all times and can ship same day order reaches us, in nearly every case.

To cut down the repair bills, get the next greenhouse from us and put the cost of repairs in the bank.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

LILY OF THE VALLEY.

Will you please tell us how to grow lily of the valley, how long they last, and if the pips are any good after blooming once?
A. F. C.

For outdoor culture, lily of the valley can be planted in nursery rows two and one-half feet apart, or in beds four feet wide. The plants last indefinitely. All the attention needed is a dressing of rotted manure each fall and a replanting when they become too thick.

For indoor culture, valley needs a good bottom heat and cooler atmospheric conditions; 80 to 85 degrees at the root and 60 to 65 degrees above will produce good flowers. The pips can be planted in either sand or soil; as they make no roots, the nature of compost is of small importance. The case in which they are forced should be darkened until the flower stalks are well advanced, when light can be gradually given to give them substance. To produce a steady succession, it is necessary to start batches of valley at frequent intervals. Forced roots are of no value for forcing again. The REVIEW will print cultural directions about lily of the valley from time to time, which please consult.

IRIS AND LILY OF THE VALLEY.

I would like to know the best time of the year to plant iris and lily bulbs or pips outdoors. Please mention some hardy lilies that do well planted in autumn outdoors. Is lily of the valley hardy enough to plant out here in southern Iowa in autumn? I have never had any experience with either iris or lily pips out of doors. Any information along this line will be appreciated.
H. M.

German and Japanese iris should be planted as soon as possible. They will flower much more satisfactorily next season if set out now, rather than in spring. In planting the Japanese iris, I. Kämpferi, it is always well to remember that while this variety loves semi-aquatic treatment in the growing season, it must not be given a location where water stands in winter, or it will rot. The bulbous irises, such as Hispanica and Anglica, are best placed in the ground just before it freezes. The Spanish iris will be found more reliable than the English one. All the irises will be benefited by a winter mulching of leaves or strawy manure.

Lily of the valley should prove perfectly hardy in your state. Select ground which has been deeply spaded over and well manured, to secure best results. A little shade is also an advantage. As the pips do not arrive until November or early December, it may be necessary to place a covering of leaves or straw on the ground where you intend to plant them. Fortin's variety of lily of the valley is the best I have seen for outdoor culture. It costs a little more than the general run of Berlin or Hamburg pips.

All liliiums are much better planted in fall than spring. No matter how careful a seedsman may be with his bulbs, it stands to reason that they must fritter away a large part of their strength if stored in a dry room for four months. Lilium candidum requires to be planted earlier than any other hardy garden lily. This beautiful, pure white variety starts to make roots and growth early in September, and planting should be done at once. Set the bulbs four inches deep. Lilium speciosum album and the colored varieties, roseum, rubrum and Melpomene, are all reliable, flowering in August and September, and are useful commercial sorts. L. Henryi is somewhat high priced still, but possesses wonderful vigor and seems perfectly disease-proof. The gorgeous L. auratum does not usually last over two seasons. L. tigrinum is a first-class, reliable sort, seeming to do well under adverse conditions. The foregoing comprise the best lilies of commercial value.

A few other sorts worthy of outdoor culture are L. Chalcedonicum, L. superbum, L. Hansoni, an excellent sort, deep golden yellow flowers, spotted crimson; L. Batmanniae and L. Brownii. All the lilies named, with the exception of L. candidum, will do better if planted eight or ten inches deep, and as they usually arrive after the ground is frozen, spaces where they are to be planted must be protected. L. candidum needs only a light winter mulch. The other lilies should have a heavy one; for this purpose pine needles or leaves are preferable to manures.
W. N. CRAIG.

TIGRIDIAS.

Are the tigrdias, or shell flowers, ever forced, or would it be possible to have them in bloom in May? F. E. C.

I have never seen the tigrdias forced. They are usually planted outdoors in May, lifted in October and stored in sand for the winter. Possibly by starting your bulbs under glass in February in a carnation temperature, you could forward the flowering season sufficiently to have them in bloom in May.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

EARLY VARIETIES.

A Visit to Wells.

While on a recent visit to England I went down to see the veteran chrysanthemum grower, W. Wells, at Merstham, Surry, and was astonished at the showing of early flowering varieties he had at that date, August 15. There were several acres just commencing to flower and the sight was an inspiring one.

I took notes of a few of them, which I considered the best at the moment, though a week later would show many more kinds which I have no doubt would be equally good. Arranging the kinds in their colors, I give the following:

Yellow—Polly, Roi des Jaunes, The Champion, Harry, J. J. Hart (a very fine thing), Maggie, Carrie.

Pink—Perle Rose, Pink Aster, Marie Masse, Merstham Pink, Hector, Hetty, Lillie, Pink Bedder.

White—Emily, Holmes White, M. Desgrange, Roi des Blanc, Tapis de Neigo, Market White.

Crimson—Wells' Scarlet, Mrs. W. Sydenham, Nina Blick.

Bronze—Gertie, Geo. Bowness, Tonkin, Veseuve.

I afterwards saw many of these varieties lifted and potted into 6-inch pots on sale in Covent Garden market. They made beautiful pot plants, the wholesale price running about $12 per hundred for them.

Mr. Wells had a lot of splendid new varieties of his own raising, and many from Nonin, and the early flowering section will shortly be enriched thereby.

One variety raised by Mr. Wells, called Mignon, is worthy of special note. It is a lovely pink and when disbudded makes a fine flower, perfect in stem and foliage, and up to midseason size and finish.

Early singles were represented also by many thousands of plants, a large batch of seedlings being distinct. I do not think that these singles would flower so early with us, nor, as a matter of fact, do we want them, since we have no call for stock till the end of September, but I do not see why they should not be largely planted as border plants to flower outside when the early frosts have caught many of the tender bedding plants.

I was there too soon to see how the large flowered exhibition kinds were going to pan out, but the wood was in fine shape and I have not the least doubt that Mr. Wells, as usual, captured his share of the prizes. He has phlox, Michaelmas daisies and other hardy stock on hand, but the chief attractions to me, outside of his mums, were the pentstemons. I had no conception of the size and lovely coloring of the present-day hybrids till I saw them. The flowering spikes are over two feet long and the individual flowers two inches across and set closely together. Many of the finest are now named, I understand, and a collection of these would grace any garden, as I believe they are hardy in this country.

Mr. Wells sent me a magnificent collection of chrysanthemums just before I sailed for home and they kept splendidly on the tables throughout the trip across the Atlantic.

SPRAY OF ROSES.

The spray illustrated on this page is one of the series of funeral designs by C. H. Fox, Columbia avenue and Twenty-first street, Philadelphia. It is a good example of cypas leaves, with a bunch of roses laid on them, the whole tied with white satin ribbon. The roses used are Brides. Mr. Fox prefers this variety when obtainable, where lasting qualities are required. When for immediate use, he prefers Kaiserins. The bunch of roses below the bow adds grace to the arrangement. PHIL.

POINTS FOR JUDGING DESIGNS.

The following query was handed in at the last regular meeting of the Twin City Florists' Club and, as secretary of the association, I was requested to forward same. Replies can be sent either to you and published in your paper, or to me. The question was:

"When floral arrangements, such as designs, bouquets and table decorations, etc., are exhibited in competition and judged by points, what is the proper scale of points to use in judging?"

S. D. DYSINGER, Sec'y.

FREAK ADVERTISING.

Every now and then there is a man who, being deficient in the sense of the eternal fitness of things, thinks the best advertising is to put his notice where one would least expect to find it. For such advertisers the classified columns of the daily newspapers offer a rare opportunity, as the following will indicate:

LOST AND FOUND.

LOST—A Porto Rican spaniel dog, color brown and white; answers to name of "Don"; owner's name and address on collar. Return to 94 South Whipple street. Reward.

FOUND—At McManmon's, the Prescott street florist, the greatest bargains ever offered in plants and flowers. Cut asters, 1c; good holly fern, 25c; large rubber plant, 50c each; American, German Siberian Iris, 10c.

Experienced advertisers not in the patent medicine business long ago found out that an advertisement should be just what it purports to be. It should be in keeping with the dignity of the business it represents. It should seek to attract customers to the store by no other methods than the proprietor would use in making a sale once the prospective customer was within his portals.

TO REMOVE WHITEWASH.

Please give us a good recipe for taking whitewash off glass. C. K.

If the wash is not heavy, wet the glass and scatter sand over it; then rub with a brush. If the shading is heavy it will be necessary to use a little potash or lye in the water, which should be warm. With a long-handled mop, dampen the glass with this. An hour or two afterwards turn the hose on and the whitewash should come off with a little rubbing. Keep the potash water off the woodwork all you can, as it will eat the paint off whatever it touches. For this reason it is better not to syringe it on the glass. C. W.

CALLAS.

Do any florists have callas in bloom all summer? How late do they generally last? F. E. C.

While it may be possible to have flowers of the ordinary white callas every month in the year, we doubt whether they would have any value in the summer months. The bulbs require a rest of several months if you intend to get good results in winter. Callas commence flowering in October and will last until May. The yellow-flowering and spotted-leaved callas flower freely in summer outdoors. C. W.

SCALE ON BOSTONS.

I notice some disease on my ferns in one corner of the greenhouse, of which I am sending you a sample, asking information as to what it is and what to do to check it? A customer brought me a fern to keep for her and I think that was the starter of it, because it is only in this corner and her plant is most infested with the disease. J. Y.

The fern fronds inclosed with this query proved to be badly infested with a species of scale that is frequently found upon nephrolepis and various other ferns.

The small, white specks that may be readily seen on the under side of the fronds are the young scale insects, the fully developed insect being a small and flat brown object, the presence of which may usually be found by the appearance of a yellow spot on the upper side of the leaf, thus showing where the juices have been sucked from the plant.

Spray of Roses.

The best treatment would be to cut away the worst fronds, and to burn them, then dip the plants in a solution of one part Roseleaf extract of tobacco to fifty parts water. This is not an absolute specific and may need to be used several times, it being practically impossible to use any insecticide strong enough to kill all the insects without injuring the ferns.

W. H. T.

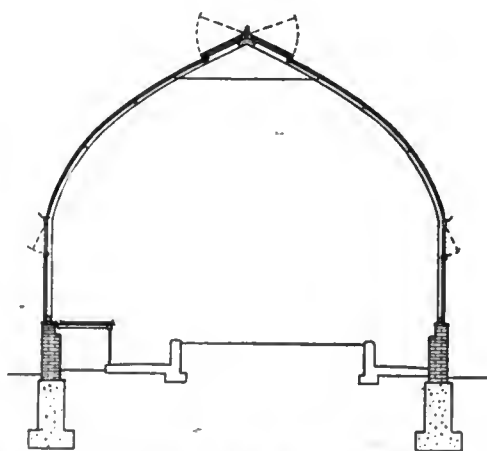

THE RETAILER'S SHOW HOUSE.

For the florist who does business directly with the public there is no more important feature than his street front: a good show brings the people in, and unless the people come in the stock does not sell, no matter how good it is.

Frank Manker, at the corner of Greenwood and Gravesend avenues, in Brooklyn, N. Y., has demonstrated the importance of putting up a good front, for his trade at once showed the effect when the house pictured in the accompanying illustration was completed. Mr. Manker's property is valuable. He has one piece of ground 114x175, for which he paid $15,000 in cash. The place as a whole consists of fifteen houses, aggregating about 35,000 square feet of glass, and it was as an advertisement of the business that he invested money in putting up this show house. It increased the attractiveness of his place at least fifty per cent. The illustration shows the style and character of the house and the two small cuts, showing the plan and section, indicate how useful it may be as well as ornamental.

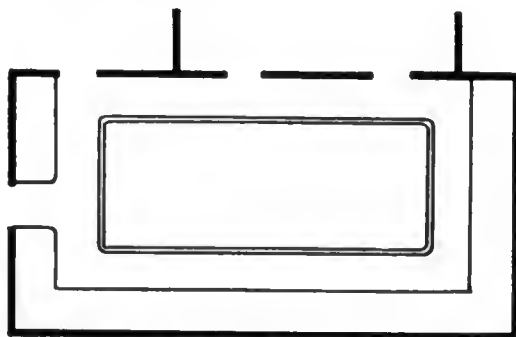

The sectional view shows that there is only one table, which is along the street front. The center is left open for direct planting and along the other side there is a place for the larger decorative plants. The plan indicates how the house joins the growing houses. The visitor may be admitted to the stock houses directly from the show house. Mr. Manker has two houses in carnations and grows some Kaiserin, which is the only rose on the place. Eight houses are in palms, ferns, ficus and Easter stock, and four houses at present are devoted to mums, to be followed by bedding plants, but the show house is the lesson that appeals to all. Its contiguity to the greenhouses, its convenient arrangement and its at-means of bringing to them many inquiries from florists similarly situated. Mr. Manker is close to the great Greenwood cemetery, where an enormous business is done and many florists congregate. The larger part of his work is in the improvement and care of the cemetery plots.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Marketing Bulbous Flowers.

On page 21 of the REVIEW for September 17 we notice an article "Edward Reid Takes Issue With Phil." Well, to begin with, we agree with Phil and concur that "the law of supply and demand regulates the production of cut flowers, the same as other things." Apropos of the products of this country being protected by a tariff, who knows this better than the bulb-growers? We alone have paid Uncle Sam thousands of dollars to get our stock roots over here, but surely Mr. Reid does not classify our flowers as "cheaply produced foreign goods." He should also remember, no sane man wishes to glut a market, but quite the contrary; but if salesmen do not advise growers when there is a glut until the same often is over, who is to blame? All last spring we never got an account of sales under a week, but we paid one man over $100 commission in one week and he had no kick about "dumping," in fact, wanted more.

Please pardon us for bringing Europe into this matter, but this same dumping was in evidence about twenty-seven years ago and old established men got their backs up and would not handle outdoor bulbous flowers, but finished up by being the largest distributors in Covent Garden market. One was D. D. Pankhurst. The receipts of these flowers now is not reported by thousands but by tons, and it is not what the handler thinks, but what the public will insist on having, and if florists boycott them as being too cheap to handle, they will find ladies will go to the market and buy them, as they do here at Norfolk, where over a quarter of a million are disposed of in March and April. If every city of this size eventually gets educated up to it, like this, we shall hear no more of dumping.

Now as the land is bought, greenhouses erected and the bulbs here, perhaps the gentleman will suggest what we do with the flowers?

D'ALCORN & SONS.

EAST BROOKFIELD, MASS.—Roses and carnations are to be grown at the Lamphrey greenhouses.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Hydrangeas.

It is now time to gradually withhold water supplies from hydrangeas in pots, not to the extent of causing serious wilting of the foliage, but rather to check further growth and ripen up the wood. Hydrangeas should be stood on a bed of coal ashes in an open, sunny spot, and be spaced so that every shoot can get its full quota of sun and air. This gradual ripening of the wood is especially necessary in the case of plants you may want to force soon after Christmas. We always like to leave our hydrangeas out to get a few degrees of frost. This takes off some of the foliage and, unless the growth is extremely soft, will not hurt them. A plant well ripened, with nutty-brown wood, will withstand a temperature of 20 degrees above zero without injury, while one full of soft, green leaves would have all flowering buds killed.

It is a common practice to head back and plant out a quantity of left-over plants after Memorial day. These may now be lifted and potted. Be sure to get a nice ball and reduce it so that pots of moderate size will hold them. Keep well soaked with water and sprayed for a few days, and they will soon recover from their lifting. In case of threatened frosts, it would be well to have a sheet of canvas to throw over the plants. They will be better outdoors until frost, likely to injure them, necessitates housing.

Cosmos.

The cosmos is just coming into nice bloom. It is customary to lift a few plants and stand at the end of a cool house to expand, for the lightest frost kills them.

Cuttings taken in June are now nice, bushy plants in 7-inch pots and are useful before the mum season opens. The new variety, Lady Lenox, seems unusually late in opening, but its beautiful, large, pink flowers make it a decided acquisition.

There are always customers who prefer cosmos to asters, gladioli and other outdoor flowers, and it is always well for the retailer to cater to these æsthetic buyers.

Poinsettias.

Rapid growth is now noticeable on poinsettias. In the northern states, it is not safe to leave them in frames after this date. We do not consider a higher temperature than 50 degrees at night necessary until bracts are showing, when a rise of 10 degrees until they are expanded should be given, slowly reducing it after that time. The beauty of the brilliant poinsettia is lost if it is not furnished with dark green foliage to the bottom of its stem. How many pans do we see that have practically no leaves except a few below the bracts, but have ferns, dracænas and other green plants to hide the nakedness! The use of these intermixed foliage plants in pans is to be commended, but far too often in the make-up the poor poinsettia's roots are hopelessly damaged, resulting in a heavy loss of foliage.

With no flowering plant is careful watering more important than in the case of poinsettias. Too much or too little will alike cause yellowing of the foliage, but an overplus is the more dangerous of the two. Any feeding must be done carefully and in light doses. The real time to feed is when the bracts are developing. Plants should not be sprayed overhead now, but if mealy bug asserts itself, the spray nozzle should be utilized. Bracts are badly disfigured if the bugs get a foothold on them.

Azaleas.

The Belgian azaleas are due soon to arrive, and will demand some of our time and attention. Frequently the balls become somewhat dry en route from Europe and it is a good plan to soak all in tubs of water before potting. Use pots just large enough to comfortably hold the balls and be specially careful to firm the soil thoroughly with a flat-pointed rammer. The best place for the plants after potting is in a frame or pit, where they can be kept just clear of freezing. A few sprayings will be helpful during bright weather. For compost, it is not necessary to use peat, as the Belgians do. Fibrous loam, leaf-mold and sand answer well.

Antirrhinums.

It will not be long before the Pacifics, Monroviacs, Hallidays and other benches of early mums are cut and their places can be taken by antirrhinums. If the latter are in pots, give them a shift rather than let them become matted with roots, and keep the flowering shoots pinched back. Some successful growers of antirrhinums plant out their stock as they do carnations, keep it headed back and lift at the proper planting time. We have seen much finer spikes produced in this way than when the snapdragons were pot-grown all the time before benching.

Cinerarias.

With cool nights, the growth the cinerarias are making is surprising. They require spacing once a week, and do not forget a fresh packing of tobacco stems occasionally among the pots. There can be no better place for them until the mum season is over than a coldframe. Give them an abundance of air, leaving the sashes off entirely on warm nights. Look out for green worms, the larvæ of the white butterfly, which often attack the foliage at this season. Careful hand picking is necessary for these. Do not do any potting before the roots become matted. Use a good proportion of old, well-decayed manure in the final pottings.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.*Supports.

The next thing to claim your attention will be to get your supports into place, and you must not allow this to go too long. Even the straight, upright growing varieties will become top-heavy if they carry several buds to the plant, and every time you syringe them you knock many of them over. Soon the whole bed is in a tangled up mess, and in straightening up the plants more stems are broken off than would pay for the supports if used in time. Every fall we see a number of such cases.

The question of what kind of support to use naturally presents itself to those who are beginning their first season. Perhaps you have made your choice and know what you want to use. There are many kinds on the market and a few methods not on sale. Nearly all are good and will answer the purpose if adjusted properly. It remains for you to choose the one which strikes your fancy, and with which you can do the work well with the least amount of labor and worry. To say that one will do the work better than any of the others could be made to do it would probably be silly, and the assertion that a certain support would enable the grower to cut more or better blooms from a bench would probably be absurd and far-fetched, to say the least, and should not carry any weight with any intelligent grower.

While, of course, the first cost will naturally enter into the question, yet it should be kept subordinate to the question of efficiency and labor-saving capacity. If you can save two dollars by spending one, you would better spend it, and as many more as you can on the same basis. But, on the other hand, it is poor business to spend money on one method for doing a certain thing when a less expensive method will be just as efficient in every way.

There are a number of patent wire supports on the market, all of which are good, some having one good feature and others another. Whichever one strikes your fancy is the one that is best for you. Many large growers have installed these in at least a part of their places, and altogether they give good satisfaction. Many use a combination of the wire ring support and the wire and string netting method, by using the wire ring for the body of the plant and the other method for the flower stems. Still others use the wire and string netting exclusively, and apparently do not care for the wire supports at all. Any one of these methods will prove efficient if installed properly. A. F. J. BAUR.

DAHLIAS AT HAMMONTON.

J. Murray Bassett welcomed Arthur A. Niessen and Phil at the station at Hammonton, N. J., on the occasion of our visit last week, and drove us to his home in the heart of the dahlia fields. Mr. Bassett has ten acres planted in dahlias, all in nice condition, showing excellent cultivation, and scrupulously clean. He limits his varieties to those that he believes best for cut flowers and for garden planting, keeping the number down to perhaps 100 sorts despite the increase in acreage. The ramble through the dahlia fields with Mr. Bassett was full of interest. He has ideas, and carries them out consistently.

Pink Pearl Mr. Bassett believes to be one of the finest, if not the finest, pink dahlia for cutting, even better than Kriemhilde. Some specimen flowers shown were remarkable, despite the drought, for size and brilliancy of color.

In yellow Mr. Bassett considers Mrs. Clifford W. Bruton as the best. Its drawback is that a certain percentage come semi-double, marring their beauty. A coming rival for supremacy in the yellows is Yellow Queen, a magnificent flower of decorative type.

In white, Flora ranks high. Sylvia is largely grown for cutting, the color being such a beautiful combination of pink and white. Souvenir de Gustave Douzon ranks high as a deep rich red. Among the French collarette varieties Mr. Bassett considers Pres. Viger, with white collar and yellow stamens, in a class by itself. Lindhurst Mr. Bassett considers the standard red.

Among the other varieties of special interest there were noted two kinds of Aurora, one a golden yellow, decorative type, the other a bronze salmon, cactus type. Cardinal is a fine single of the Century type, the color being described by its name; the flowers stand up beautifully over the plant. Yellow Prince is a fine variety of the cactus type. Lovely is a unique shade of pink. Countess of Lonsdale, a cactus bronze-salmon, is unique.

Jack Rose will be introduced by Mr. Bassett's father in two years. It is a striking variety; its name exactly describes its appearance, an immense Gen. Jacqueminot rose. Whether this variety will survive in the fierce competition in the cut flower market remains to be seen; its health and showiness seem to insure it a future place in the garden. Grisselle is a pleasing pink, cactus type.

Mr. Bassett has a commodious cooling room, which was well filled with choice blooms. Adjoining it is an office full of interesting photographs of dahlias and of the other branch of his business, native plant collecting, which is steadily growing from year to year.

Mr. Bassett, who was associated with his father until two years ago, has spent his life among dahlias and native plants. He loves his work and brings every faculty of a clear and well cultivated mind into its details.

HOUSE FOR SWEET PEAS.

Please inform me as to the best mode of construction for a sweet pea forcing house. Also please give best forcing varieties and brief directions for growing inside.

E. C.

The ideal house for winter flowering sweet peas is even-span, quite high at the sides, say from seven to nine feet, and thirty to thirty-five feet wide. The necessity for high sides is on account of head room for the plants. They will grow ten to fifteen feet high under good conditions. Raised benches are not needed; in fact, they do much better, even in winter, planted on the ground. Rows should be five to six feet apart and can be either placed in line with the supports of the house, or special supports can be placed for them. Pea brush and wire netting are equally unsuitable for supporting the plants. Twine is much the best.

Any good loam, well enriched with cow or sheep manure, will suit sweet peas. William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., a noted specialist in this line, stated in a recent lecture that he had not changed his soil for five years and his plants did better each succeeding year. A low temperature, 40 to 45 degrees at night, is best until the flowering stage, when 48 to 50 degrees is better. Seeds can be started in sand and transplanted, or in small pots. If sown where they are to remain, they must be thinned to two or three inches apart. Heavy smoking must be avoided. Frequent light doses will keep them clean. The plants need a copious water supply when growing.

Good forcing varieties are Christmas Pink, Mont Blanc and Watchung. The two latter are white. There are also quite a number of other shades, which flower well in winter. As a rule, however, the white, and pink and white colors take the markets the best. Thorough trenching of the ground each year is of course necessary.

Vegetable crops are often grown in sweet pea houses in summer, tomatoes and cucumbers being mostly used for this purpose.

THE SCHLURAFF PLACE.

The accompanying illustrations show the new greenhouses, completed some two years ago, by Vern L. Schluraff, West

"the best yet" for advice and help, and it already has been of such service to me that it has become indispensable to me.

ALFRED PEARCE.

Rahway, N. J.

September 10, 1908.

Eighth street, Erie, Pa. This place is quite properly called "Floral Park," as its transformation is a surprising illustration of what can be accomplished in this direction. Two years ago this place was ordinary farm land devoted to raising the ordinary farm crops, without sign of attractive feature, and today it is a fine illustration of the up-to-date florist's establishment, both in its field growing and in the greenhouses.

Floral Park consists of fifteen acres, twelve of which are devoted to field growing of asters, carnations and a general line of florists' and nursery stock. The balance is occupied by the buildings and display ground, lawn, etc. The soil is fertile and has perfect drainage, just such as is wanted for the work in hand. The greenhouses are devoted to growing carnations, smilax, asparagus, bedding plants, etc. The buildings consist of a dwelling, two barns and other outbuildings for general purposes, making it a model establishment of its class.

The present houses consist of five sections 21x125 feet, heated by steam, the boiler being located underneath the packing and shipping room. The basement is walled up with concrete blocks. The heating plant has a No. 410 Furman boiler.

The water supply was given as careful consideration as any other feature of the plant and consists of a two horse-power Standard pumping engine and a pneumatic water supply tank forty inches in diameter and twenty feet long. The pumping engine is used for taking the water from a creek 520 feet back of the houses and delivers it directly into the pipe line system and also into the pneumatic storage tank, which is provided for a reserve supply. This water supply plant is entirely independent of the heating system, as the pumping engine is operated by gasoline and may be started any time of the day or night, regardless whether there is steam up or not. How effective this direct pumping system is may be noted in one of the illustrations, in which the photographer caught two men spraying at the same time, each with ¾-inch hose; the pressure was ample for effective work.

One advantage Mr. Schluraff finds is that it is a simple matter to keep a considerable volume of water in reserve at a pressure varying anywhere from thirty to seventy-five pounds per square inch. In this particular plant the reserve supply is about 1,500 gallons and this, together with what the pumping engine will deliver, makes practically 2,000 gallons of water available at a pressure high enough to do the spraying and watering in a few minutes—and after the watering is finished and the reserve supply exhausted, the pumping engine is used to replenish the reserve tank, thus maintaining a considerable volume of water under high pressure which is available at any time for fire protection and use in the greenhouses without the necessity of starting the pumping engine.

There has in the last few years been from outdoor plants. Lilies and lily of the valley are neither of them in much demand.

Asters still swamp the market and continue of splendid quality; many cannot be sold at all. Gladioli are fewer, but more cosmos, tuberose and dahlias are seen. Somehow the latter do not seem to take as market flowers in Boston. We think they will grow in favor as their good qualities are better known. The present week should see a diminution in included no fewer than 125 classes and nearly all were filled. Some of the largest and most successful exhibitors were: W. W. Rawson & Co., E. S. Manuel, Dorchester Dahlia Gardens, W. D. Hathaway, E. W. Ela, W. D. Moon, Edward Lefavour, A. L. Brown, W. F. Turner & Co., J. K. Alexander, F. L. Tinkham, Miss Fanny Foster, D. W. Babcock, A. A. Bassett, N. A. Lindsay, W. H. Symonds, George H. Walter, W. P. Hayden, Johnson & Hall and H. F. Burt.

Special honorariums for displays went to W. H. Tarbox, Alex. MacLellan, J. K. Alexander, George B. Gill, Mrs. E. M. Gill, Towle's Dahlia Garden, Robert Amend, S. B. Dana, George H. Walker and W. W. Rawson & Co. H. A. Dreer received a special honorarium for his new show dahlia, Dreer's White, a beautiful pure white variety, much admired.

W. F. Turner & Co. won the silver gilt medal offered by Dobbie & Co., Rothesay, Scotland, to the most successful competitor in the show. E. S. Manuel captured the silver medal of the Horticultural Society of Lyons, France, for the twelve most beautiful French cactus and decorative dahlias. W. F. Turner & Co. took the silver honor medal of the German Dahlia Society for the most numerous collection of German cactus dahlias. N. A. Lindsay captured Stredwick & Son's special for their new varieties of cactus dahlias. A. MacLellan had a fine collection of new giant seedling singles.

The largest flower of any decorative variety was Souvenir de Gustave Donzon from W. F. Turner & Co. The largest peony-flowered came from W. W. Rawson & Co., named H. Hornsveld. The smallest flower in the show was the pompon, Belle of Springfield, from H. F. Burt.

Marblehead, a scarlet cactus from W. W. Rawson & Co., showed up well among the novelties, as did Marion, pink with white base, from W. H. Richardson. Ruth Forbes, a deep pink cactus, from W. F. Turner & Co., and Rose, a big, deep rose-colored show variety, from W. W. Rawson & Co., were also good.

The experiment of holding a special dahlia show has proved that it is possible to get up an attractive exhibition of dahlias alone, and we may expect that future ones will be of even a wider scope. The addition of tables decorated with dahlias, baskets, wreaths, bouquets great improvement in methods of supplying water for florists' special needs. The gasoline engine now is designed to pump either into pneumatic water supply tanks, or directly into the pipe line, and is provided with an automatic safety valve so that the faucets may be closed to change the hose connections, or for other purposes, without danger from too high pressure. They are capable of operating against any pressure up to ninety pounds per square inch, and are designed to pump both air and water at the same time when used in connection with the modern pneumatic water supply systems that are now employed in many greenhouse establishments and which seem destined to come into general use where florists must provide their own water supply.

Mr. Schluraff has done well since building this plant and looks forward to a good season and the need for more glass, the service buildings having been put up and equipment installed with that end in view.

BOSTON.

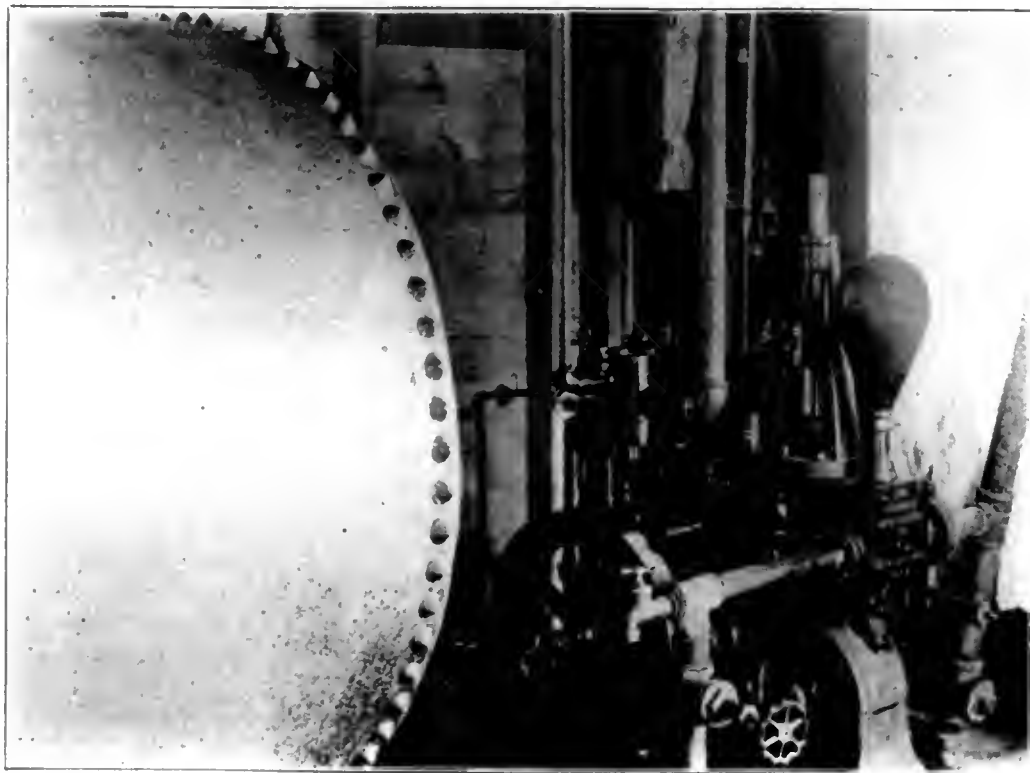

The Market.

There is nothing new or specially encouraging to report about market conditions. Far too many flowers continue to arrive and until a killing frost cuts off outdoor supplies, there is little prospect of improvement. Roses are of better size, but are much too abundant and sell at absurd prices. Even carnations are down with the rest, and selling rather poorly. Some now are coming with quite lengthy stems. A few violets are seen, but cut little figure as yet, being mostly receipts of asters and it is hoped this may tend to relieve the present congestion.

Dahlia Society's Show.

The first exhibition of the New England Dahlia Society and, we believe, the first of its kind in America, was held in Tremont Temple, Boston, September 17 to 19 and proved a successful one. The dahlia devotees continue to increase in number in New England and much interest is taken by them. The schedule and other features might well be included another year. These were almost entirely absent at the late show. Much of the success of the exhibition was due to the tireless energy of Maurice Fuld, the energetic secretary.

At a business meeting of the New England Dahlia Society, September 18, the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, William F. Turner; vice-president, H. W. Kendal; treasurer, N. L. Lindsay; secretary, M. Fuld; executive committee, J. P. Bodge, E. W. Ela, T. H. Tyndale, W. D. Moon and G. H. Walker. It was voted to incorporate the society under the laws of the state of Massachusetts. The society now numbers over 350 members and is steadily growing.

Various Notes.

The various flower stores are making features of dahlias in their windows at present, quite a number having named collections. The same holds good at the seed stores.

Visitors last week included Ed. Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; T. J. Allen, Lewiston, Me.; A. MacLellan and E. S. Manuel, Newport, R. I.

In common with other sections of the country, Massachusetts is suffering from a severe drought and rain is urgently needed.

Farquhar & Co. have this season seven acres of dahlias at their Sharon and Roslindale establishments.

Albert Scott, of the Willow Hill Greenhouses, has a splendid lot of specimen Nephrolepis Whitmani.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, are marketing some handsome dahlias.

Henry A. Stevens, of Dedham, has built a small addition to his greenhouses, to be used for violets.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club has invitations to hold field days in 1909 at the Framingham Nurseries and with E. J. Shaylor, Wellesley Hills.

There is to be a contest over the will of the late W. W. Rawson, who died in August, leaving real estate and personal property to the value of about $500,000. Contesting parties are grandchildren.

W. N. C.

THE DROUGHT.

The Weather Bureau at Washington says that the last week was characterized by unusually warm weather for the season of the year and by the absence of any appreciable precipitation over nearly all the great agricultural districts. The intense heat, together with the long continued drought, especially over the lake region and New England, intensified conditions favorable to the further development of forest fires and these continued over large areas in the above districts, resulting in much damage and some loss of life. Some frosts occurred at exposed points September 16 and 17, but without material damage.

Sunshine was abundant over nearly all districts, especially over the corn belt and all eastern districts except in the lake region, where much smoky, heavy weather prevailed.

The continued absence of rain over large districts in the Missouri, upper Mississippi and Ohio valleys, lake region, New England and the Middle Atlantic states is seriously affecting many interests. The ground is becoming baked, vegetation is at a standstill, streams are lower in some sections than for many years, and the water supply is rapidly failing. Some heavy rains occurred along the immediate Gulf coast and good showers were general over the southern portion of the cotton belt and sufficient rain for present needs occurred over a large portion of Texas, Oklahoma and the surrounding portions of Arkansas and Kansas. Rain was also fairly abundant and well distributed over Montana, Idaho and portions of eastern Oregon, North Dakota and western Minnesota. Light showers in the upper Michigan peninsula checked to some extent the forest fires in that district.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 22.—The Weather Bureau has issued the following forecast: A barometric disturbance will cross the country from about September 24 to 28, attended by rains that will set in over the central valleys about the close of this week and extend over the Atlantic states by the beginning of next week. Following the rains there will be a sharp fall in temperature, with frost in the central valleys and eastern states north of the fortieth parallel.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week there was again little doing in the cut flower line. The warm weather has a great deal to do with complaints of dull business, not only in our line, but in all other trades. Of course, there is a spurt occasionally, or a good bit of funeral work. What is needed to stimulate our business is frost and cool days. The wholesalers, too, are complaining of having to dump too much stock. They cannot even dispose of all at job lot prices, as those who handle this class of stock are suffering with the rest.

There is plenty of stock of everything in season and of all grades. Beauties are plentiful, as well as other roses. Carnations are still too short in stem, but of fairly good bloom and color. There is plenty of fine valley. Cosmos is not in yet. Asters, tuberoses and dahlias are more than enough for all.

Various Notes.

Philadelphia was well represented in the line of traveling salesmen last week. They were: J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer; S. S. Skidelsky, of Skidelsky & Irwin Co., and B. Eshner, of

M. Rice & Co. They all report good business.

John J. Burke has reopened his store at Sixth and Locust streets, and is showing a window of fine ferns. A good run of business is reported for the first week.

James Young, of C. Young & Sons Co., says that they again have the contract to furnish the decorations of the great Veiled Prophet's ball, and that they will be on a more elaborate scale this year than last. A number of decorations for fall openings will keep them busy this week.

W. C. Smith and Henry Ostertag, two of the Florists' Club's trustees, visited the St. Clair county fair, at Belleville, last week and report that the St. Clair Floral Co. made a creditable plant show, and they were entertained during their stay by A. S. Halstead, who was director of the art department at the fair.

We hear that City Forester Andrew Meyer, Jr., was badly poisoned by ivy last week and is confined to his bed.

Herbert Heller, of Heller Bros., New Castle, Ind., spent September 21 in the city, looking over the prospects for the coming season. Mr. Heller says their cut of Beauties will be the largest in years.

Bills for the appropriation of $425,000 were introduced in the city council for the purchase of ground for three new parks, one in the southern part of the city and the other two in the northern part of the city. The park department is confident that the municipal assembly will appropriate the money. It is also possible that $700,000 will be appropriated to purchase the old fair grounds, to be used as a public park. Park Commissioner Scanlan says the city needs this property, as the park facilities are becoming less adequate each year.

The Riessen Floral Co. reports a busy week in large designs for funerals. Attractive window displays are seen here every day.

Ostertag Bros. furnished the decorations for the dedication of the new Jewish temple. They were highly commended. They were showing last week a fine new delivery wagon. While Mr. Ostertag was driving down town someone played a joke on him by placing a sign on the new outfit, inscribed "For sale cheap."

A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, Ill., and W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., shipped the first white chrysanthemums to this market last week. These two firms are also consigning to this market a fine lot of roses.

Charles Beyer had a number of large plant decorations for fall openings of downtown department stores. F. W. Bruenig, C. C. Sanders, Alex. Johnson and Schray & Son were also busy with this kind of work last week.

William Winter, of Kirkwood, was congratulated by his many friends in the trade on being elected school director at Kirkwood.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, and Henry Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., were visitors last week. Both will take active part in the Illinois State Fair, which opens September 25. J. J. B.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

The State Floral Society is preparing to hold, in November, a show which should receive the hearty support of the trade, because it will be not only the largest flower show of the season in the southwest, but one of the large shows of the year. Paul M. Paley, of W. J. Vestal & Son, is the manager again this year, the same as last, and the assurances of exhibits which he already has received indicate that last year's success will be put far in the rear. At a meeting of the society September 17 C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, Chicago, and C. H. Hune, of the Memphis Floral Co., Memphis, Tenn., were selected as judges. There is a large list of patronesses and the society people of Arkansas will lend their support. The $2,000 offered in prizes should secure keen competition. Among those who already have pledged exhibits are the following:

Roses, chrysanthemums and carnations—H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago Rose Co., Zech & Mann and Bentley-Coatsworth Co., all of Chicago.

For orchids—C. W. McKellar, Chicago; John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, and Carrillo & Baldwin, Secaucus, N. J.

For roses and carnations—George Reinberg, Peter Reinberg, Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, and George M. Kellogg, Kansas City.

For roses and chrysanthemums—E. H. Hunt, Chicago; Otto Schwill, Memphis; Memphis Floral Co., Memphis; Baker Bros., Fort Worth.

Roses—John Wolf, Savannah, and E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

Carnations—Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.; Baur & Smith, Indianapolis; Wietor Bros., Chicago.

Violets, carnations and roses—Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.; Vaughan & Sperry, Chicago.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Trade and the temperature are playing see-saw: first they go up, up, up and then they go down, down, down. The temperature last week ranged from the nineties to perilously near the frost line, and it made a great many of the florists urge the help on to house some of the most tender plants. There have been one or two frosts reported from Hagerstown, but no damage was done.

Asters are on the wane, the bulk of the stock being of poor quality and much shorter in stem. Valley is in good demand and of fine quality. A few violets are seen on the street, but are of the single varieties.

Carnations are more plentiful and are extra fine for the season. They would sell more readily if it were not for the quantities of dahlias that are being sold at 10 and 15 cents per dozen.

Boston and Barrowsii and Elegantissima ferns are in steady demand and all good plants find a ready sale, especially in the markets.

Various Notes.

Israel Rosnosky, of Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, has been elected a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

The bowling teams of Washington and Baltimore bowled for a cup September 22 at the Diamond bowling alleys.

Walter Gray, of Catonsville, has completed quite an improvement in his place. He had to do a great deal of grading, which required a good deal of blasting, as he found a regular quarry of granite. There was a ready sale for all of the stone, right at his place, for building. He erected a new house, 30 x 100, with large show windows along the entrance to his place.

The members of the club, with their friends, went to the dahlia show of R. Vincent & Sons Co., at White Marsh, September 22.

F. C. Baur has been able to discontinue the use of canes to help him to get around.

The board of managers of the Fifth Regiment Armory granted permission to the Maryland Horticultural Society to hold its exhibit in the Armory building November 30 and December 1 to 4.

The park board has decided to erect a large conservatory in Carroll park, in place of the smaller houses, which are to be torn down. Q.

ERIE, PA.

Business is normal again and flowers are improving in quality. Carnations are coming in longer in stem and in larger quantities. Asparagus plumosus is scarce in this section. The demand is greater than the supply.

G. H. Baur will leave for Philadelphia September 23. He will enter upon his second year at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. W. O. Baur, who has been with Smith & Fettes, of Cleveland, until recently, is now manager of Baur's flower store in his brother's stead.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Niemeyer and daughter, Leonora, spent last winter in California. They are thinking seriously of going again this winter.

Vern L. Schluraff has some fine asters on his new place. He calls them chrysanthemum asters.

Mrs. Reginald Ronalds gave a dancing party at the Kalikora Club September 11. The floral decorations were lavish. The dancing hall had Beauty roses in tall wicker vases among the palms and ferns. Asparagus was twined around the chandeliers and smilax was used in different places. The dining-room tables were decorated with centerpieces of Windsor carnations and lily of the valley.

Baskets of pink roses finished with chiffon, ribbons and cords, and large pots of adiantum and Amerpohlii ferns, were used in profusion about the rooms. The decorations were furnished by the Baur Floral Co. B. P.

John O. Laver is now settled in his new store at 704 State street, ready for the winter's campaign. The main salesroom is 23x100. It is finished in white enamel and gold. Heavy French plate glass mirrors extend the full length of the store on both sides. There is also a workroom twenty-five feet long, with large skylight, in the rear of the main store, an ideal room for making up. Mr. Laver has had many compliments on the handsome appearance of his store.

A recent visit to W. McCarthy's, Twentieth and Poplar streets, found everything ship-shape. Mr. McCarthy has a splendid lot of Whitmanii ferns.

E. C. Hill is busy propagating geraniums. Mr. Hill is recognized as the geranium king in this vicinity. He grows some 50,000 each year. A. C.

OBITUARY.

Robert Buck.

After months of weary suffering, Robert Buck, of Washington Court House, O., passed away September 12. For several years Mr. Buck had been in failing health and for the last year confined to his bed. Through all his illness his wife nursed him with a devotion almost unequalled, attending at the same time to the management of the Washington Floral Gardens.

Mr. Buck was engaged in the florists' business in Greenfield, O., until four years ago, when he removed to Washington Court House and established the Washington Floral Gardens, which at once achieved a wide reputation, and Mr. Buck was broadly known as one of the leading florists of southern Ohio. He had the esteem and respect of the community, and his long illness and great suffering have aroused a universal sympathy, both for the sufferer and his wife.

Funeral services were held September 15, after which the remains were taken to Greenfield for interment. The I. O. O. F., of which Mr. Buck was a member, had charge of the services in Greenfield.

John A. Banker.

John A. Banker, of Salina, Kan., died Saturday evening, September 12, at his home, 513 Park street. He was 60 years of age. Bright's disease and heart trouble were the causes. His health had been poor for the last three months.

Mr. Banker was well known in his vicinity as a nurseryman. He originated a number of the floral beds laid out at Oak Dale park, Salina, and planted nearly all of the evergreens there, as well as many other trees in the city. His faithful and efficient service in beautifying the city was rewarded by his being appointed park commissioner about nine years ago. He served in this capacity three years.

Mr. Banker was born near German town, O., December 25, 1848. He was married December 22, 1868.

In March of 1877 he removed to Kansas, settling on a farm where Trenton now is. Aside from his farm work, he engaged in the nursery business five years, traveling over Kansas for a nursery farm part of the time.

He left the farm and moved to Salina in March, 1893, moving on the same date that President Cleveland took the oath of office. During his residence there he was a most respected private citizen, as well as prominent in his civic services mentioned. He was a member of the United Brethren church and of the Odd Fellows.

The deceased leaves a wife and seven children. The children are: Charles E., Wilbur, Iva M., Victor A., Mrs. Myrtle Barth, Frank and Lizzie. His two brothers, Walter and William, and sister, Mrs. Anna Tucker, live near Salina. His children and brothers and sister were at his home when he died.

MONONGAHELA, PA.—September 11 occurred the wedding of Violet A. Keeney and Harry C. Lorimer. Miss Keeney is the daughter of J. A. Keeney and is well known among the trade here.

THE WEEKLY

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman; J. H. Burdett, secretary, 1411 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

A WELL PLEASED advertiser writes: "The REVIEW is certainly black on white and read all over."

THE REVIEW always is glad to answer questions to the best of its ability, but it is necessary that full name and address be supplied, else no attention is paid. Names are not published except by request.

THIS is the time of year when every florist who sells to the public should decide on a plan for advertising during the next nine months. "Advertising is to business what steam is to a locomotive"—and you should get up steam for a busy season.

EXPRESS RATES ON FLOWERS.

At the Niagara Falls convention the subject was brought up of express rates on cut flowers going from north to south, and in general shipping where ice is necessary in warm weather. This matter was referred to the legislative committee and the papers that were read at the session of the convention have been forwarded to me. The papers so far received are of such general character that in their present form little can be done with them. In shipping fish from a Hudson river point to New Orleans by express, there would be an allowance of twenty-five per cent on the gross weight for ice, and after this deduction the charge per hundredweight is $3; on the other hand, if cut flowers are sent no deduction is made for ice, but $4.50 is charged per hundredweight.

What should be done is the revision of classification for long distance shipments. From New York city to Chicago the rate for fish is as follows: Twenty-five per cent reduction for ice from the gross weight and $1.90 per hundredweight for the remainder. Over the same line and in the same car a box of cut flowers would go at the rate of $2.50 gross weight, and at the present time it seems that this is a fair sample of differential charges.

What the legislative committee would like is explicit information from any person directly interested and having experience, as to quantities shipped from given point to given point, over what line and the weight of the packages. I have been speaking with an express manager and he tells me that fish as a commodity is heavy and flowers for the same cubic space are light, that where 100 pounds of fish would be in a box, twenty-five pounds of cut flowers would make a bulk package, and these freighted by weight do not yield the revenue that heavier and coarser goods do. Edward Reid, of Philadelphia, has pressed this matter at some length and the committee will endeavor to get the cases into such form that, acting for the S. A. F. as a body, this matter may be laid before the express companies' headquarters, where it may receive fair consideration.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Chairman.

PRICE OF GLASS.

The former price discounts of ninety and twenty for both single and double-strength window glass were reaffirmed at a meeting of the Central Window Glass Jobbers' Association at Pittsburg September 18. In the course of the meeting the fact was brought out that the stocks of glass in the hands of dealers throughout the country are greatly depleted, and that the general trade prospects are much brighter now than they have been for some time. It is said that many plants will soon be started in operation.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Press day for the final edition of the premium list is October 1, and before that date all special premium offers which go into this list should be in the hands of the secretary.

A list will be published in this book of all subscribers to the guarantee fund who have paid the first assessment, and those who have not paid by October 1 will be dropped from the list of the guarantee fund, by order of the executive committee. All who have overlooked paying the twenty per cent are urged to send their checks to the treasurer at once.

A meeting of the executive committee has been called by Chairman W. F. Kasting, to take place in Chicago, September 25. Important matters will be decided and those members who cannot attend will send in reports to be acted upon.

J. H. BURDETT, Sec'y.

SUPPORTS FOR DAHLIAS.

Do the large eastern growers of dahlias stake them, or let them grow on the ground? We find it is a tremendous trouble to tie them up. J. F. C.

The largest eastern dahlia specialists do not stake their dahlias at all. They generally leave one stalk to a plant, pinch this when eight to ten inches high and thus develop a rather stocky and bushy plant. Some growers tie the stalk to a short but stout stake. The smaller growers usually support their plants, but those growing them by the acre do not as a rule attempt it. Of course, there is an advantage in staking if you only grow a small number, as your plants are less broken down by high winds. C. W.

Now We've Got the Goods

Large supplies of Monrovia (yellow) and Fancy White. Up to our usual quality.

It has been well known for several years that our growers have the knack of getting the right finish on the earliest varieties.

Can fill all orders, but better give us as much notice as you can, for any not set aside on orders have sold at sight thus far.

Beauties

We want you to try our Beauties, because we know the quality will bring you back for more. Crop heavy. All lengths.

Carnations

It really is surprising how good our stock is, when you consider the hot weather. Order some.

Green Goods

You have known our house for years as "headquarters for Green Goods." For the fall decorations we can supply Asparagus and Smilax in any quantity. Long strings, and we can quote special prices on large lots. Also plenty of Sprenger, Adiantum, Farleyense and all outdoor greens. Best Ferns in the Market.

Kaiserins

The hot weather has been hard on many florists, but has made money for our Kaiserin grower. Try them and see why.

Valley

You need Valley every day and we can supply Fancy stock in any quantity, at any time.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It is the last week in September, but the market is experiencing midsummer conditions. The temperature for a fortnight has ranged from 80 to 92 degrees in the shade, and there has been no rain, except a couple of light local showers, for more than a month. As a result, the outdoor stock is of lower quality than has been noted all summer. With midsummer heat, the demand naturally is not large, and whatever orders come in are invariably for the better grades of goods. Out-of-town buyers have sufficient local supply of low grades and are only calling on this market when something choice is wanted. It is difficult to meet their needs, and really first-class stock is commanding first-class prices.

It is doubly unfortunate that demand is so low, because there is a splendid supply of American Beauty roses. This is the time when everyone can afford to use these flowers, for prices are most reasonable, especially when the quality of the stock is taken into consideration. The condition borders on a glut, but the Beauties are selling well because they are almost the only really good flowers in the market. There are also some good Kaiserin roses, and Killarney is in fair shape, but other roses have been softened and caused to be small by the return of August temperature.

There is a steadily increasing supply of carnations, but a good part of the stock might better never be shipped. It is useless to send the browned white varieties, and there is no sale at profitable prices for the flowers that have hardly stem enough to permit of bunching. Some Enchantress may be had with stems twelve to fifteen inches long, and these sell well where the shorter stock cannot all be disposed of, even if the buyers are permitted to make the prices.

The aster season is approaching an end. There still are considerable quantities, but nearly all are poor; many so poor the buyers will not consider them at all. Really good asters sell at sight. Gladioli also are on the wane. Dahlias are more numerous, but these are not blooming the way they should, except where the growers have had facilities and inclination to apply the hose. Not many other outdoor flowers are seen.

Chrysanthemums are in light supply and strong demand. There usually is a good call for the earliest ones and it has not yet been possible to get them fast enough for orders, but every day is working a change in this respect. Violets may be had.

There are adequate supplies of good Easter lilies and an abundance of fine valley. Cattleyas also are more plentiful.

There is improved demand for strings of asparagus and smilax, but other greens move slowly.

The retailers do not, as a rule, report much increase in the business, but there has been some large funeral work in the last few days and several first-class wedding orders have been handled by the leading stores.

Baumann's New Building.

L. Baumann & Co. are now fully set-

STANDING ORDERS

We want more regular standing orders for shipment every day, every other day, twice a week, or as you prefer.

A standing order enables us to select stock for you early in the day—therefore you get just the grade you want; best selection.

With a standing order YOU know just what YOU can count on; every shipment on the same train. You can sell with confidence. We will advise at what hour "additions" can reach us by wire to go out with the regular order. Think it over, it's to your advantage as well as ours.

A NEW VIOLET BOX

Our new Violet Box De Luxe is a folding box, cheaper and at the same time superior to others. We shall mail a special circular on this the latter part of the week. Watch for it. If you don't receive it, drop us a line and you will also get our New General Supply Catalogue, to be mailed about October 1. If you are not on our mailing list you ought to get on. We are both missing something until you receive our special offers.

Special Bargain in Fancy Baskets

Until September 30, we will allow 10 per cent discount on all orders for assortments of Fancy Baskets as follows: $5.00 assortment for $4.50; $10.00 assortment, $9.00; $15.00 assortment, $13.50. Buyers who have tried these assortments will not overlook this money saving opportunity.

tled in their new building at 118 East Chicago avenue, where they have a substantial brick structure of three stories and basement, for their exclusive use. The removal from downtown has greatly improved their facilities and they have enlarged both the stock and the factory. In addition to a general line of florists' supplies and novelties, they do a big business in the manufacture of special decorative material for all sorts of purposes. Large orders for Marshall Field & Co. and Mandel Bros., for fall opening decorations, are now being turned out. The decorators figure out a scheme in autumn foliage or artificial flowers and Baumann turns out the material by the thousands of yards. It must be fireproof. Some of it is remarkably cheap and others, like some rose garlands now being made for Mandel, cost as much as $3 to $4 a yard.

Mr. Baumann thinks that, if florists would familiarize themselves with such decorative work as is done by the leading stores, they could get many profitable orders from smaller stores that do not have their own decorators and where the nature of the decoration required prohibits the use of natural flowers and foliage except as the finishing touch.

Various Notes.

Alex. Newett has resigned his position with the J. B. Deamud Co., to take effect October 1. Mr. Newett goes to St. Joe, Mo., to take charge of the wholesale end of the business of the Stuppy Floral Co. Mr. Newett has had many years of experience in the Chicago market and numbers as his friend every man with whom he has come in contact. Mr. Stuppy is to be congratulated upon his selection.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, is at Rhinebeck, N. Y., interviewing violet growers. So far as known, no other Chicago wholesaler has visited the violet district this year. Shipments are expected to begin about October 1 and to be heavier this season than last.

C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, has been named as one of the judges for the Little Rock flower show in November, which is expected to be not only much the largest show in the southwest this year, but one of the largest exhibitions of the season. F. H. Regal is a new traveling salesman for E. H. Hunt. He comes from Toronto and has been engaged in the business for many years. His specialty will be greenhouse supplies.

E. E. Piéser is again on duty, after a month's vacation.

Carl N. Thomas arrived September 20, and is again on duty with the A. L. Randall Co.

The E. F. Winterson Co. states that in six days last week its actual sales of asters were 103,000. This does not include the waste, which was accounted for separately. For one grower, 30,150 were handled.

George Reinberg, who has been cutting lightly through the summer, is in line with the rest of the growers on Beauties.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is receiving considerable quantities of Shasta daisies of good quality and finds them brisk sale.

Pochlmann Bros. Co. has begun to cut October Frost chrysanthemums. A number of growers will begin to make daily cuts of early mums, beginning about September 26.

C. L. Washburn says that from the way orders are coming in he thinks there will be no trouble in selling 300,000 cuttings of the O. P. Bassett carnation. The orders thus far received are mostly for large quantities for jobbers; the orders from the buyers of 500 to 1,000

"Randall's bunch," as per an announcement printed on butcher's wrapping paper, will give a barn dance at Reissig's big red barn, at Riverside, Saturday evening, September 26. Overalls and sun-bonnets are prescribed as regulation attire. Tickets are $1 each.

Charles Handel, who has worked for most of the local growers, has returned from a five months' trip to Germany.

There was a largely attended and animated special meeting of the Florists' Club at the Union restaurant, September 18. National flower show plans were up for discussion. The meeting of the executive committee of the national flower show was postponed from September 18 to September 25.

most hospitable welcome there, and business starts better than they expected.

E. C. Amling says the supply of early mums, which has been one of his specialties for some years, promises to be as good as ever in quality, larger than ever in quantity and to sell first rate. Regular prices have thus far been realized for all received in the market, despite the depressed state in other items.

The A. L. Randall Co. received its first Rhinebeck violets September 12, but has not yet found the trade specially anxious for them. Prices range up to 50 cents per hundred.

The Kroeschell Bros. Co. reports that business has picked up in good shape. They are especially busy in the department devoted to greenhouse boilers.

Mons Olson, of the Poehlmann store staff, recently spent a week at St. Paul, with a singing organization of which he is a member.

Weiland & Risch have rearranged their store, moving the office back and giving more room for the selling department. The ice-box space is to be doubled.

E. C. Amling motored to Milwaukee for a few days' visit last week.

Percy Jones says this market does not want Cochet's while other roses are obtainable.

C. W. McKellar says the orchid season is opening well—fairly large supply and good sale for the fall weddings.

The funeral of Emanuel Mandel made business for all the leading retailers. John Mangel had several fine pieces.

the prizes, all valuable, and every lady present was liberally remembered. Mrs. Wittman put many of the men to blush with a score of 161 in the bowling. The three best prizes for the men went to rank outsiders, but President Schultheis said this was fixed by the big bowlers of the society to show its generosity. The music was continuous and everybody danced. It was nearly 10 p. m. when the happy company started for their special. The tables were decorated by Miss Mills, and everyone present carried home a stein presented by Hews & Co. The Whilldin Co. distributed tiny flower pots.

After the dinner Mr. Schultheis acted as toastmaster and gave a splendid speech of welcome and a history of the society and its harmony and accomplishments. He kept the company interested for an hour with story telling and orations, interspersed by the national melodies of the United States, Germany, France, Ireland and Scotland, sons of each being among the membership of the association. Among the speakers were Julius Roehrs, H. C. Steinhoff, W. J. Elliott, Secretary Siebrecht, John Birnie, A. L. Miller, W. J. Stewart and others.

American Institute Show.

The autumn exhibition at the American Institute, which opened September 22, brought out the finest display of dahlias ever seen in New York and there was a large attendance. Among the prize winners for dahlias were the following: J. T. Lovett, Little Silver, N. J.; Geo. L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; A. B. Hathaway, New Bedford, Mass.; W. P. Lothrop, East Bridgewater, Mass.; Mrs. Jahn, New Bedford, Mass.; W. F.

Turner, New Bedford, Mass.; Mrs. Trevor, Yonkers, N. Y.; Howard Gould and many others. The principal exhibitor of gladioli was John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park. Exhibitors of hardy herbaceous plants included J. T. Lovett, Little Silver, and Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford.

Harry Turner, superintendent for Howard Gould, had grand groups of orchids and dahlias and the orchid exhibits of Julius Roehrs Co. and Lager & Hurrell were specially fine. Mr. Turner also had a splendid group of celosia and a remarkable specimen palm.

On roses L. M. Noe, of Madison, was first, and Mrs. Trevor, Yonkers, second. On carnations, the Kennedy estate was first. On violets, Mrs. Trevor was first.

Fruits were exhibited by Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester; M. E. Tator, Redhook, and many others. There also was an excellent exhibit of vegetables.

J. T. Lovett's dahlias were one of the notable features.

Various Notes.

Arthur T. Boddington has secured two floors at 337 and 339 West Thirteenth street. In speaking of this addition to his facilities he said: "Each floor is approximately 50x100 feet. This space is cellar and basement, so that it gives us an increase of 10,000 square feet to do business in. We still retain the store we formerly had, which is 25x100 feet, which gives us 7,500 square feet of floor space there, each floor being 2,500 square feet. We have, therefore, more than doubled our capacity. Our store now runs through from Fourteenth street to Thirteenth street. All our business is now concentrated on the two street floors and the basement. We have three freight elevators for bringing up heavy goods from the cellar and this will enable us to carry sufficient stocks of fertilizers of all kinds, and special facilities for carrying hardy roses and nursery stock through the winter. The flower and vegetable seed business will be kept in the Fourteenth street store, as has always been done. The rear warehouse, facing on Thirteenth street, will be used for carrying the stock of bulbs and heavy seeds."

At Masur's, in Brooklyn, new mirrors, ice-box and electric effects have added much to the effectiveness of the store.

It is reported that the Newport season has not been up to other years, there being few large social events. Wadley & Smythe, however, have had some large landscape orders.

It is rumored that Wertheimer Bros., the ribbon house, will shortly establish selling offices in Chicago and San Francisco.

Good crowds attended the opening sales of the season at Elliott's and Cleary's this week Tuesday, and from now on, every Tuesday and Friday till the ground freezes, the retailers and the suburbanites will gather under the spell of the auctioneers.

Roses are more plentiful and are improving in both color and stem. American Beauties are making their appearance in this market again. They have been quite scarce this summer. Carnations are scarce as yet, but the plants in the houses are in fine shape and will soon give fine flowers. Asters are done with this season and it has been the poorest aster season that we have seen for five years. Gladioli are also almost out of the market, but a few can be seen in the downtown store windows. Chrysanthemums are looking fine and good buds are forming on the early varieties.

Business is rather quiet with some of the stores, but we are looking forward to a good fall. Some of the department stores are handling ferns in great quantities. We think that they will take in horseshoeing next. The early planted Easter lilies are making a fine growth; some are five inches tall.

Fibrotta Ware is made of Indurated Fiber—wood pulp, chemically hardened and compressed. It is far superior to either wood or earthen ware, as it is moulded in one piece—no hoops necessary—cannot warp and is practically unbreakable.

In plant tubs, rolling stands, saucers and vases, Fibrotta is the ware you should carry, both for your own use and for your customers. You'll find Fibrotta a real business builder in this department, as it's infinitely more cleanly, durable and economical than any other ware you can handle. It comes in either mahogany finish or green enamel.

News Column

We have just completed our fourteenth year in the commission business. We are justly proud of our record. From an humble beginning we have grown to be counted among the six largest commission houses in the country. Continued success in business is only possible where sound and conservative methods are its foundation.

We do not aim to do all the business, but we do aim to do some of it, and do it right. Would it be possible to build up a business such as we have done, if we had not conducted business for fourteen years in "the right way"?

We aim to make business financially profitable to "three," that make our business possible, the grower, the retailer, and ourselves. Most of our growers are prosperous; we can readily see it by their expansion, by looking back a few years. The retailers that have dealt with us for years must have found their dealings profitable. The best proof is that they are dealing with us today.

Why don't you get some of this Prosperity?

Try our services and our methods. One or two shipments is not a fair trial, not fair to you or to us. Let us have your business for a month or two, and after that we know the habit to order from "Niessen" will have grown on you.

ing, indicating that he must have had a good trade last season. He also distributed a carload of flower pots last week that were sent in here by the Ionia Pottery Co.

J. Austin, a florist at Thirty-fifth and Park streets, has opened a cut flower store at Thirty-second and Troost streets, with a millinery store. Mr. Austin formerly grew only vegetables for this market, but the last year has changed to plant growing and now to plants and cut flowers. He is quite a hustler and seems to make a success of everything that he undertakes.

Geo. M. Kellogg's store has undergone a great change in cleaning and rearranging and a brand new floor covering. They report business as rather quiet at present. The greenhouses are sending in some good Beauties and Killarney roses.

Geo. Bastian, of Geo. M. Kellogg's cut flower store, is quite ill with pneumonia.

Charles Thomas, one of Kansas City's store men, is now with Geo. M. Kellogg in the wholesale department.

LIFE ON THE ROAD.

The traveling salesman may, in certain instances, lead what Danny Dreamer calls "a gay life," but there are other features incident to occupation on the road. Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, encountered one of these experiences at San Marcos, Tex., September 16, in the early morning, and it chanced that on this western trip he was accompanied by Mrs. Reukauf. At 6:15 a. m. they were awakened to find themselves, with other passengers, huddled together in a bunch in an overturned sleeping car, from which the only means of escape was through a broken window. With his usual gallantry, Mr. Reukauf assisted his wife out first, then the other passengers, and last passed out a miscellaneous assortment of clothing, from which they were able to select all their own attire except Mr. Reukauf's hat and cuffs, with diamond sleeve buttons. Seventeen passengers were badly injured in the wreck, but both Mr. and Mrs. Reukauf escaped without a hurt.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Values are extraordinarily good in the cut flower market. It is seen in cattleyas, in Beauties, in valley, in roses of the tea varieties, in carnations, in asters, in dahlias; in fact, in everything. The critical buyer can find little to find fault with, no matter what he wants. Everything is good, and everything is abundant. I do not mean by this that there are not plenty of poor flowers, for there are, enough and to burn, and there is no other possible use for them. But there are so many good flowers that no one need lack.

The features of the market are the improvement in quality and quantity in the dahlia, an improvement that the public seems slow to grasp; the falling off in quantity of fancy asters, the colored sorts being less abundant than the whites; the improvement in carnations, the new crop from indoor-grown stock showing vast improvement over a week ago, and the advance made by single violets in quantity and in quality.

Richmond roses have been vastly overdone. They are fine, but no one wants them, not at least nearly enough of them to make an impression on the market. Brides and Maids are improving, but they are not selling particularly well. Valley is fine and has sold well at times.

The general market is unsatisfactory. Shipping business is picking up, there being quite a few orders from outside towns. Wild smilax and autumn foliage are excellent and can be had in quantity.

Various Notes.

William Warner Harper returned from a trip in the central part of Pennsylvania September 21. Mr. Harper says that the drought has been worse there than on the eastern seaboard, the trees in many cases having shed their leaves, notably at Montrose.

Charles Henry Fox has a beautiful window display at the Sign of the Rose, consisting of crotons, cat-tails and ribbons of autumn tints. The opposite window is tastefully arranged with dahlias and autumn foliage. Mr. Fox's determination to part with his uptown shop continues to interest the street.

Martin Reukauf, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., was in a serious railway accident in Texas last week. While Mr. Reukauf was dazed, he fortunately escaped bodily injury, and only lost a few trifling articles. His escape was a narrow one.

David Herbert & Son, Atco, N. J., are sending some choice dahlias to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

Walter P. Stokes is offering some fine decorative plants grown at Floracraft, at his Market street seed store.

John Lucas & Co. report the glass market as extraordinarily favorable to intending buyers.

Edward Reid is receiving some exceptionally fine Beauties, Reid's brand, of course.

Among the visitors in town, reported by M. Rice & Co., are J. W. Grandy, Norfolk, Va.; Miss Mary Smith, with G. B. Smith, Baltimore, who called on her way from Atlantic City; Mrs. Fanny

State of Trade.

Trade is somewhat on the mend. While funeral work has not been extra heavy, there have been a great many fall openings, which have used up a good lot of stock, both in plants for decorating and in cut flowers. One of the most notable of the fall openings was that of the new Columbus Grocery Co., on the east side of the city, classed as one of the finest stores in the country. They have also added a cut flower department and will sell plants, etc. They opened for business September 21.

Roses are fine now, of good color and good stem and foliage. Carnations are getting more plentiful, but good, long stock is still scarce, although the outlook is good for the near future, both in quantity and quality. Asters are about done; the dry weather of the last six weeks or more has told on all outdoor stock.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The condition of the market has changed but little since last week. We have been having unseasonably warm weather. Stock is good, prices are right and all we need is a good frost to start things booming. No doubt election is also taking the time of many people who would be buying flowers. All interest is at present writing centered around Philip Breitmeyer, who seems to be the favorite of three candidates for the Republican nomination for mayor. By the time this is in print, there is little doubt he will have been nominated.

Good asters are becoming scarce. White ones are plentiful in the medium grades and these are quite welcome for use in funeral work. Carnations are improving nicely and will soon replace asters.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club, held September 16, was fairly well attended. J. A. Bissinger, of Lansing, was elected a member. Wm. Dilger was pleased with this vote. He said the club should encourage outsiders to join its ranks. He hoped to some day see the present Detroit Florists' Club transformed into the Horticultural Society of Michigan, a society to be made up of professional florists, nurserymen, etc., of Detroit, and all surrounding towns in Michigan. This idea met with the hearty approval of everyone present.

The committee on the revision of the constitution and by-laws handed in a lengthy report on their revision. This brought forth a spirited discussion, but as this is rather an important matter it was moved that the whole be put over until the next meeting.

Hugo Schroeter made a motion, which was carried, that printed application blanks be used in the future.

The Market.

Trade continues good, despite the heat and drought. Good flowers are in fair supply. Second grades and culls are abundant. The biggest glut has been in roses and some cheap outdoor stock. Good asters are scarce. The market is well supplied with the poorer grades. Good sweet peas are still being marketed.

Carnations are improving in quality each day, with the supply about equal to the demand. A few early mums have sold well, though there will be no particular demand for them until there is cooler weather.

The Florists' Club.

"The Minnesota Florists' Association" is the new name given to our club by its recent articles of incorporation, filed with the Secretary of State. At the meeting September 15 the following officers were auditing committee. This committee was directed, at the meeting of September 2, to have a heart-to-heart talk with the delinquents, some of whom are several years behind in their dues, mostly through neglect. All those interviewed promised to settle up.

Under heading of miscellaneous business it was suggested by Chas. Plumb that the chair appoint two members, one retail and one wholesale man, to debate at some future time the question of selling ferns and plants to the dry goods and department stores.

The death of George J. Evans, of Flint, was announced by Robert Rahaley.

Chairman Browne announced a good old-fashioned lunch for the next meeting night. This was well received.

Various Notes.

September 17 and 18 were award days in the public schools of this city. Seeds distributed by the Twentieth Century Club last spring and grown by the children were shown for competition in many schools. The prizes included a Boston fern, donated by the Detroit Florists' Club. The judges were Chas. Plumb, Walter Taepke, Albert Pochelon, J. F. Sullivan, Jerome K. Stock and Hugo Schroeter.

W. B. Brown had quite an elaborate church and house decoration September 22.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House will be better able to meet the demand for carnations this winter, as it will be getting daily shipments from its Pontiac place.

B. Schroeter has some well grown Whitmani ferns and reports a good sale of the same.

Sullivan's are cutting some fine Killarney roses.

Wm. Hielscher reports receiving some good orders from out of town.

exhibition; other sections were well represented.

For group of foliage plants covering 100 square feet, first prize went to Mrs. William Astor, James Boyd gardener. For a similar sized group containing flowering plants, the winners were Mrs. Robert Goelet, Colin Robertson gardener, and Perry Belmont, John Davidson gardener. For the 50-foot group of foliage plants, Mrs. T. O. Richardson, James Robertson gardener, led, with Mrs. William Astor second. Colin Robertson had the best table of decorative foliage plants, James Robertson second, John Davidson third. James Boyd had the best fern group. In the other plant classes the foregoing exhibitors shared the prizes with R. L. Beeckman, J. B. Urquhart gardener; Miss Fanny Foster, M. Burgholdt gardener; H. D. Auckincloss, John Mahan gardener, and Mrs. T. F. Borden.

James Boyd had the best twenty-five gardenias, the favorite flowers at Newport. J. B. Urquhart won with both Beauty and tea roses, and John Mahan for collection of herbaceous plants. Joseph Gibson had the best display of annuals and F. L. Ziegler led for centerpiece of dahlias and fancy basket of the same flowers, also for fancy basket of other flowers than dahlias.

There was, as usual, a big show of dahlias. Some of the leading prize winners for these were: Mrs. H. A. Jahn, E. S. Manuel, M. Burgholdt, Mrs. T. K. Gibbs, James Hooper gardener; A. B. Wordell, James Robertson, W. D. Hathaway, William F. Turner, Alexander MacLellan, and Mrs. Winthrop Chandler, W. G. Postings gardener. The last named won the silver medal offered for the best seedling cactus variety never before exhibited.

Among miscellaneous exhibitors, W. W. Rawson & Co. had a fine collection of dahlias. Henry A. Dreer received a certificate of merit for seedling nymphæas. Oscar Schultz was awarded a certificate for orchids. James Boyd had a nice group of dracænas. B. H. Tracy, with a collection of gladioli, was awarded a certificate of merit. Julius Roehrs Co. had stove plants and orchids. William G. Postings was awarded a silver medal, also a first-class certificate, for a seedling peony flowered dahlia, Cliff Lawn. Mrs. J. C. Mallory received a silver medal for a seedling dahlia, Master Garrick. The same exhibitor had other good seedlings.

There were excellent displays of fruit and vegetables and the whole show was a pronounced success in every way, being superior in some respects to the exhibitions in the large cities. W. N. C.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.;
First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.;
Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

THE firm of Moore & Simon, Philadelphia, has been dissolved, J. M. Simon selling his interest to C. W. Moore.

It is stated that grandchildren will contest the will of the late W. W. Rawson, Boston, who left an estate of about half a million.

JAMES VICK'S SONS, Rochester, had an attractive exhibit at the New York State Fair at Syracuse last week, in charge of Chas. H. Vick.

A NARROW petaled white aster named Unicum, exhibited by Watkins & Simpson, London, has attracted much favorable attention at the English exhibitions this month.

ON the boat from Marseilles that arrived at New York September 16 R. M. Ward & Co. had 350 cases of French bulbs and Schulz & Ruckgaber sixty-eight cases.

I VERY much enjoy reading the REVIEW and I do not believe there is a paragraph from one end to the other that I ever miss.—HENRY FIELD, of the Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia.

FRANCIS BRILL estimates the number of acres on Long Island devoted to growing cabbages for seed as 150 or more. This year some crops are short, a few flat failures, but mainly there is a fairly good yield and good samples.

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON, New York, has secured two floors, each 50x100, at 337 and 339 West Thirteenth street, directly in the rear of his store and office at 342 West Fourteenth street. The new-space is to be used for warehousing bulbs and heavy seeds.

THE Henry Field Seed Co., of Shenandoah, Ia., at its recent annual meeting, declared a dividend of eight per cent and reelected all the old officers for the ensuing year. The report of the year's business showed a prosperous year, with large sales and good profits. The firm expects a much larger business next year, as the increase this year over last was about fifty-eight per cent, and a still larger increase is looked for next year.

D. H. GILBERT, Monticello, Fla., says that "nearly all the early plantings of watermelon for seed have turned out about an average crop, but as usual the late plantings are very short and in some instances are entire failures. As a whole I think I could conservatively estimate the crop at about eighty-five per cent of an average yield. Most of the seeds are in the warehouse and, owing to the dry weather during the harvest season, the quality is excellent."

THE long continued dry weather is affecting the fall trade in grass seeds.

THERE were two cases of lily bulbs for L. D. Crossman & Co. on the boat from Bermuda September 19.

WOOD, STUBBS & Co., Louisville, say they think the crop of onion sets is about fifteen per cent less than last year.

IF seed crops turn out as short as now seems certain, prices will be based largely on "what the traffic will bear."

THE Covington Seed Co., Covington, Ky., now has one of the most up-to-date greenhouse plants in the vicinity of Cincinnati and does a good business in that department.

AN English firm evidently wants to be rid of a surplus of Harrisii; it advertises the 7 to 9 bulbs at 35 shillings ($8.40) per hundred, "instant delivery," which should be quick enough to suit the most exacting.

"THE only crops we are interested in," say Bromfield & Colvin, Bay City, Mich., "are peas and beans. The pea crop this year, as everyone knows by this time, is turning out very poor, on account of the very wet spring and then the continued dry weather this summer."

GUSTAV SCHOTT, Aschaffenburg, Bavaria, says that of Agrostis stolonifera "a further reduction in the acreage has taken place. The new crop has gone through in bad condition and the quantity saved will be less than last year. Yearling stocks being sold out, higher prices are looked for. Our home variety (creeping bent) will only be a small crop."

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co. announce three new Spencer-sweet peas for 1909, named King Edward, Queen Victoria and Mrs. Routzahn. These three, now offered for the first time, have been grown carefully, and most rigidly rogued, and Burpee & Co. predict that they will come at least eighty to ninety per cent true. King Edward is the nearest approach in color to King Edward VII, in the waved or Spencer type. Queen Victoria is almost identical in color with that of the well-known grandiflora Queen Victoria. Mrs. Routzahn is a rich apricot color shaded salmon pink.

THE figures as to the imports of Dutch bulbs through the port of New York reveal an interesting fact as to the proportion of bulbs sold direct to planters by the travelers from Holland, and those sold to the jobbing trade. Most of the travelers who call on small buyers make their New York headquarters with Maltus & Ware and ship in their care. Not all the bulbs handled by Maltus & Ware go to small buyers, but most of them do, and it will be noted that out of 7,606 cases on the last three boats this firm of forwarding agents handled 4,754 cases. Of the 2,852 cases not handled by them, probably enough went direct to planters to fully offset any Maltus & Ware had for the jobbers.

Is it because the catalogue reproductions of color photography do not seem likely to impress the public, without explanation, that so much is said about the new process by those who are using it this season? Or are they simply trying to get their money's worth?

THE Morris & Snow Seed Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., recently incorporated, has moved to new and larger quarters at 425 South Main street. The former location was 555 South Main street. The officers of the company are: President, O. M. Morris; vice-president, B. F. Reichard; secretary and treasurer, M. C. Snow. The new and more favorable location will give opportunity for enlargement of stock and a much larger business.

LILIUM HARRISII.

The REVIEW presents herewith the first figures to be published as to the number of cases of Harrisii bulbs of the several sizes exported from Bermuda to the United States in the last three years, together with the dates of shipment:

THE PRICE OF SETS.

Can you give me any information as to the probable future prices of onion sets, particularly white sets? Is the set crop, as a whole, better this year than last, and how will the prices this year compare with those of last year? Any information concerning the set crop and prices expected will be thankfully received.

B. S. K.

The onion set crop of this year is, on the whole, not so large as last year. At the present time the prices are twenty-five per cent higher than at the same time last year. There does not appear to be any proportionate difference in the quantity of any of the colors, compared with last year. White sets usually bring 15 to 25 cents per bushel more than either of the other colors. From the reports so far received, well posted dealers in sets are of the opinion that the percentage of advance in the prices now prevailing will continue to hold good for the full season. It may be that if we get a real stiff, cold winter, spring prices will be fifty per cent higher than they were last spring.

PEAS AND BEANS.

An operator in the Michigan growing territory wrote as follows to the REVIEW under date of September 18:

"We have nothing new to report in reference to pea and bean crops, except to say that all are coming in short of estimates that were made in the fields. We expect that both peas and beans will be of good quality, except that beans will probably be smaller than usual on account of the dry weather.

"Commercial beans remain very firm at a slight advance and it looks as though they will remain firm during the season. In our opinion it is absolutely unnecessary for seedsmen to give away their peas and beans at low prices. Those who have contracted ahead for their full supply of both peas and beans have made no mistake.

"Please do not mention our name in any note you make from this letter, as it might give the dealers a wrong impression. They might charge us with trying to bull the market when as a matter of fact we are not, as we have but very few of either peas or beans to sell."

MICHIGAN SEED CROPS.

S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich., write as follows under date of September 19: "Conditions are not satisfactory. We have had a most unfavorable season. The spring was late, and while planting time was followed by some favorable weather, yet before the crops were far enough along, it became too dry and has remained so up to the present time. It is well known that peas are very short and we do not believe beans will run over fifty per cent, on an average; vine crops probably twenty per cent to thirty per cent. Conditions this year were very unusual for Michigan, as this state is usually favored with good growing weather."

Darling & Beahan, of Petoskey, Mich., make a specialty of peas, beans and potatoes for seed purposes. They endeavor to keep pretty well posted on these three lines, but say they do not pay much attention to other lines of seeds except in a retail way. Under date of September 19 they say:

"The 1908 pea crop with us is very poor indeed and as near as we can learn it is about the same all over the Michigan pea growing district. While our own crops are not all in, we have received enough from the farmers to give us an idea of how they will run. Hosford's Market Garden, Bliss' Abundance, Surprise, Telephone and Champion of England are averaging about three-fifths of an average crop; Everbearing, American Wonder, Ameer, Advancer, Thomas Laxton and Early Market about one-half of an average; Alaska, Extra Early and Nott's Excelsior about two-fifths of an average; Gradus and Gems about one-fourth of an average.

"As we said before, these figures are based on crops which have already been delivered. While they ought to indicate pretty accurately what the final result will be, crops that come in later may run a little better, or worse, and change them somewhat.

"Up to the present time few beans have come in, so we can not form any estimate from crops already in hand. We are confident, however, from the inspection of crops in the field, that we will not receive more than one-half of an average crop. Wardwell's Kidney Wax and Davis' White Wax have suffered the most. Golden Wax and Black Wax and the green pod sorts will be some better.

"Potatoes will not be one-half of an average crop in this vicinity, and from reports we have had we are confident that they are pretty poor all over the state.

"These bad conditions have been brought about by unfavorable weather. The spring was late and cold, so that early sowed peas and beans rotted in the ground and did not come up. June was very dry, with hot winds, which damaged the early peas to a great extent. About July 4 we had a good rain, but have not had any since that time. Along about the last of August we had a bad freeze, which finished up what the bad weather had left on low land. Potatoes and corn on high land are still in fair condition, so far as frost goes, but they are now too far gone for rain to help them.

"Take it all together, we have had a very unfavorable season for growing our specialties, so that we will be buyers of some varieties of peas, beans and potatoes instead of having a surplus to whole-sale, as is usually the case."

THE HOLLAND BULBS.

The export houses in Holland have been working at high pressure to deliver the goods, but the weather has been against them for the last three weeks. Such goods as anemones and ranunculus could not be delivered, owing to the absence of sunshine, which is required to dry these roots. Owing to the continued rainfall that followed the long dry spell, the early gladioli, such as Cardinalis and Colvillei varieties, had to be lifted in a great hurry, to prevent their starting new growth in the wet soil.

The unusually low prices that have prevailed for hyacinths have caused such a general clearance of all stocks that, contrary to all expectations, no more are left on the hands of the growers and prices are showing a slight advance. Of the tulips only a few of the higher priced sorts are left unsold and all the cheaper sorts have sold well. Even the May flowering sorts, that moved slowly at first, have all cleared off. Crocus are sold out clean and only a few of the narcissi stocks are moving slowly, and may possibly be left unsold. Planting operations are just beginning, but suffer from the effects of the inclement weather.

GRASS SEED REPORT.

We are sorry to say that again we are not in a position to report favorably as to the crop of natural grass seeds. Early in spring we had unfavorable weather, but about the middle of May a change took place, prospects brightened and gave hope for a splendid crop. The weather in the early summer, however, brought much rain and cold again and the development of seeds and later on the ripening was badly influenced and this accounts for the poor crop of some varieties of which we will give you a short description.

The German crop of Agrostis stolonifera had much to suffer from the unfavor-last year and prices are a little higher. Anthoxanthum Puelii promises a small crop only, and much higher prices than last year have to be paid.

Some districts had a poor crop of Avena elatior, while in others the harvest turned out to be better and if one speaks of an average crop of good quality it will be the most likely.

The crop of Bromus inermis seems to be better than last year's. Quality and quantity are satisfactory and prices will see a reduction.

Home trade has used the small quantity of Dactylis glomerata which was harvested this year in New Zealand; there was almost no seed for export. The crop in Germany and Austria was bought up at high prices and, considering good qualities, there will be no chance of getting Dactylis glomerata at a low price this season.

The reports on the crop of Cynosurus cristatus are various. In some districts the harvest is good, while others speak of a poor crop. As there are no stocks of old seed, pretty high prices were asked for the new crop, but it is difficult to say whether there will be an advance or a decline of prices.

Those who reported the crop of Festuca duriuscula and Festuca ovina as being not favorable were right. It proves that the cold weather in April and hailstorms in May did much damage during the flowering of the grass and the continuous rain favored the growth of clovers and weeds among the grass, which was unfit for seed saving and had to be cut for hay. The seed requires much cleaning and this brings a great loss. The germination is satisfactory. There is every reason that prices will go higher still and will reach a point which we have not seen for this species for many years. Nearly all seed is out of the hands of the farmers now and there is not much of old seed carried over.

A better crop than last year of Festuca ovina tenuifolia will hardly be enough to answer for the great demand. Lower prices than last year were expected, but speculation has brought them to about the same figure as before and recleaned seed demands the same high price again.

The yield of Festuca heterophylla is about equal to last year's and about the same prices will rule for recleaned seed. Although the crop of Festuca rubra is somewhat larger than last season, it is still not sufficient for the demand and good qualities will be as scarce as ever.

Our home crop of Phalaris arundinacea was almost nothing, while other districts had an average crop, for which, however, high prices had to be paid. The quality is good.

There is a somewhat larger crop yield of Poa memorialis, and of satisfactory quality, but we shall see high prices for this article, as a wild speculation has brought the prices for this seed to an extreme height.

The crop of Poa trivialis is said to be a good one, both as to quality and quantity, while the color is said to be a shade darker than usual.

It is too early yet to say anything definite as regards the new crop of clover seeds, etc., but red clover promises a good crop and we hope to see normal prices once again. Alfalfa, which showed signs of a good crop, is now said to be less favorable. Trefoil is short everywhere. On Trefolium hybridum, reports from Canada are not favorable, while Germany had a better crop and somewhat lower

Peter Henderson & Co., New York, send out the following letter with their fall bulb catalogue:

"We mail to you under separate cover a copy of Henderson's Autumn Catalogue for 1908, in which is described and photographically illustrated choicest kinds of flower bulbs from Holland, Palestine, China, Japan, Bermuda, etc. Some of these are hardy and may be planted in the garden this fall to bloom next spring; others, if potted up this fall, will flower in the house during the winter. Bulbous flowers are most showy, satisfactory and easily grown.

"We also wish to particularly draw your attention to the cover of this catalogue, which is unique, from the fact that the pictures—front and back—we photographed in colors direct from nature, and they have been reproduced by photo-engraving without touch of artists' pigment, brush or pencil, thus showing the first practical results of dreams of years and fortunes spent on color photography."

The Henderson book is certainly one of the best bulb catalogues published in this country. The paper, cuts and press-work are excellent and seventy-two pages are required to list the line.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Trade is quiet here and will be for a few weeks yet, until the sojourners at the seashore and in the country return and the outdoor gardens are depleted. Funeral work has occasioned some business, but that is about all. Asters, dahlias and gladioli are abundant and good. Roses are in excess of active demand and carnations are showing great improvement and strength. The growers are completing the overhauling and renovation of their houses and benching is practically finished with the majority. One downtown dealer, Saturday, advertised 5,000 asters at 21 cents a dozen.

Dahlia Show.

The annual dahlia and aster show of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held in this city September 17 and 18, and was the best in the society's history. Benchd under the direction of the exhibition committee, composed almost entirely of practical florists, the display was satisfactory. William Appleton was superintendent of the hall. The exhibition of dahlias, especially in the cactus varieties, surpassed any ever made in this city, and was contributed to by nearly all of the specialists in this vicinity. Among these were Mrs. H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford; William Tarbox, of West Greenwich; Joshua Vose, of Pontiac; Herr Prest, of this city; E. E. Howard, of Eden Park; George H. Walker, of North Dighton, Mass.; Joseph Vance, of East Providence, and William Appleton, of this city.

In the awards, Herr Prest received first and second prizes for the best single dahlias of any named variety in the show, introduction of 1907 or later, with Referee and Macmillan, respectively.

Vegetable Forcing.

FORCING TOMATOES.

In preceding issues of the REVIEW there appeared Prof. W. S. Blair's account of the experiments in forcing tomatoes at Macdonald College, Quebec, with a description of the methods employed in starting the plants and planting the two houses employed, also a table showing the yield, both in weight of fruit and in money value.

Insects.

The white fly is the most difficult insect to deal with. To control it, we confine ourselves entirely to the use of hydrocyanic acid gas. It might be interesting here to give a brief history of the life of this pest. This fly, you all know, when disturbed will fly around the plant and usually return to the same plant. On examination of the under side of a leaf you notice what appear to be eggs, but on closer examination with a glass you will find that part only are eggs and part are nymphs. It takes about thirteen days for the eggs to hatch into nymphs, and when hatched they move over the undersurface of the leaf for a short time and then insert their beaks into the tissue of the leaf, taking on somewhat the appearance of a scale. These turn into the adult white fly in about five weeks' time.

This insect, owing to its sucking mouth parts, cannot be controlled by poison placed on the foliage, and you all know that fumigation with tobacco does very little good. We found that one ounce of potassium cyanide to 2,000 cubic feet was quite effective in getting rid of the fly. Of course, the tightness of the house and the kind of night may make it necessary to use one ounce to 1,800 cubic feet, or even stronger. This gas is made according to the following formula: One ounce of high-grade cyanide of potassium, ninety to ninety-eight pure; one ounce, by measure, of commercial sulphuric acid; four ounces, by measure, of water.

Necessity of Early Benching.

I have already stated that in order to run in tomatoes after carnations and violets it is necessary to sacrifice the latter part of these crops. As a general rule, the market demand for violets and carnations is not brisk after Easter, and therefore we think it possible in many cases to discard part of these crops in favor of tomatoes. In no case do we think it advisable to bench tomatoes later than the latter part of March; in fact, I would say not later than the middle of March, for the reason that the fruit comes into competition with southern grown tomatoes, which are so plentifully put upon the market during June and July, and also with our own outside grown tomatoes after the middle of July. We are always sure of getting a better price for the greenhouse stock, but even so the prices drop materially after the middle of July, as is indicated by the returns from house No. 2, as given.

It is wise, also, to have the plants well advanced for benching, for in this way the crop is brought into fruiting much earlier.

Does It Pay?

Our tomato house returned us 42.72 cents per square foot from March 12 to July 29. This, we think, is a good showing and much in advance of any returns that could have been had from violets or carnations. You have, of course, the expense of cleaning out the other crop, working over the soil, and handling the plants. This is not a large job, and I might also state that, in comparison with floral plants, the tomato is not an expensive one to handle.

It is also a possible practice, and one followed by some growers, to plant in the carnation bench by simply removing a plant or two where the tomato is to be set and working up only a small area of soil for this purpose, thus getting some crop off the remaining carnations while the tomatoes are making their early growth. This, however, I would not advise. I do not think that there is any material gain by such a practice. The plant does not get as good a start, you cannot work over the soil in such a thorough and expeditious manner, and the carnations obtained do not compensate for injury sustained through working out the carnation plants later on.

Whether the spring forcing of tomatoes can be followed profitably or not, you all know depends upon the particular line followed by the florist. He often can work in certain lines at this season of the year to supply a special trade, such as bedding out stock, for instance, and possibly in some cases do better, but I am convinced that in a great many cases the forcing of tomatoes can be followed to much greater profit.

The Fairness of the Experiments.

Results similar to those given here can be obtained by any florist. The plants in this experiment were given only average treatment, for, as we aim to run our houses along commercial lines, we cannot afford to do anything except what an average florist would find it necessary to do.

We obtained only the wholesale prices and did not cater to a special trade. We could have obtained higher prices by placing our fruit on a special market, but we prefer in all our work to ship to a commission merchant, getting rid of Vegetable Forcing.

FORCING TOMATOES.

In preceding issues of the REVIEW there appeared Prof. W. S. Blair's account of the experiments in forcing tomatoes at Macdonald College, Quebec, with a description of the methods employed in starting the plants and planting the two houses employed, also a table showing the yield, both in weight of fruit and in money value.

Insects.

The white fly is the most difficult insect to deal with. To control it, we confine ourselves entirely to the use of hydrocyanic acid gas. It might be interesting here to give a brief history of the life of this pest. This fly, you all know, when disturbed will fly around the plant and usually return to the same plant. On examination of the under side of a leaf you notice what appear to be eggs, but on closer examination with a glass you will find that part only are eggs and part are nymphs. It takes about thirteen days for the eggs to hatch into nymphs, and when hatched they move over the undersurface of the leaf for a short time and then insert their beaks into the tissue of the leaf, taking on somewhat the appearance of a scale. These turn into the adult white fly in about five weeks' time.

This insect, owing to its sucking mouth parts, cannot be controlled by poison placed on the foliage, and you all know that fumigation with tobacco does very little good. We found that one ounce of potassium cyanide to 2,000 cubic feet was quite effective in getting rid of the fly. Of course, the tightness of the house and the kind of night may make it necessary to use one ounce to 1,800 cubic feet, or even stronger. This gas is made according to the following formula: One ounce of high-grade cyanide of potassium, ninety to ninety-eight pure; one ounce, by measure, of commercial sulphuric acid; four ounces, by measure, of water.

Necessity of Early Benching.

I have already stated that in order to run in tomatoes after carnations and violets it is necessary to sacrifice the latter part of these crops. As a general rule, the market demand for violets and carnations is not brisk after Easter, and therefore we think it possible in many cases to discard part of these crops in favor of tomatoes. In no case do we think it advisable to bench tomatoes later than the latter part of March; in fact, I would say not later than the middle of March, for the reason that the fruit comes into competition with southern grown tomatoes, which are so plentifully put upon the market during June and July, and also with our own outside grown tomatoes after the middle of July. We are always sure of getting a better price for the greenhouse stock, but even so the prices drop materially after the middle of July, as is indicated by the returns from house No. 2, as given.

It is wise, also, to have the plants well advanced for benching, for in this way the crop is brought into fruiting much earlier.

Does It Pay?

Our tomato house returned us 42.72 cents per square foot from March 12

to July 29. This, we think, is a good showing and much in advance of any returns that could have been had from violets or carnations. You have, of course, the expense of cleaning out the other crop, working over the soil, and handling the plants. This is not a large job, and I might also state that, in comparison with floral plants, the tomato is not an expensive one to handle.

It is also a possible practice, and one followed by some growers, to plant in the carnation bench by simply removing a plant or two where the tomato is to be set and working up only a small area of soil for this purpose, thus getting some crop off the remaining carnations while the tomatoes are making their early growth. This, however, I would not advise. I do not think that there is any material gain by such a practice. The plant does not get as good a start, you cannot work over the soil in such a thorough and expeditious manner, and the carnations obtained do not compensate for injury sustained through working out the carnation plants later on.

Whether the spring forcing of tomatoes can be followed profitably or not, you all know depends upon the particular line followed by the florist. He often can work in certain lines at this season of the year to supply a special trade, such as holding out stock, for instance, and possibly in some cases do better, but I am convinced that in a great many cases the forcing of tomatoes can be followed to much greater profit.

The Fairness of the Experiments.

Results similar to those given here can be obtained by any florist. The plants in this experiment were given only average treatment, for, as we aim to run our houses along commercial lines, we cannot afford to do anything except what an average florist would find it necessary to do.

We obtained only the wholesale prices and did not cater to a special trade. We could have obtained higher prices by placing our fruit on a special market, but we prefer in all our work to ship to a commission merchant, getting rid of our fruit on a general market, for in this way we believe we can best study average existing conditions.

House No. 1 represents fairly well what can be done by following the chrysanthemum crop with tomatoes. The returns from this house were 67.85 cents per square foot.

In closing I might state that it is advisable to run in a considerable area to this crop rather than only one bench or part of a bench in different houses. We much prefer to give up an entire house to the crop, for in this way fa-

PACIFIC COAST.

PORTLAND, ORE.—A. Rahn, of Rahn & Herbert, who operate Pfunder's Greenhouses, was badly hurt, some time ago, in a wreck on the Southern Pacific and is only now able to be about and attend to business.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Business has opened up again in fair shape and a good fall and winter trade is looked forward to by all. The outlook is exceedingly good.

The members of the craft to a man accepted an invitation given by Mr. Haerle, of Hollywood, to visit his greenhouses, located six miles from Los Angeles, September 13. O. C. and William Saakes were there with their wives in their automobiles. Others came on street cars and by 2 p. m. there must have been at least fifty florists present. Messrs. Haerle and Turner are good hosts and soon made all feel at home. A bountiful repast and liquid refreshments were served.

Dr. Houghton, vice-president of the Los Angeles Florists' Club, was orator of the day, giving an interesting talk. His talk was followed by others, by different members of the club. A ball game was gotten up between the wholesalers and retailers, score 8 to 1 in favor of the retailers, after which a picture was taken of as many of us as could get in front of the camera. Three rousing cheers for our hosts were followed by a look through the greenhouses, well kept, under W. H. Turner's able management. They have just completed, and planted to Killarney and Rhea Reid, a house, the largest, to the writer's knowledge, on the Pacific coast, being 65x300 feet. This is only one of their many houses.

The Angeles Florist, located at 204 West Fourth street, has changed owners, being formerly conducted by Messrs. Dieterich, Walters and De Ortignac. Mr. Walters has bought out his partners and now is sole owner. C. E. M.

CALIFORNIA ROSE GROWERS.

A tour among some of the principal rose growers in the vicinity of San Francisco reveals the fact that there will be no increase of glass this season devoted to the growing of roses over that of last year. For some reason or other it is apparent that the growers prefer to direct their energies to the more easily handled carnations, and roses have not been planted in as large a quantity as the apparent demand would warrant. Except in a few instances, all the building that has been done this season in the line of new houses has been done by Japanese growers in the neighborhood of Elmhurst and Stege. Both these locations are in Alameda county and the products are sold in Oakland and San Francisco.

Burlingame, San Bruno and Elmhurst furnish practically all the roses sold here and in none of these places is there any additional bench room assigned to roses.

Brides and Maids occupy most of the space, with the latter probably slightly in excess. K. A. Victoria is the only other white grown in quantity. Beauties are not being replanted to the extent which their importance calls for, and they represent practically three-fourths of the entire space devoted to red varieties.

Liberty and Richmond are grown with good success in several establishments. Pot-grown Ulrich Brunner, which can be set under glass or grown in lath houses, is also seen. Testout is handled by some growers, and I have only seen a few beds of La France, Mme. Chatenay and Killarney.

Perle seems to be entirely discarded, as well as Souv. du Pres. Carnot. Cecil Brunner is grown quite extensively and is a very fair paying variety. A few years ago Papa Gontier, Rainbow, Meteor and Sunset were handled by various growers, but none of these are being used for forcing at present. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

A few hours' rain last week freshened everything except business, and it is at a low ebb. Flowers of all kinds, except fancy roses, are overplentiful and very cheap and prices are hardly worth quoting.

The new crops of carnations have well established themselves and the quality in almost all instances is fully up to the average, except that the stems usually are a shade shorter than they should be. Asters are almost over for the season and the price on such as are yet in good condition has advanced several points.

No outside mums have yet made their appearance. Some good early whites and yellows are being sent in from hothouse grown stock. Amaryllis are about over. Japanese lilies have held out remarkably well and the retailers have found them to be one of the best sellers up to date. Valley is in fair supply, but moves slowly. Sweet peas are in less demand than they have been and the stems are much shorter throughout. Violets are daily becoming better, both in color and substance. They cost the retailers $1 per dozen bunches. Several patches of late blooming gladioli have been brought into town and sell well.

Cut asparagus is more plentiful and cheaper than it has been at any time during the year. Maidenhair fern, on account of the coolness of the summer, has not grown so profusely as usual and the growers have got it well cut down.

Business over in Oakland has been quite as dull as on the San Francisco side.

Various Notes.

The local dealers have received full supplies of Dutch bulbs and trade appears to be good in that line.

PORTLAND, ORE.

State of Business.

Everybody is ready to agree with the other fellow that there is a steady increase in trade, and September is going to pay expenses. Funeral work has been much in demand, and there is no limit to that created by the matrimonial procession. A whole week of Indian summer has strengthened the cut flower market and the supply of roses meets the requirements of every occasion. The few carnations seen are good, but short-stemmed. Outdoor stock is still plentiful and the quality is all we can expect.

Among the Growers.

We reduced our avoirdupois a few pounds one delightful afternoon last week by a long tramp across the city for the purpose of noting what progress our local growers had made.

The Tonseth Floral Co. has added substantially to its range this year and the house filled with adiantum and Whitmani ferns attracted our heartiest admiration. They were fine, handsome specimens and looked like ready money. Everything on the place, except the carnations, had developed a strong growth. Chrysanthemum October Frost will be ready to cut in a week.

Rahn & Herbert, our wholesale growers, are prepared to do justice to their patrons, for the place is planted with the most desirable stock. Two houses of chrysanthemums are immense and we have yet to see their equal. They have a splendid assortment of young plants for the shipping trade, especially in the line of ferns. We noticed that this firm had also gone in more strongly for violets this year, having built houses for that purpose.

The Martin & Forbes establishment is always inviting and every department is conducted on a thoroughly systematic basis. The first chrysanthemums of the season, Golden Glow, were cut here late in August. Their bench of finely grown cyclamen would be hard to duplicate. In fact, everything was looking thrifty, although the same complaint was heard here, and it seems to be general, that carnations are a month late this year. That there are exceptions in every case is verified by the fine Enchantress now being cut by F. A. Van Kirk. Starting in the business three years ago with no knowledge of their culture, Mr. Van Kirk attributes his success to good soil and constant attention.

Jean Robinson owns three acres of valuable realty. He also is building one house, 30x150. His specialty is violets, and his previous success and the healthy condition of the plants prove his ability in this line.

Crossing over to Ivanhoe station, we paid our respects to the proprietor of the Steele Giant Pansy Gardens. For a number of years Mr. Steele was principal of one of our schools, but finding so great a demand for his high grade strain of pansies, he has decided to devote all his time to their culture. He has 100,000 young re-set plants about ready for the market.

Various Notes.

E. Gill, nurseryman, of West Berkeley, Cal., is in the city on his annual business trip up the coast.

E. J. Bernecke, proprietor of the Capital Point Nursery, Olympia, Wash., is also here on business. He has been buying rose plants here and in Salem, and says he found just what he wanted.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., O. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE prices of nursery stock on the Pacific coast are in many instances lower than last season.

THE sale for phlox increases every fall and will this season again break all records, for the finer varieties are now reasonable in price.

C. G. NIEMAN, of Port Clinton, O., who has heretofore purchased his stock from nurseries, has made arrangements to start a nursery of his own.

IRISES are selling better this fall than at any previous time, the public having come to appreciate the merits of the plant for beds and especially for borders.

HOYT BROS., nurserymen at Scotch Grove, Ia., put up a winter scene with evergreens and imitation snow at the recent fair at Monticello. The exhibit made a hit.

It is reported that the nursery business of Richard Smith & Co., Ltd., of Worcester, England, is to be wound up, in consequence of its having been carried on at a loss the last few years. The concern ranks among the historic businesses in the trade, and has a wide connection, not only in its own country but abroad, especially in the United States.

BORERS IN MAPLES.

One of my customers has a maple tree that has a borer in it. They did not discover it until the leaves began to turn yellow. Now they ask me what to do. Is it best to cut the bark and follow him around the tree until found? He seems to be eating just under the bark and around the tree. What treatment should be given the tree and what prospects of saving it? B. P.

The best way to kill borers in shade trees is to pour a few drops of carbon bisulphide in the hole where they have entered and immediately plug up the cavity with putty to keep the fumes in. The carbon will soon suffocate the borers. This is a better and decidedly more simple plan than digging for the pest, which takes up considerable time and is not always successful. W. N. CRAIG.

POINTS AT PETERSON'S.

At the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, attention is divided between the peonies, just now being shipped in large quantities, and the condemnation proceedings started by the Chicago Drainage Board, which is taking forty-seven acres out of the nursery for the north branch of the great drainage canal. Instead of going to court, William A. Peterson and the board agreed that three arbitrators should settle the damages and value of the land taken, and that judgment against the drainage board should be entered for the amount the arbitrators determined upon. The board contends that the nursery is to be valued as farm lands at about $700 to $800 per acre, while Mr. Peterson asserts that it is city property, on which he has paid city taxes for police, fire, school and library purposes for twenty years or more, and values the property at $1,500 per acre. The arbitrators have spent three weeks trying to decide on a value, but their lack of success may be in part due to the fact that they are being paid $50 a day for their labors. If the salary was not so good they might get together quicker.

Mr. Peterson says the sales of peony roots this year beat all records except those of three years ago, but that the sales are almost all to dealers, or through the landscape department. Few orders are received for quantities for planting scape work, or in small lots for planting on home grounds. Festiva maxima has begun to sell; it appeared at first as though everyone was stocked up with this variety to the point where there would be no call from other dealers. It also is noticeable that growers from whom Peterson bought stock of other varieties a year or two ago are now coming to him for the same varieties, indicating that they have been having good business.

The landscape department of the Peterson Nursery has developed rapidly in the last few years. On a recent trip to Duluth and Minneapolis, B. E. Gage secured several large orders. Work is now being started on plans for a 40-acre park at Pana, Ill., and on the execution of plans made some time ago for a large private job at Ottawa, Ill. So much city business is in sight that a sixty horse-power automobile has been purchased for the use of the landscape department. The office space of this department will be increased during the winter.

Movers of large trees will be interested that Peterson's recently took an order for the moving of a single tree from the nursery to some city grounds ten miles distant. It is a hackberry of fifty-one feet spread and fifty feet high, branches coming to within four or five feet of the ground. The price for the one tree is $400.

HARDINESS OF EUCALYPTUS.

Could you let me know whether red gum, Eucalyptus rostrata, is hardy in New Jersey? The seeds were brought from California. C. H. W.

Neither Eucalyptus rostrata, red gum tree, nor any other eucalyptus is hardy in New Jersey. All will withstand several degrees of frost, but they will only winter outdoors in a few of our warmest states. C. W.

PINE SEED.

The Vermont State Nursery at Burlington used last year for its own planting and for distribution in the state the seeds from nearly 100 bushels of white pine cones. These were collected near Burlington, where the pines fruited abundantly last autumn. This tree matures a good seed crop only once in three to five years, however, and but few seeds will be found there this autumn.

A good crop is reported from various other sections of the state and wherever cones are abundant it will pay to collect them. This must be done in September, at which time the mature cones are from three to five inches long, green and with scales still closed. In October the scales open while the cones are yet hanging on the tree and the seeds then scatter. Where pine trees are cut in September it is easy to pick the cones, which may in some cases have a value equal to that of the lumber from the tree. Usually, however, the cones must be harvested by climbing the trees and raking them from the branches. In this way from a peck to three bushels may be had from a single good tree. The green cones are then to be dried under cover, when the scales open and most of the seed will fall out. When fully dried the balance may be threshed out with a flail. A bushel of cones would yield about a pound of seed. The seeds are of about the size and color of buckwheat. The

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The continued warm weather has kept business at a standstill, though there is evidence of the coming fall business in the gossip about town and retailers are busily looking up stock. When the thermometer registers 92 in the shade in the middle of September in this climate, we are prepared for abnormal conditions in business. But the first frost will kill the outdoor product, and the people will flock to the greenhouses.

Roses are plentiful, in some cases showing mildew, but in general very good. Carnations are coming in, and selling at from $2 to $2.50. Lilies, rubrums, Harrisii and auratum are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The first monthly meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association was held at Columbia hall, Merriam Park, September 15, at 8 p. m. The meeting was not very well attended, but it is to be hoped that, as the season advances, more interest will be manifested.

Rice Bros. report business picking up, and the out-of-town shipping notably increasing. Wild smilax is in now in good quantities.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has a good crop of roses and lilies, and some good white and Enechantress carnations coming.

Visitors: E. M. Sherman, Charles City, Ia.; Frank Kindler, St. Cloud, Minn.; W. C. Johnson, representing E. H. Hunt, Chicago. M. E. M.

known as the Wyomissing Nursery, and he says that in the retail way his business is good—far ahead of what he expected—and that a few of the trade have found him out. WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

There has been an improvement all along the line in the last week's business, with plenty of stock, which is coming much better.

G. H. Small & Sons showed the first mums. They had a fine vase of yellow in their window.

The Washington Florists Co. is cutting some fine Cardinal roses. The firm has grown this rose successfully for the last two years. The new rose they had last year is showing up finely. They have a whole bench of it this year. It is built like Killarney and has a fine, long stem, with few thorns. In color it resembles Golden Gate. It is beautiful when full-blown and is a splendid keeper. It was much admired by E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind.

The return of President and Mrs. Roosevelt to the White House this week will make quite a difference in social affairs in Washington. The reopening of the White House will bring back about all of the cabinet and many of the diplomatic corps. The coming season is to be a gay one, as Miss Ethel Roosevelt is to make her debut. She being a lover of flowers, there will be something doing in that line.

Z. D. Blackistone and family have returned from their outing at River Springs, Md.

Dan Blackistone and family have gone to Baltimore, where he has taken a position.

Geo. A. Comley, after taking stock and balancing up at his Wisconsin avenue store, finds his business has been seventy-five per cent better than last year.

George Shaffer has just finished giving his store a coat of paint inside and out. It looks fresh and inviting. He has just received from Baltimore a handsome open wagon, to be used for hauling plants and decorative material. It is green trimmed with gold, with a canopy for the driver, and is the finest of its kind in the city.

Gude Bros. Co. has in its windows a vase of the Indian's Pipe, Monotropa uniflora, a parasite, native in Virginia. It attracts much attention, being a perfectly formed pipe.

The Greek who held fort for the last four years in the basement at the corner of Thirteenth and F streets, and was arrested for passing worthless checks, has moved out all his belongings, and quit.

About thirty members decided to attend the dahlia exhibition at the establishment of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., September 22. On the return trip the Washington club will be entertained by the Baltimore club in the evening.

At a meeting of the Washington Florists' Bowling Club the following officers were elected: President, J. J. Barry; secretary and treasurer, G. Supper; captain, Geo. C. Shaffer. Delegates to represent the club in the District League: Geo. C. Shaffer, Geo. H. Cooke and J. J. Barry.

A match game was arranged with the Baltimore team for Tuesday evening, September 22.

The following was the score rolled September 16, at the Royal alleys:

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business, on the whole, has picked up since the last report, and would have been better had it not been for the hot weather, especially on Friday and Saturday, when the mercury reached 95 degrees.

That asters are growing less in quantity and poorer in quality is clearly shown by the brisk way the new crop of carnations moved. These are of good quality, considering; yet many show signs of thrips, more so than in past seasons. This is probably due to the dryness all summer. Good, cool weather will help considerably to remedy the trouble.

Various Notes.

Both Holton & Hunkel and C. C. Pollworth Co. report shipping trade on the increase.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. says it got its share of work at the openings, in the new Fisher building, of Gimbel Bros. and the Espenhain Dry Goods Co. This work, however, did not help the local wholesale houses much. William Edlefsen is up north, on a fishing and hunting trip.

At the store of the M. A. McKenney Co. they report September business as assuming a regular gait, with nothing special to comment on.

Will Zimmerman, who was one of the committee of four appointed by the president of the local florists' club to help the Outdoor Art Association judge the work of the contestants who beautified their back yards, reports the task done and results gratifying.

The family of August Kellner, president of the Kellner Floral Co., has been increased by the arrival of a baby girl.

A. N. Kinsman, of Austin, Minn., was in this city September 19 and also visited several of the North Milwaukee growers. E. O.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—Frank P. Brigham has gone to Newtown Square, Pa., having secured a position with H. H. Battles, at the Thornhedge Greenhouses.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

WREN WRITING ADVERTISERS.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

For some time I have been informing my readers of the very bad shape Business has been in, but it is with a sad heart I am compelled to inform you that the climax came last Tuesday, September 15, when poor Business collapsed and died. The interment will be deferred until Bill is elected, when some think another miracle will be performed and Bill will breathe the breath of life into Business. For the present, the wholesalers are all keeping up a beautiful display of Beauties, lilies, roses, asters and everything of the best. This, they say, is all they can do.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements have just completed two houses, 20x175, and three smaller houses. This will give this firm about 125,000 feet of glass. This is all filled with palms, ferns, crotons and other plants. The only cut flowers grown are chrysanthemums and gardenias. They also force bulbs and lilac.

A. W. Smith is receiving some good dahlias from the Altimo Culture Co.; also quantities of gladioli and asters.

O. P. Beeb, 6105 Penn avenue, has sold his business to Charles Eisner, who retains Mr. Beeb as manager.

H. J. Heinz, the pickle man, took advantage of the rose market and gave away roses every day last week to the visitors at the factory and also the stand in the exposition.

Miss E. B. Maxwell, of Wilkinsburg, returned September 21 from an extended trip through the west, staying for some time in Chicago.

Sam Capes has been quite busy with funeral work for several days.

September 27 to October 3 Pittsburg will celebrate its sesquicentennial. The trades parade will take place Thursday, October 1. The florists are preparing an immense float to represent the trade. Everyone within reach of this city will miss something if he is not here, as great preparations are going on to make it a grand success.

J. M. Young, of Windber, Pa., telephoned September 20 that the forest fire was within half a mile of the greenhouses.

H. L. Blind & Bros. have leased the large storeroom in the Empire building, corner of Fifth street and Liberty avenue, and began moving in at once. This is a handsome room, larger than the old one and giving much better chance for window display.

Chas. Koenig is completing two houses, each 30x100, which he will use for forcing lilies.

Visitors: S. D. Greene, of Bayersdorfer's, Philadelphia; E. J. Fancourt, of Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; Charles Peterson, East Liverpool, O.; W. A. Herbert, Wellsville, O.

Hoo-Hoo.

CHARLESTON, MASS.—It is announced that Herbert L. Wolf and Miss Rosetta Asing will be married October 7. Mr. Wolf was for fourteen years with J. W. Howard, but for the last two years has conducted a flower store for himself.

WORCESTER, MASS.—The Worcester County Horticultural Society had an especially good exhibition September 10. H. F. A. Lange exhibited Golden Glow chrysanthemums. George B. McWilliam, gardener for Mrs. John C. Whitin, had a splendid display of gloxinias.

Facts Worth Learning

LOOK, BROTHER MINE! LISTEN!

What GODFREY ASCHMANN, the Philadelphia Hustler, the great foreseer, has got to say. He never goes wrong.

HE PREDICTS GREAT PROSPERITY!

NOW BEFORE THE DOOR

You will sell everything you have at good prices. After a hot spell follows a cold one; after rain, sunshine; after a panic, money plentiful, and you have got a chance

TO FILL YOUR POCKETS IF YOU WISH TO DO SO.

ARE YOU PREPARED FOR THE RUSH?

Brother, think it over; it is high time. When will you start in? Now, of course. Waiting means suicide.

NOT ASLEEP.

We are well prepared to meet all demands. The Araucaria King means to sell his Araucarias, and the motto of the moveman means Keep a Moving. Eighteen years of experience of importing, growing, shipping and handling of Araucarias brings us in the foreground of any merchant in the business; so well known that any florist from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean can sing a song of Godfrey Aschmann's Araucarias.

CHEAPER THAN EVER—FERNS TO BEAT THE BAND.

Four houses full of choice Boston, Whitman and Scottii Ferns, 5, 5½, 6 and 7-in., all pot-grown, raised in snug houses which protect from stiff frosts; never were so fine as this year. Next on the program we carry a fine stock of choice Kentia Palms, Rubbers, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which stand a challenge with those of all the notable growers of America and Europe.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 tiers, 10 to 12 inches high, 40c; 5½-in. pots, 2 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 15 inches high, 50c; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 years old, 3, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 16, 18, 20 to 22 inches high, 60c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, 6-in. pots, 3 years old, 3 tiers, fine, beautiful plants, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, specimen plants; spring, 1907, importation; suitable for lawns or porches, 5 to 6 years old, 7-in. pots, 5 tiers, 25, 30, 35 to 40 inches high, same in width, beautiful plants, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 to $4.00 each.

Boston and Scottii ferns, 4-in., 20c; 5-in., 30c to 35c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in. pots, as big as a bushel basket, 75c to $1.00. Scottii, 8 to 9-in. pans, made-up of 3 plants, 75c to $1.00 per pan. Whitman, 4-in., 20c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c. Whitman, in 8-in. pans, three large plants in a pan, 75c. Whitman, in 9-in. pans, 3 large plants in a pan, $1.00. We have a big stock of these varieties and they are pot, not bench, grown. Amerpohl, 5-in., 30c, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5½ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 20 inches high, 35c to 40c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, a large one, about 40 inches high, in the center, surrounded by three smaller ones, $1.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 36 inches high, $2.00; specimen, 7-in., 40 to 50 inches high, $2.50 to $3.00; 6-in., 30 inches high, $1.50; 6-in., 25 inches high, $1.00; 6-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5½-in., 50c.

Cocos Weddelliana, bushy plants, 3-in., 15c, 18c and 20c; 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for Dishes, 2½-in., $1.00 per 100. A big stock, best assortment.

A Wonderful New Nephrolepis Nephrolepis Superbissima

Introduction of 1908

We desire to call attention to this new fern, which originated with us and which we are introducing this year. It is a very unique and distinct novelty—as distinct from Nephrolepis Piersoni and Piersoni elegantissima as they were from Bostoniensis. It is, in fact, a complete break. The fronds are very heavily imbricated, the pinnae overlapping, making the fronds very dense and compact.

It differs from the other Nephrolepis not only in form, but also in color, being a richer and darker green—entirely different from the yellowish green of all the other Nephrolepis. The plant is very sturdy in its habit, the fronds never breaking down.

While a photograph shows a similarity to its predecessors, it is absolutely distinct, not only in the formation of the fronds and color, but also in its habit and general characteristics. It makes a much more dwarf and compact growth, the fronds being very dense, firm and rigid, and having a great deal more substance, so that it will stand more knocking around than any other fern of this type.

It is a sterling novelty. Experts who have seen it consider it by far the best fern ever sent out. It is a plant that needs to be seen to have its great value and sterling qualities appreciated. It really is not in the same class with the other varieties.

It was awarded a First-class Certificate by the Royal Horticultural Society at Crystal Palace in London, November, 1907, the plants exhibited there having been shipped from New York two weeks before that time. After being exhibited in London, the same plants were shipped to Edinburgh, Scotland, where they were again awarded a First-class Certificate by the Scottish Horticultural Society. This will indicate the value of the plant as a novelty, and also demonstrates in a very conclusive manner its fine keeping and shipping qualities.

We have just begun shipping advance orders, and new orders can now be shipped immediately on receipt.

Fine, strong plants, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100. 4-in. pots, $7.00 per doz.; $50.00 per 100. 6-in. pots, $1.50 each; $15.00 per doz.

A NEW TUNICA.

Tunica Saxifraga rosea flore pleno is a dwarf-growing hardy perennial of recent introduction, useful in a variety of ways for decorative purposes. As a market plant, either in pots or clumps, it will probably become popular and it is a gem for rockeries and borders. The double pink flowers appear in May and keep up a succession of bloom until the autumn. The foliage is a bright green, resembling a saxifrage of the mossy section. It grows and flowers equally well in sunshine or shade, but does not like too much moisture; it stands the winter well. It was exhibited at the Ghent centennial and is sent out by the Royal Tottenham Nurseries, Dedemsvaart, Holland.

BEDDERS FOR DRY PLACES.

Plants that flourish and produce an uninterrupted succession of bloom during long periods of drought without artificial watering or assistance are extremely valuable, more especially in districts where the rainfall is small, or where considerable labor is involved in watering. Hot and dry positions, where the sun shines with all its strength during the greater part of the summer day, exist in most gardens, and may well be planted with the subjects under notice.

From time immemorial the antirrhinum has been known to excel in this direction. These plants have been prominent in the van of floral progress, and we now possess a large number of exquisite varieties. The rose-colored and pure white varieties are fine, and few plants surpass them for beautiful effects when employed for bedding purposes. Petunias, too, are superb dry weather plants, and flower with far greater freedom in a comparatively poor and dry soil than in heavily manured and moist ground; in fact, under the last-named conditions over-luxuriance is produced at the expense of the floral display. I have seen dry banks planted with petunias, with splendid results.

The same remarks apply to nasturtiums of all sorts, and how infinitely superior are the new and named kinds to the old varieties! Cloth of Gold is strikingly beautiful, with rich, golden foliage and scarlet flowers, which are thrown well above the leaves; Silver Queen has white and green foliage, and is a great beauty. The French marigolds must be included in this category, and the more refined varieties of comparatively recent introductions are fine garden plants, and lend considerable brilliance in late summer, and until cut down by frost. The bold and aggressive African marigolds seem incapable of withstanding a long and continued drought, but verbenas call for attention, and it is interesting to note that they have to a great extent regained their old popularity. Such beautiful varieties as Defiance and Miss Willmott have done much to bring this about, and surely we have few plants to surpass them as carpeting material, to say nothing of their value in pots, vases, hanging baskets, window-boxes, etc.

Zinnias behave splendidly under dry conditions after their roots have penetrated the soil deeply, but bold and showy as they are, they cannot lay claim to being artistic in any sense of the term. The portulacas are second to none for dry spots, and in my younger days, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, they were universally cultivated, the most exposed and dry positions being allotted

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Everybody has settled down to work after the summer vacations. Business has improved a little and with the increase of better stock every day we look for a decided increase in trade. Good asters are scarce; that is, large flowers and good stems, but the shorter ones are overplentiful. Considerable stock has been used for the store openings. All the large stores in the city have had more or less elaborate fall openings, and palms were much in demand. The palm question is a serious one, when the stock is to be loaned to the dry goods stores. The opening lasts for the whole week and this is almost sure death to the plants. Many protests are made every year by the florists, but every store had palms this year.

Various Notes.

At the last meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club more business was done than in a long time. A flower show was proposed and a committee appointed to prepare a program. The club looks to every florist to take an active part in this show and make it worth while. The aim of the show is not to put up handsome prizes and enter for competition, but to show the public what we have to offer. The idea is a good one and is bound to be successful.

George E. McClure recently had a narrow escape from a severe accident on his motorcycle. The front forks broke, but he was fortunate enough to come out with a few bruises. R. A. S.

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting September 17. The greater part of the time was consumed in routine business. Three new members were received—John Herne, H. A. Steekler and M. J. Gurtler, and four were dropped off the list for non-payment of dues. H. Papworth was appointed chairman of the committee of arrangement for the next flower show, in place of James Newsham, who resigned.

A few very complimentary remarks on the northern florists and on the Niagara convention were spoken by H. Papworth and Charles Eble, who came back a few days ago.

ana, from British Honduras, and Odonoglossum grande, from Guatemala, were exhibited by James Newsham. Considering the lateness of his importations, Mr. Newsham is well satisfied with his lot of orchids.

Various Notes.

J. Sieber has charge of Mrs. Rehm's place, at the corner of St. Charles and Napoleon avenues.

R. Eichling, at U. J. Virgin's, has taken a fancy to the growing of crotons. They are certainly a fine lot of plants, well adapted to our warm climate.

R. Chevalier, a large grower of mums, lost his entire crop by too much rain.

The weather continues favorable, and, no doubt, by November 1 we will be well supplied with good flowers. M. M. L.

BELOIT, WIS.—J. Rindfleisch, whose greenhouses are located on Fourth street, has opened a store at 514 East Grand avenue. Souvenirs of Killarney and Beauty roses were presented to the visitors on the day of the opening. The new store is tasteful and attractive in appearance. An addition has been built to the front and the interior has been handsomely decorated in green and white.

Greenhouse Heating.

RADIATION.

Kindly let me know if two 2-inch flows and four 2-inch returns will heat a greenhouse 16x40 feet? Do you recommend four 2-inch or two 3-inch returns under each bench? The house is to grow general stock in Ontario.

M. & V.

To maintain a temperature of 50 degrees with a boiler temperature of 180 degrees the house 16x40 should have at least nine 2-inch pipes. One of these can be arranged to act as a flow, or riser, and eight as returns or radiators.

I regret to say I can give you no general rule for the use of pipes of various sizes. Each house must be piped according to the crops to be grown and the heat and size of pipe to be used.

L. C. C.

IN MICHIGAN.

I have two greenhouses, connected, one 18x40, the other 20x40, three and one-half feet to the eaves, sashbars ten and one-half and twelve feet, respectively; glass gables to south. At present they are piped with twelve runs of 1-inch pipe in one and eight in the other. This is entirely inadequate for Michigan climate and I wish to repipe them. Can I put all the pipe they both now contain into the narrower one, in which I wish to grow principally carnations, and pipe the other with 2-inch pipe?

After studying various articles on heating in the REVIEW I have devised the following plan, but do not know whether the six 1-inch flow pipes will supply the fourteen returns in the other two coils, or not: In the 18-foot house six 1-inch flows under the west bench, six 1-inch returns under the center bench and eight 1-inch returns under the east

MOREHEAD MFG. CO., Detroit, Mich.

DEAR SIR:—If the Morehead Return Trap cost ten times what you ask for it, it would be cheap when time, labor and cost of repairs are considered, in comparison with the steam pump I had installed before getting your Trap. I cannot praise it too highly and I recommend it to everyone who talks steam. Yours, bench; in the 20-foot house one 2-inch flow and four 2-inch returns under each of the outside benches. By using this plan I can work in the fittings now in use. The pipes will all be under the benches and about level with the top of the boiler, which is an Ideal, Jr., No. 32. Will this boiler carry this amount of pipe? As near as I can learn, it is rated at about 500 feet. A. L. W.

The 18-foot house, in which you propose to use the 1-inch pipe, should have twenty-two lines of 1-inch pipe in order to provide a temperature of 50 degrees. Instead of using six of the 1-inch pipes as flows, use all the 1-inch pipes as returns and provide a 2-inch flow to supply the returns. In this case I would prefer to use an overhead flow in each house, carried from the boiler directly to the far end of the houses. A 2-inch riser will serve for each house. I would further suggest that if it is possible to exchange the 1-inch pipe for 1½-inch or 2-inch pipe, it will give you much better service. With your short risers the 1-inch pipe is not as objectionable as it would be in a larger house.

L. C. C.

AIR IN SYSTEM.

I have a range of greenhouses on a hillside. Two of them are heated by a Kroeschell boiler and hot water in 4-inch pipes. The upper house is 20x40 and is used for roses. The lower house is 36x50, used for carnations. The boiler is under the southeast corner of the lower house, seven feet lower than the upper one. From one of the outlets of the boiler I run a pipe up through the floor and by means of a tee heat the pipes under the south bench and run a flow across the lower house and up into the rose house. The pipes are all under the benches and consist of a flow and return across the ends of the houses, from which one flow and two returns run under the benches. The pipes slope one and one-half inches in ten feet. There are air cocks at the farther end. The water level in the expansion tank is four KROESCHELL BROS. CO., Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs: I wish to write you a few lines concerning your No. 2 boiler which we received last fall. Your boiler proved to be excellent in material and workmanship. It did the work very nicely last winter with a small amount of coal. Others used up more than a carload while we used only 15 tons all winter, including what we used in the dwelling. Every one in our neighborhood has got a Kroeschell boiler. As soon as the other greenhouse men saw it they took a liking to it and now they've all got one. We speak well of your boiler to all who see it. The Kroeschell is our favorite if we ever get another.

Yours Respectfully,

JOHN KOENIG, Box 88, Valley Crossing, O.

NOT CAST IRON—Has thin waterways. Heats quickly. It is the most efficient, safest and most economical boiler built. Very powerful. 15 sizes, heating from the smallest greenhouse up to 50,000 square feet of glass to 60 degrees, at 15 degrees below zero. Prices and catalogue on application.

feet above the heating pipes. This makes the tank about twelve feet or more above the top of the boiler. There seems to be no trouble with the circulation, but the upper room is slow to heat, and air accumulates in the pipes, so that it has to be let out two or three times a day. Where does the air come from and what is the remedy?

J. Y. L.

Your heating system appears to be well arranged, and the only modification I would suggest would be to run an independent flow pipe from the boiler for each house. Do not take off one riser for both houses. One other suggestion is to elevate the expansion tank so as to give a little more pressure in the upper house. If you can get eight or ten feet pressure in the upper house I do not think you will have so much trouble with air. The independent riser for each house and the increased pressure will, I believe, correct both troubles of which you complain.

GREENHOUSE ADJOINING STORE

Will you please advise me as to the best arrangement for pipes and benches in a new house which I am building, here in northern Indiana? The house is 28x50 and runs east and west. It is five feet high at the sides and twelve feet six inches from floor to ridge. I intend to grow smilax, asparagus and bedding stock—no carnations or roses. I propose to set the boiler in the basement of the store.

How many pipes, and of what size, would you advise placing on the side and end walls? No pipes will be needed on the north wall, as the brick store will form that. Under what benches would you place pipes, and how many?

D. B.

My idea of an arrangement for your house would be to place all the piping on the side walls except the main flow pipes, which I would place either under the ridge or parallel with the purlins. Two 2-inch flow pipes along the purlins, with five 2-inch pipes on the store wall and eight on the exposed side, will, I believe, give sufficient heat and be a satisfactory arrangement, with hot water. This will permit the use of solid beds, which I believe the best for these plants.

L. C. C.

OIL AS FUEL.

Which of the two is the cheaper for obtaining steam heat in a greenhouse—clean lump coal at 12 cents per bushel or fuel oil at 7 cents per gallon, taking into consideration time and labor? I have one house, 20x75 feet, and am erecting another of the same area. I heat with a tubular, return flue boiler. Here, in southeastern Iowa, I can obtain either coal or oil at any time. O. K. R. S.

I think the actual cost of heat will be a little greater with the oil, but when cost of firing and the removal of ashes is considered I believe that the oil will prove more economical. L. C. C.

HEAT FOR A LEAN-TO.

I have one greenhouse, 18x85 feet, and eleven feet high to the ridge. The side walls are three feet high, with no glass. There is glass in both ends. I want to build a lean-to, 6x60, at the west side of the house, without extra piping. The west side of the house, where the lean-to is to be added, is too hot. There are three 4-inch pipes on each side of the house. The boiler is rated at 3,200 feet. The west wall of the present house will be removed, to admit the heat into the lean-to, where I wish to maintain a temperature of 40 degrees in zero weather. I am located in western New York.

T. W.

If the house you now have is piped with only six lines of 4-inch pipe, I doubt if it will be safe to add the lean-to without increasing the piping. If there were eight lines of 4-inch pipe in the house, then I think the lean-to could be safely added. If you have only six pipes, I think you had better plan to install two lines of 4-inch pipe, to make it safe during severe weather. L. C. C.

DWELLING AND GREENHOUSE.

I have a greenhouse 28x92, running east and west, with a barn at the west end and a dwelling at the east end. The boiler is in the barn and I want to heat the dwelling by running a 2-inch flow through the greenhouse to connect with the radiators; also a 2-inch return back to the boiler. The expansion tank is in the barn and will be only six inches higher than the highest radiator in the dwelling. Will this work or must I raise the tank?

The greenhouse is piped with a 3-inch flow along the purlin from the boiler to the far end, where it branches and two 2-inch returns are carried under the bench along the north wall beside the flow and return for the dwelling, with three 2-inch returns under each of the next benches, and another branch through the office with four 2-inch returns under the south bench, all connecting into a 3-inch return near the boiler. The boiler is four feet below the lowest return. The expansion tank is fifteen feet above the boiler and connected with the 3-inch return at the boiler with a 1-inch pipe. This makes one 3-inch flow and twelve 2-inch returns for the greenhouse, besides the flow and return for the dwelling. What changes do you suggest? M. J. B.

I believe you will find it necessary to elevate the expansion tank. When the plant is cool the whole system should be full of water without forcing any into the expansion tank. I fear that when heat is put on, the tank will fill and overflow without forcing a good circulation in the house radiators. You might carry a pipe from the return end of the radiator to the attic of the house, and place the expansion tank there, or, if you have a heavy chimney, you might bracket the 15, with beds in the solid ground. I intend to heat them with steam, using 2-inch risers and 1 1/4-inch returns. How many risers do I need, and how many returns? As the weather here is very changeable, I want plenty of valves, with which to regulate the amount of radiation. How many valves are needed and where should they be placed? The lowest temperature in this part of West Virginia is about 10 degrees below zero.

C. R.

To maintain a satisfactory lettuce temperature, about 50 degrees, during severe weather, your houses should each be provided with a 3-inch flow under the ridge and eighteen 1 1/4-inch returns. The returns may be arranged on the outside walls and upon the purlin supports, or distributed uniformly over the surface of the bench and about eighteen or twenty inches above it. In either case it will be well to place valves at each end of at least six runs of pipe in each house.

HOUGHTON, MICH.

Houghton is to have another floral establishment. A. E. Lutey, until recently manager of the Lakeside Floral Co., of Houghton, Calumet and Chassell, announces that early next week he will open a flower store in the Young block, on Sheldon street. Mr. Lutey will be in charge, and on October 1 expects to open a branch office in Calumet.

Mr. Lutey will receive his flowers from Milwaukee. He has leased the Charles H. H. Johannsen greenhouses in that city, and has placed his brother, Henry Lutey, in charge. The latter was grower and manager at the Chassell greenhouses of the Lakeside company for a number of years. Flowers from Milwaukee will be received here every day, and the new concern will be in a position, by virtue of arrangements with a large commission house, to supply any flowers they do not grow themselves.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Business is nothing to brag about. One day it is pretty fair and the next there is nothing doing. There is still very little business, outside of funeral work, and, of course, the demand in that always comes in jerks.

While there is not much of a surplus of stock in any one line, still there is considerable waste, all things taken into consideration. Roses suffer the most, and their poor keeping quality has much to do with it. Carnations are in fair demand and the supply is increasing daily, but the quality does not show much improvement, and they keep so poorly that they have to be sold as soon as they arrive or it is all up with them. Asters are still in good supply, especially the white ones. The call has been principally for purple, because purple are scarce. Lilies of all kinds sell well and there is a good call for gladioli, with the crop fast coming to an end. Dahlias sell fairly well. Altogether, Beauties sell better than anything else, mainly because they are the best flowers on the market.

Mums are coming in and sell fairly well for so early in the season. They bring $3 to $4 per dozen, but were there more of them the price would soon drop. By the first of the month there will be mums for everyone and at a reasonable

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Society, held at the George & Allan greenhouses, September 19, was a decided success. There were nineteen members present, and the business was rushed through with an enthusiasm that prophesies the success that will be made of the meeting of the S. A. F. in 1909. Seven new members were taken in, as follows: R. D. Ruttle, Gus. Meier, Dan Carmichael, Wm. Sunderman, Gutz How, T. R. Miller, Willis Kennedy.

The picnic committee reported a surplus of $17.50, which was turned over to the treasurer.

The finance committee reported progress in the way of getting subscriptions for the entertainment of the S. A. F. Already we have quite a large sum subscribed.

Max Rudolph extended an invitation to the society to hold its next meeting at his greenhouses at College Hill. His invitation was accepted with thanks, and the meeting will probably be held on the second Saturday of next month. Mr. Rudolph has an ideal greenhouse plant and, outside of the interest in the society meeting, it will pay us all to look it over. He sells all the stock he grows, and then some, at his retail store at 11 West Twelfth street.

There were two out-of-town visitors at the meeting—S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Elverson, of New Brighton, Pa.

Business has been bad for some time, and shows no signs of marked improvement. Stock of all kinds is abundant, and hard to move at any price. Asters have been a glut on the market for a month and almost impossible to dispose of. Carnations seem to be coming earlier than last year. Though short in the stems, they look as if there will be some first-class flowers this winter. Roses are improving in quality, but until asters are gone will not be in much demand.

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Trade.

There was a marked improvement in last week's business over that of the week previous. A good demand for funeral work seems to be the cause for better business.

Carnations, which still seem a sort of novelty, are becoming more plentiful each day and the demand is strong. Enchantress, Lawson and red seem to be the most numerous, while white are very scarce. There is still a good supply of roses, but the market in its present condition does not nearly consume the supply. The farmers are still bringing a few asters into town on market days, but they are poor in quality. Longiflorums find eager buyers, and they are fine. Smilax and all decorative greens are selling fairly well.

The weather conditions are a little troublesome to the florists, as the days are warm and the temperature drops considerably toward morning, thus keeping them busy trying to keep the mildew out. The drought still continues, making it over six weeks since our last rain.

Various Notes.

Our dry goods and millinery stores are having their fall openings now, therefore the florists are making good use of their palms and decorative plants.

M. Anderson, the Arcade florist, has enlarged his store to twice its original size.

The Miami Floral Co. is doing a good business on field-grown carnation plants this season.

Louis Schellhaas, of Miamisburg, O., called in Dayton, September 21. He reports business in Miamisburg to be pretty good. R. A. B.

Are You Making Repairs?

To say the least it is a hard job to repair greenhouses. At the same time it costs money and cuts down the profits.

If you are "fixing up" the houses for winter you will want a few bars, some putty or fittings, and you will want these things in a hurry. Send us your order and we'll get it out without any delay.

We have in stock various lengths of sash bars and can ship small repair orders in a day or two. Such things as pipe carriers, purlin fittings, gutter hubs, putty bulbs, putty, glazing points, galvanized nails, etc., we have on hand at all times and can ship same day order reaches us, in nearly every case.

To cut down the repair bills, get the next greenhouse from us and put the cost of repairs in the bank.

MORE ABOUT

BENCH BUILDING

A CHEAP CEMENT BENCH.

I frequently see in the REVIEW something about cement benches and I would like to give my way of making them. I made my first one four years ago and find it all right. I am now making them all of cement as fast as the wood rots out.

The following is the cost of a bench 5x55: Blocks for drainage holes, 30 cents; lumber for leg molds, sides and bottom, $6.25. I used old rafters for supports to hold up the frame. Cement, two and three-quarters barrels, at $1.50 net, $4.13. Sand I hauled with greenhouse horse, and paid for the sand 50 cents. Total cost, $11.18.

I use only greenhouse hands, paying for no extra labor. I get my leg molds from dressed lumber, 1x4, cut it up in 2-foot lengths, nail it up and make a box 2x4. I use fivepenny nails and when I want to take the molds off I can easily draw the nails with a claw hammer, as they are not driven all the way up. I use a 6-inch dressed board on the outside and a 4 1/4-inch board on the inside, for the sides and ends, placing the boards one and one-quarter inches apart.

Make a miter box out of 6-inch board, to place the inch strips in. This holds twenty strips, 1x1 inch. Cut them up in blocks one and a quarter inches long. As you cut twenty at one sawing, it is soon done. Throw them in water and drive a fivepenny nail through the center while wet and they will not split. Dot these about on the floor of the bench form for drainage. Put on your cement and trowel it well to avoid cracks when set. Under glass it is well to wet it frequently until it sets well, to keep it from cracking.

Before putting on the cement and blocks, cover the boards with paper to keep the cement from running through the cracks of rough boards, and unroll chicken wire down the bench on top of the paper. Tack on the blocks and then cement. This gives a bench one and a quarter inches thick, which will hold a man after it sets.

When the boards come down they leave the blocks in the cement, the nails drawing out, or at least most of them. As the blocks are covered over with about an eighth of an inch of cement in order to trowel the cement easily, the blocks cannot be seen, but you can get under the bench and back the nails up. A very light tap will bring them up enough to show where the blocks are. Then take a piece of wood and a hammer and push them through. You can push them out with your finger if you will let them stay about ten days, but if you have more than one bench to make you cannot wait over four or five days, as you want all your blocks and lumber to go to the next bench. In the statement of the cost of my bench, there is $6.55 of the $11.18 that can be used for a dozen other benches.

To hold the inside board of the sides in place, let it rest on one of the 1 1/4-inch blocks, putting a small nail in the block, and let the board push against it when filled with cement. Tack a small strip across the top of the two boards, to hold them securely in place until your concrete has set.

Good cement benches can be made cheaper than wooden ones.

Make the cement as follows: One part cement; four parts good, clean, sharp sand. Turn four or five times before watering. Make it quite wet, as it will pack in the sides better. Be sure that the sides are well packed, or you will have cracks, holes, etc., in it. The sides of my benches show the grain and knots in the timber. Several people thought they were wood, they show so plainly.

I was in the cement business and had considerable experience before going into the greenhouses. I do not use any lumber when cement will answer. In my boiler room I put down a lot of old brickbats and slushed them over with very wet cement, mixed one to five, and have a good cement floor. My steps are made of old rocks, bats or anything I can get, and slushed over with cement. Trowel it off and it looks like solid cement and is just as good, if not better. My partition walls are made in the same way, with old bats, and are only four inches thick. In these one part cement and six parts sand are sufficient. Use good Portland cement in all.

GLADIOLI.

Will someone please tell me how to treat gladioli for winter blooming, how and when to plant them and how soon I can get them to bloom? S. N. M.

The early flowering sections of gladioli, such as G. Colvillei and G. nanus, can be placed in flats in late September or early October. Keep cold in a pit or frame until January. Then give a night temperature of 48 to 52 degrees. None of the gladioli like hard forcing. Flowers should be had on the G. Colvillei varieties late in March. They can be had even earlier, but we would prefer not to endeavor to rush them too much. By starting a few flats at intervals of ten to fourteen days, a long succession of flowers may be had.

G. Gandavensis varieties and others of the large-flowered, outdoor type cannot be planted before November. They do well planted in benches in four or five inches of soil. They are often dropped in among carnations, snapdragons and other crops. The night temperature should not exceed that given to carnations. Flowering will commence in March and a succession may be had until outdoor ones come in season. C. W.

PROPAGATING GERANIUMS.

One Cause of Failure.

There must have been something radically wrong in the treatment given geranium cuttings if forty or fifty per cent failed to survive the rooting process, no matter by which method the work was attempted, if the cuttings were of normal condition when inserted. After twenty-five years' experience in rooting large numbers of geranium cuttings by means of various methods of treatment, I have found the only instances of failure to be due altogether to crowding after growth commenced. This can easily be avoided if it is possible and practicable to pot the plants whenever they are sufficiently rooted, but it happens with many growers not to be convenient to pot them in time to avoid this.

There are at least three methods more or less generally practiced in the propagation of geraniums, and it may be said that each one of the three has something to commend it, by reason of its being best suited to the circumstances and conditions under which the work has to be carried on. The grower who roots geraniums in quantity seldom confines himself to one method.

Rooting in Shallow Flats.

Although the method of placing the cuttings in moderately shallow flats is not the most expeditious by any means, yet I have found that I could obtain fully as good results from this method of rooting as I could from that of placing the cuttings in sand in a bench in a greenhouse. For the last five or six years I have abandoned the practice of using sand exclusively for the filling of the flats, and instead I put about three-quarters of an inch of loam or leaf-mold screenings in the bottom of each box and then fill up to within an inch of the top with soil composed mainly of leaf-mold, with just a little sand thrown in. This soil should be made firm and then at least half an inch of clean sand should be put on for a top covering, before the cuttings are inserted.

The reason why I have decided that soil is better, in the proportion stated, than sand, is that while the cuttings root as quickly and as well in the soil as in the sand, they also make more roots, which work into the soil. And the soil not only sustains the plants, but adheres to their roots while being removed for potting, to such an extent that the plants receive no check whatever as a result of the operation.

Selecting the Cuttings.

Success in the rooting of geraniums depends considerably on the condition of the plants from which the cuttings are taken. If the plants are soft and the growth long-jointed or weak, there is but little hope of success in their propagation, and for that reason cuttings, when possible, should be taken from plants grown in full sunlight, indoors or out, with a preference for short-jointed wood.

After the cuttings are dibbled into a flat the soil should receive a good watering. If the work is done in September, in most sections of the country the flats should be placed outdoors, and if there is need of protection from high winds, such protection can easily be given by the erection of an enclosure composed of one or two 12-inch boards. Or, still better, they may be placed in open frames, where further protection can the more easily be given to them if a necessity arises for such before it becomes advisable to remove them to more permanent quarters.

Another point in favor of the flat method of rooting geraniums is, that in case of space not being available for their continuous occupancy, they are easily moved from one place to another.

Rooting in a Greenhouse Bench.

There is no doubt but that the quickest method of propagating geraniums is that of placing the cuttings, just as Mr. Muchow says, in clean sand in a green-

ROOTING GERANIUM CUTTINGS.

I was interested in the several letters in recent issues of the REVIEW, on rooting geranium cuttings. As practically every florist and gardener handles more or less of these plants, the best method of propagation is certainly an important question.

I have always found that the cuttings from plants grown under glass, being less sappy, rooted with a smaller percentage of loss than those taken from outdoor plants. A great many growers, even in our northern states, err in propagating too early. Frost sufficiently severe to kill geraniums will sometimes occur in Massachusetts by the third week in September. This accounts somewhat for the desire to get the cuttings in early in that month, but if sure frost would hold off until October 1, I am positive there would be a far smaller ratio of loss from cuttings taken then than a month earlier.

It is a good plan to lay the cuttings in the sun for a few hours after making them, in order to draw some of the sap out of them. If placed in well drained pans or flats of sharp sand and stood on a shelf in full sunshine, there should be no trouble in rooting eighty to eighty-five per cent of the cuttings. I believe in a soaking watering and then tolerable dryness at the root the rest of the winter until the time comes to pot them along. When taken from flats of Geranium cuttings need no shade at any time. In winter and spring I have found they root better in sandy loam, in small pots, rather than in pure sand, and some bottom heat being at command, not over five per cent should fail, while the loss on the more succulent outdoor cuttings will be somewhat greater. If growers would only propagate later, dry their cuttings before inserting them, and keep under glass all the time, there would be less failures to record.

W. N. CRAIG.

ROOTING GERANIUMS.

I should like to give my way of rooting geraniums, though it may not be much different from that of most others.

I put all my cuttings in together, whether grown inside or out, in three inches of sand. I water them well and give them no shade. Later, if the sand gets too dry, I give them a good soaking, which is usually enough till they come out, when I get fully ninety-five per cent.

Of course, they will not all be rooted at the same time, owing to a difference in the condition of the wood, some cuttings being softer than others, but they all get potted and the unrooted ones will finish in the pots. I do not have much success if I put them in pots first, but lose many, mostly through too much moisture, I think.

I use the same sand over and over again. By being careful to keep all decaying matter, such as dead leaves, etc., off the bench, I have no trouble. I have used the same sand for three years and saw no difference in results when it was changed. After the season is over, I chop the sand over several times and dry it out well, and, while it may not be steam heated after the new fashion, it gives satisfaction.

ELEGANTISSIMA COMPACTA.

It is certainly a barren year when the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., does not have a new fern to offer. Since the advent of Piersoni they have been busy raising new variations of the ever-popular nephrolepis. This year it is Superbissima which is being distributed, and it is curious to note that this sort received a more favorable reception in England when exhibited there as a novelty than it did in this country, although it must not be inferred that it is not well thought of here. The Royal Horticultural Society of England gave it its first-class certificate.

For next year the Pierson Co. has another novelty in the Nephrolepis Elegantissima compacta. The name tells the whole story, except that Mr. Pierson believes that, considering commercial possibilities, this fern is the best one yet raised on their place. It stands in the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii stands to Boston. The plant throws a great many more crowns than Elegantissima and forms an exceptionally bushy, round, compact and symmetrical plant. They have devoted more than two years to working up stock and have plants in all the way from 2¼-inch to 10-inch pots, all of which retain the habit as shown in the accompanying illustration.

UTICA, N. Y.—In fulfillment of his promise to the children of the Mandeville Street School, F. J. Baker recently gave prizes of Boston ferns to the two pupils who grew the best nasturtiums.

house bench, where there is plenty of light and the bench is near the glass. And if it is possible to pot up the plants whenever they are fairly well rooted, good plants, without many fatalities, will result. If, on the contrary, the plants are allowed to remain in the sand very long after they are rooted, the results are invariably many fatalities from damping and crowding.

The most expensive, but withal the method by which the most perfect plants can be obtained, is that of placing each cutting in a small pot filled with sandy soil, with a top covering of clean, sharp sand.

sand, the cuttings will be found to have made a perfect network of fibrous roots, and when potted off in a warm, genial temperature, these soon make fine plants. I disapprove of standing the cuttings outdoors, not because of any fear of injury from sun or wind, but from dampness, especially in the form of drenching rains. A dry house is the ideal location for these cuttings, and they only require sufficient moisture at the root to prevent them from shriveling. Even in the case of M. M. L., I should say that he could get better results by placing his cuttings under glass towards the end of October, rather than out of doors.

EXHIBITION CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

At the present time there is such a difference between the stock produced by some of the most prominent eastern growers for exhibition and the average stock as grown for market, that the accompanying picture may be interesting to many of the readers of these notes. The illustration shows a house of chrysanthemums grown by Thomas Proctor, superintendent for R. W. Patterson, of Lenox, Mass. From this house, barring accidents, will come, as usual, many first prize exhibits.

The plants are propagated in January and February and grown right along in pots all the time, many of them being at present eight feet high and growing in 8-inch pots. It will be noticed that the foliage is still perfect, in many cases reaching to the pots. The plants, being grown continuously in pots, are absolutely under the control of the grower, and feeding can be done much more heavily in such case, with safety.

As compared with the average stock, which is propagated in April or May and planted in June, the advantage is all with the earlier rooted stock, providing it is grown without any check, as the longer season of growth means better ripened wood and larger, heavier flowers.

I know that many growers cannot afford the time or the house to grow exhibition flowers by this method, and that is one reason why many fine varieties are turned down by the commercial grower. If a variety will not succeed under the hurry-up, plant-in-July-and-cut-in-October method, it is forthwith condemned and the disseminator more or less profanely sent to perdition. The passing years will likely witness still greater differences between the stock grown for exhibition and the stock as grown for market.

EARLY VARIETIES.

Commercial Sorts.

Regular shipments of Monrovia and Golden Glow are now being sent to market and, while the price is not so good as last year at this date, still it is not so bad as it might be.

Golden Glow is a neater, better flower than Monrovia and is satisfactory as an early yellow. I think that it will largely take the place of Monrovia another year, because, while the foliage is smaller, it permits of closer planting and will turn in more money per square foot on that account.

Golden Glow seems to have made good all over the country. Many growers got it in during August and early September, but our market (New York) does not seem to need any quantity till the last week in September, as there is little need for mums while the flood of asters is at its height.

Montmort is also coming in, but it is by no means ideal in color and an early pink that would travel with Golden Glow would be appreciated.

Polly Rose, Pacific and Roserie will be ready in a week, but, while they fill in a break, they could easily be improved on.

October Frost is just about ready and is the earliest in white that shapes up right. It is much longer-jointed with me than Polly Rose and consequently makes a nice stem. Polly Rose, with most of us, does not make nearly stem enough to show the flower up properly.

For Exhibition.

Exhibition varieties are coming along rapidly, most of the kinds already showing color. If buds are any indication of the coming events, we are in for a record year, for never did I see such an even lot of buds as is showing at the present time.

Last year's novelties are good, Mrs. Norman Davis and Mary Mason being the most promising so far, with Mrs. J. P. Neil, Grace Whitney and Mrs. J. Sinnott close behind. Mary Donellan and W. M. Moir are showing more neck than they did last year, but it is early yet to make predictions.

The novelties coming along of the Wells-Pockett strain show the same heavy foliage and stem and dwarf habit that has characterized these kinds for years past.

No less than forty new Australian seedlings that I have on trial have magnificent foliage and buds and are less than three feet in height. Of the named kinds, C. H. Totty, Mrs. C. H. Totty, Pockett's Surprise, Rose Pockett and Exhibition Mums Grown by Thomas Proctor, Lenox, Mass.

Leslie Morrison are all superb in their present condition, and I look to see Wells carry off fresh laurels with these kinds.

A GOOD PLACE FOR PHLOX.

A garden wall, behind which soil is banked up to within a few inches of the coping, is covered with Crimson Rambler and several varieties of pink rambler roses. These roses, while they were in bloom, made a glorious picture. But from the time the blooms faded, the wall and its immediate vicinity would have looked dull enough, were it not that someone had the forethought to plant behind the wall, and close up to the roses, hardy phlox in colors of red and pink, which have bloomed continuously and profusely from the advent of the roses until the present time.

The effect produced, with what at a distance seems like trusses of flowers borne on the young growth of the roses, is pleasing and effective. M.

SUGGESTIONS FOR WINDOWS.

Contrasting Material for Backgrounds.

Many times a goodly quantity of flowers or plants is undeveloped as an attractive display on account of lack of good contrasting material for background; for instance, a group of fancy varieties of ferns is set in a window on a background of green sheet moss. There is certainly nothing inharmonious about the green of the moss and the green of the ferns; in fact, it is a soft color setting, but it does not develop the fine coloring in the ferns as a contrasting color might. They should be thrown out in strong relief to be well exhibited. But since potted plants are considered rather destructive of fine background material, what kind of a ground would be practical and still serve the purpose artistically? Well, perhaps insufficient care has been used in protecting the pots against leakage. Saucers are not waterproof, for, being porous, damp spots will be found under them, even if they do not overflow. Jardinieres or tin-lined baskets of a quiet color should always be used, for fine display work, anyhow. If these are kept perfectly clean inside and out they could be used on the finest kind of background without fear of injuring it. Carelessness in allowing mold and old foliage to accumulate in plant receptacles is responsible for more damage than anything else in this line. Ferns and palms should not be allowed to stand in water which has accumulated as waste after watering.

But to the background question again:

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

JUST WHY.

With a firm tread and a masterful air, the lady strode into the florist's shop. Her choice fell on a remarkable green palm in an ornamental pot.

"Will it grow well in the sunshine?" she inquired of the shop assistant, with a sharp glance from her eagle eye.

"Yes, madam," was the courteous response.

"Don't say it will, if it won't!" snapped she amiably. "If it does well in the sun, will the shade hurt it?"

"Oh, no, madam!"

"What!" she exclaimed with a triumphant, now-I've-caught-you air. "You tell me it will thrive equally well in sun or shade? Young man, you don't know your business! Fetch your master! Fetch your master!"

The owner of the establishment was instantly summoned. Even he quailed before her; but, for all that, he backed up his employee's statements.

"Then it's a really remarkable and accommodating plant!" she commented, waxing sarcastic. "My good man, it's both ridiculous and unnatural!"

"That's just it," interrupted the floral expert. "It's an artificial plant."

—Stray Stories.

THE CAPTAIN'S ARCH.

At Lowell, Mass., the captain of police died not long ago and his popularity in the department made a call for a funeral design which gave to Whittet & Co. their opportunity to do something out of the ordinary. The result is shown in the accompanying illustration. The design was an arch four feet high on a base five feet long. Beneath the arch rested a closed book twenty-four inches square. At the top of the arch, on a bed of white asters and surrounded by light-colored gladioli, were the words "Our Captain." The top of the book was made solid with white asters, while the edges were outlined in bright pink asters. On the book was the inscription, "1880—Police Department—1908." All the lettering was with the purple Koral script.

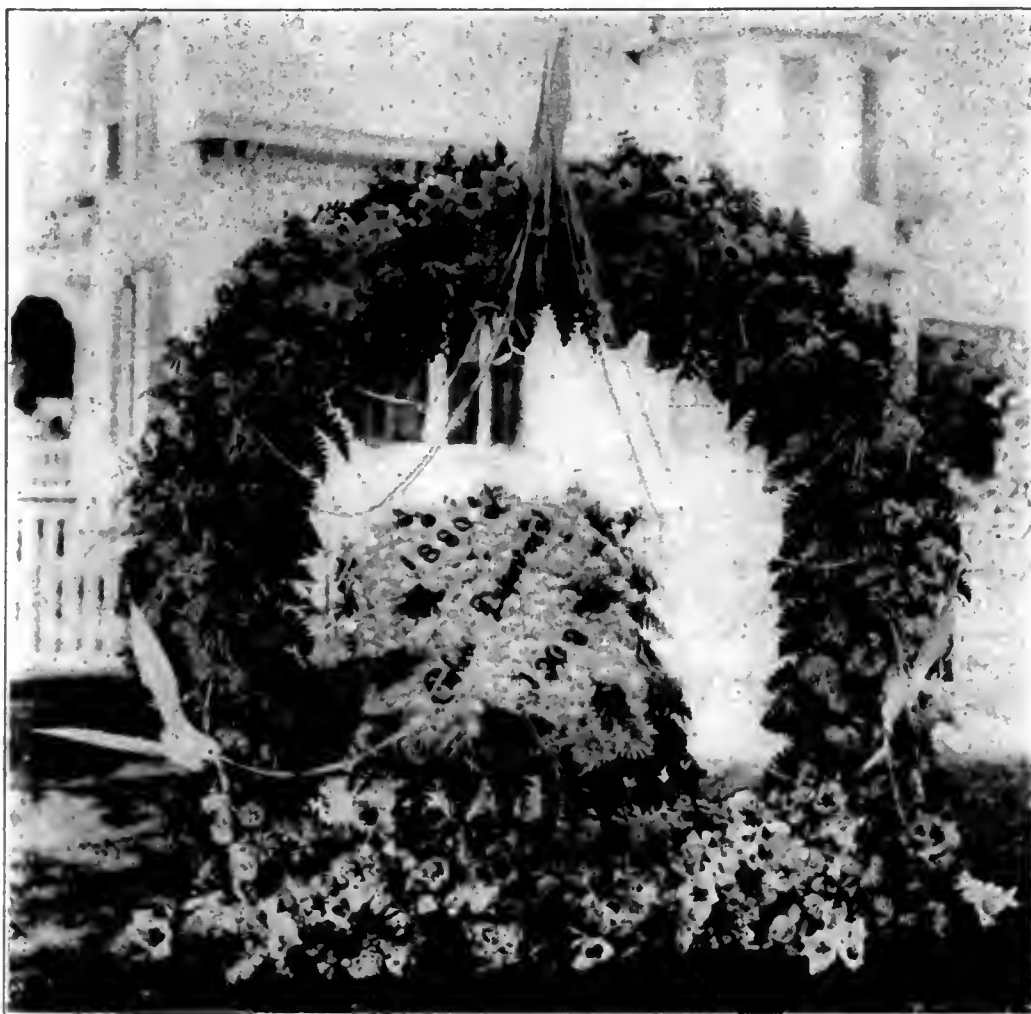

The arch was made of white and lavender asters, with Japanese lilies, Maid and Bride roses and candytuft. The base was of white asters and light colored gladioli with Bride roses. Adiantum was used throughout the design. At the top of the arch rested a white dove with upraised wings. There also was a dove on each side of the arch near the base, and running from the upper one to those on the sides were numerous strands and bows of narrow white and lavender baby ribbon.

Whittet & Co. received many compliments on the way they executed this order. The piece stood in the office of the police department during the day and at the funeral was the most conspicuous of a large floral display.

SPRAY OF ORCHIDS.

Purple and white are the conventional colors for gifts for the departed. The spray of orchids illustrated shows a combination of these two colors, in cattleyas, with the pure white of the gardenias

The Captain's Arch.

The green fern exhibit needs some kind of a brilliant color to bring out the coloring and form of the plants. Any one of the clear scarlet pinks, light lavenders, or yellows, or even a rich red, would be especially good, and it would be difficult to find a background material in the colors outside of fabrics. Cheese-cloth with a veil of chiffon, as suggested in a former chapter, is inexpensive and appropriate. In laying the background, put on several layers of newspaper or coarse, heavy paper and make it thick enough so that the plants will sink when set upon it. In laying the fabric background avoid the jewelers' and department store style of choppy puffs. Make a large wave or lay on plain. If the fabric background is not practical, use the moss and scatter a few full-blown and otherwise useless pink or red roses on the moss and you will be surprised how the little touches of color will develop the green of the foliage.

Avoid Discordant Colors.

Just what background colors, shades and tints to use harmoniously with both the predominating color and also the subordinate colors of the special design plan is sometimes puzzling. In a window there must be not only a desire to avoid discord in the coloring, but to make every scrap of color contribute its full share to the setting of the design. To accomplish this, a little review of the principles laid down previously will help. First, in getting up a color scheme, do not use two equally strong colors together; for example, brilliant red and a lively orange. You may have American Beauty phlox on hand and you may have African marigolds. Either one of these colors is an excellent basis or starter for a color plan, but it must rule supreme during its time. Any color used in conjunction with it must not only be inferior in quantity but also in color strength; that is, weaker, not brilliant, like the principal color. Very dark shades or very light tints must be used, except where a graded shading is intended.

I will pause a minute to remark on this latter exception. When so doing, procure the next lighter and then the next lighter, and so on down to white, and beginning from the center up—that is, the original color—grade up to the next darker, as far as the variety will admit. In this kind of an arrangement the colors should be placed to show the gradation, and not mixed indiscriminately.

Choice is Offered.

Returning to the first selection of a color scheme, that of employing one predominant color, for instance, the marigold, here are a number of color tints which might be used in combination: white phlox, white hydrangea, forget-me-nots, white roses, white carnations, light lemon-colored marigolds, lavender, white, cream, or light salmon pink sweet peas, auratum lilies, double white centaurea, alyssum, white candytuft and others of these colors and tints on a background of green. With the American Beauty phlox plan you can use American Beauty roses, dark rich crimson phlox, speciosum lilies of any variety, lighter tints of the crimson pinks in the phlox, avoiding the salmon pinks, any of which should be employed in much smaller quantities than the basic color.

Use the flowers of which you have the largest quantity for the principal feature, and you can work in a number of scraps of other things as helpers to complete the plan. This not only shows off the principal color and flower, but also helps to sell off the left-overs. Withal, it is excellent practice in coloring, and if well arranged will proclaim that the decorator is an authority on color, a good reputation to bear among the cultured people who form our principal patronage.

In using the American Beauty color plan, a background of green, not too light, would probably be the most widely practical. With violets try a warm yellow with a suspicion of red. American Beauties and violets are frequently combined, but not by those with the most discriminating taste. Occasionally a crimson pink is to be found which harmonizes with the American Beauty at its best and darkest red.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

FALL PLANTING.

Pretty nearly every florist who does outdoor work has all he can do in the brief spring season, but in autumn is able to take good care of many more orders than he receives. This is largely due to a lack of knowledge on the part of the public, for no great proportion of the people appreciate that a great deal of planting is better done in fall than in spring. There also is to be overcome the general disposition to put off until tomorrow those things which do not require to be done today. Ordering plants is one of the things that can wait.

Every man who plants owes it to the profession to do his part toward spreading the news that fall is the best time to plant hardy stock.

Because the rush of spring work usually taxes every resource, the opportunity is not great to increase the business with profit—in autumn it pays to push; there's profit in every extra dollar. It pays to advertise for orders for autumn planting. Pretty nearly every florist nowadays handles hardy stock.

The George Wittbold Co., Chicago, does an enormous business in planting, but goes out for more in fall. The accompanying illustration shows a folder recently mailed to all former customers and to a large list of prospective patrons. The printing was in two colors, to reproduce autumn tints, and the circular could not help but fix the reader's mind on the subject of "Planting Now—for Spring." In order to save cost of envelopes, the circular was folded in such a way that the opposite edges tucked together and the address and stamp were placed directly on the back of the circular, where the smaller illustration was printed. The circular was designed and printed by C. E. Richardson, 203 Marquette building, Chicago, who makes a specialty of this class of work.

PHLOX AND OTHER PERENNIALS.

Will you be kind enough to give me some information on the propagation of hardy phlox, pinks, Shasta daisies and hardy mums, here in Colorado? I should like to grow some in coldframes, so as to have 3-inch pot plants by the early part of April. When ought the stock to be potted from which the cuttings are to be taken?

Can Shastas be started early in coldframes, so as to have blooms for Decoration day? If so, when should they be potted? W. G. S.

The influences of Colorado weather on vegetation in general are so adversely different from that of the more genial conditions of the eastern states, that in the consideration of artificial propagation of phlox, and other perennials of a kindred nature, it becomes imperative that we adopt a more judicious procedure in regard to shade, moisture, ventilation and other environments necessary to successful results.

The paniculata family of phlox are easily multiplied by divisions of stools, cuttings from outdoor growth, or, better, by bringing the clumps into the cold greenhouse and taking the young growth from them. Layering the summer growth of scarce or desirable kinds is occasionally resorted to, and in some instances root cuttings are taken from varieties that are strong in root action.

Perhaps the most prolific way of increasing stock and raising new varieties is by sowing the seed every year, but the best and most practical method, in my estimation, is the division of clumps. In this procedure every eye or stem means a new plant, and from this character of growth or stock quicker results are attained. After the flowering wood is somewhat ripened, in the late fall, is a good time to dig up the clumps and begin the operation of cutting or tearing apart. The young division can be either planted in shallow flats for a few months and then potted up into 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, or they can be at once put into small pots, according to size or strength of roots, and grown along in the cool greenhouse until early spring, when they can be hardened off in coldframes. Propagating from cuttings is a simple and effectual way of increasing stock, providing the facilities are anywhere nearly correct for doing so. A cool and partially shaded location, where the air will not directly strike the cuttings before they are rooted, will be suitable for the operation, and a temperature of 50 degrees in the sand will bring better results, although it may take a longer time to do so, than if forced in a higher temperature.

To obtain good wood for this line of propagation, the old clumps should be divided into smaller particles and planted in flats or on the greenhouse bench, and carried in a healthy growing temperature of from 45 to 55 degrees. As the new growth advances into a partially firm wood, the cuttings can be taken off and put into the sand. Make the cutting well down near the base, where the growth is most firm but not too hard, and a quick callus will follow. As the cuttings form roots, pot up into small pots and shift into larger ones as it becomes necessary, and by springtime a summer blooming plant will be developed. It is necessary to keep the young plant from exposure to frost until it has developed considerable root action, or partially filled the pot with roots.

The propagation of Chrysanthemum maximum and all its species is somewhat similar to that of the phlox. Suffice it to remark, that while all stooling perennials similar in nature to those herein referred to can be readily propagated as described, they must not be hurried along in a temperature suitable to soft-wooded bedding plants.

Chrysanthemum Indicum, C. Sinense and others of the primitive type are partially hardy in Colorado, but only so under the most favorable conditions of aspect and protection. The improved Japanese types do not succeed to any degree outdoors. All varieties are best propagated from the suckers or young growths that spring up from the ground. Late winter to spring is the best time to take the cuttings.

To bloom the Shasta daisy in the spring in coldframes, it is necessary to get the plants well established in their permanent quarters quite early in the fall and to give them vigilant care during the unseasonable and trying period of our winter months in Colorado.

Carnations

OUTDOORS IN COLORADO.

There is always much howling during what we, in the mountains, speaking of the game laws, call our "closed season" for carnations, when they are not to be had. I have seen the suggestion that outdoor carnations be brought into bloom to fill this vacuum. Can you tell me how this is done? How are plants propagated to get them to bloom outdoors at this time of the year? Your paper is invaluable. M. E.

Outdoor carnation culture for summer bloom has never proven profitable in Colorado. In this dry and absorbent atmosphere half the growing season is occupied in the efforts of the plant to get a foothold in the soil; consequently the season, which is climatically short in growing period, is almost past before wood of a productive character is developed, and at this stage of the plant most of the commercial growers who still practice this system, begin transferring into the greenhouses. Most of this work is done by the first part of September, as after that date frost is uncertain and, although the best wood is made after that date, none of it is considered equal for producing good flowers to the wood made in the greenhouse.

As this experience is based on practical work and observation—at an altitude of 5,000 to 7,000 feet during the last quarter of a century, it would seem totally impractical to attempt the culture of carnations out of doors in the more mountainous regions, where the seasons of growth are naturally shorter.

To overcome or partially relieve this shortage in the summer months I would strongly recommend the planting up of the carnation houses as early as possible in spring, with plants propagated in the fall and grown on in pots or on benches. Under the influences of liberal ventilation and a natural temperature the plants may be induced to produce a partial crop in summer, which, if they do not, will not in any manner affect their autumn and winter usefulness, if treated as recommended herein. JOHN BERRY.

LEAF SPOT.

I enclose herewith some carnation leaves. Please state, if you can, what is wrong with them. First, small, black spots appear, not larger than pin heads; then the leaves dry up. I have had all picked off by hand and have destroyed the plants. They have been benched about three weeks. T. J. W.

The leaves you forwarded are affected with the common leaf spot. This is a fungous disease and, if taken in hand early, will not prove very serious, but if left to go unchecked it will do immense harm under conditions which are favorable to its development. The chief of these conditions is a close, humid atmosphere. That is why this disease usually makes its appearance soon after the plants are housed and while the plants are constantly kept moist overhead and the atmosphere kept heavily charged with moisture, to prevent wilting. You will also find this disease more frequently in cases where heavy shading is practiced. So you can readily see what the nature of the remedy must be—just the opposite of the conditions you maintained while the plants were reestablishing themselves.

You did right in picking off all the affected leaves; continue doing it. Dust the plants with slaked lime and sulphur in equal portions. Do not spray overhead any more than is absolutely necessary until the trouble disappears. If any shade remains on your glass, remove it entirely. When you fire, paint one of the steam pipes with sulphur and lime, made into a thin paste by adding water. Grape dust is a splendid article to dust the plants with, to keep down all such diseases. Bordeaux mixture is splendid, too. A. F. J. B.

PFEIFFER'S CARNATION PATCH.

Charles Pfeiffer is a successful carnation grower at Fort Thomas, Ky., where there is a colony of prosperous florists. The accompanying illustration shows one corner of his field of carnation plants and gives a good idea of his surroundings. He had 28,000 carnation plants in this patch before he began benching his own stock.

SWEET PEAS.

I would like to know something about sweet peas. In the issue of September 17, under Seasonable Suggestions, you say sweet peas should be planted two or three inches apart. Does this mean both ways, and what is the best support for sweet peas? C. P.

Sweet peas under glass should be grown two to three inches apart in the rows. The rows should contain only a single line of plants. If the plants can be sown in line with the supports of the house, soft brown or white twine can be stretched between these and makes the best possible support for the plants. A stout wire can be run near the ground and another one at any desired height. To run upright strings to this is decidedly preferable to wire netting or brush of any kind. It will be necessary to go over the plants every few days with soft twine and draw them towards the supports. If you cannot run your plants in line with house supports, you can erect some temporary ones at intervals to answer the same purpose.

Because the rush of spring work usually taxes every resource, the opportunity is not great to increase the business with profit— in autumn it pays to push; there's profit in every extra dollar. It pays to advertise for orders for autumn planting. Pretty nearly every florist nowadays handles hardy stock.

The George Wittbold Co., Chicago, does an enormous business in planting, but goes out for more in fall. The accompanying illustration shows a folder recently mailed to all former customers and to a large list of prospective patrons. The printing was in two colors, to reproduce autumn tints, and the circular could not help but fix the reader's mind on the subject of "Planting Now—for Spring." In order to save cost of envelopes, the circular was folded in such a way that the opposite edges tucked together and the address and stamp were placed directly on the back of the circular, where the smaller illustration was printed. The circular was designed and printed by C. E. Richardson, 203 Marquette building, Chicago, who makes a specialty of this class of work.

PHLOX AND OTHER PERENNIALS.

Will you be kind enough to give me some information on the propagation of hardy phlox, pinks, Shasta daisies and hardy mums, here in Colorado? I should like to grow some in coldframes, so as to have 3-inch pot plants by the early part of April. When ought the stock to be potted from which the cuttings are to be taken?

Can Shastas be started early in coldframes, so as to have blooms for Decoration day? If so, when should they be potted?

W. G. S.

The influences of Colorado weather on vegetation in general are so adversely different from that of the more genial conditions of the eastern states, that in the consideration of artificial propagation of phlox, and other perennials of a kindred nature, it becomes imperative that we adopt a more judicious procedure in regard to shade, moisture, ventilation and other environments necessary to successful results.

The paniculata family of phlox are easily multiplied by divisions of stools, cuttings from outdoor growth, or, better, by bringing the clumps into the cold greenhouse and taking the young growth from them. Layering the summer growth of scarce or desirable kinds is occasionally resorted to, and in some instances root cuttings are taken from varieties that are strong in root action.

Perhaps the most prolific way of increasing stock and raising new varieties is by sowing the seed every year, but the best and most practical method, in my estimation, is the division of clumps. In this procedure every eye or stem means a new plant, and from this character of growth or stock quicker results are attained. After the flowering wood is somewhat ripened, in the late fall, is a good time to dig up the clumps and begin the operation of cutting or tearing apart. The young division can be either planted in shallow flats for a few months and then potted up into 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, or they can be at once put into small pots, according to size or strength of roots, and grown along in the cool greenhouse until early spring, when they can be hardened off in coldframes.

Propagating from cuttings is a simple and effectual way of increasing stock, providing the facilities are anywhere nearly correct for doing so. A cool and partially shaded location, where the air will not directly strike the cuttings before they are rooted, will be suitable for the operation, and a temperature of 50 degrees in the sand will bring better results, although it may take a longer time to do so, than if forced in a higher temperature.

To obtain good wood for this line of propagation, the old clumps should be divided into smaller particles and planted in flats or on the greenhouse bench, and carried in a healthy growing temperature of from 45 to 55 degrees. As the new growth advances into a partially firm wood, the cuttings can be taken off and put into the sand. Make the cutting well down near the base, where the growth is most firm but not too hard, and a quick callus will follow. As the cuttings form roots, pot up into small pots and shift into larger ones as it becomes necessary, and by springtime a summer blooming plant will be developed. It is necessary to keep the young plant from exposure to frost until it has developed considerable root action, or partially filled the pot with roots.

The propagation of Chrysanthemum maximum and all its species is somewhat similar to that of the phlox. Suffice it to remark, that while all stooling perennials similar in nature to those herein referred to can be readily propagated as described, they must not be hurried along in a temperature suitable to soft-wooded bedding plants.

Chrysanthemum indicum, C. sinense and others of the primitive type are partially hardy in Colorado, but only so under the most favorable conditions of aspect and protection. The improved Japanese types do not succeed to any degree outdoors. All varieties are best propagated from the suckers or young growths that spring up from the ground. Late winter to spring is the best time to take the cuttings.

To bloom the Shasta daisy in the spring in coldframes, it is necessary to get the plants well established in their permanent quarters quite early in the fall and to give them vigilant care during the unseasonable and trying period of our winter months in Colorado.

ORCHIDS

USEFUL SUMMER CATTLEYAS.

Cattleya Gigas.

Among summer cattleyas the largest and most showy variety is C. gigas, which is a native of New Granada. The usual flowering period is from May to July, although there is also an autumn flowering form, which is useful in October and November. C. gigas requires the warm end of the cattleya house and, to insure its blooming freely, the pots or pans in which the plants are growing should be hung well up to the light. Excellent bulbs will be made, even if the receptacles are a considerable distance from the glass, but these will never flower satisfactorily. The best specimens we have seen are kept close to the ridge of the house and grown in large baskets.

For a potting medium Osmunda fiber cannot be excelled. After blooming, the plants should be overhauled and kept on the dry side until growths start up again. At this time they should also have the coolest end of the house.

As many as ten flowers have been produced on a single sheath of C. gigas by William Duckham, of Madison, N. J., a successful grower of this cattleya. Edgar J. Knight, at Hackensack, N. J., has probably the finest lot of this species in the country. He has grown nine flowers to the sheath, and Clement Moore's collection, of which he has charge, contains some fine types of this cattleya. While C. gigas has large and showy flowers, they lack the texture of most of the other cattleyas and, if not well shaded when in bloom, are easily sunburnt.

The plant represented in our illustration is flowering in the collection of L. R. Peck, West Barrington, R. I., where George Farquhar has charge. It was one of a new importation received a year ago from Carrillo & Baldwin and carries twenty-seven flowers. Mr. Farquhar has flowered over 100 other C. gigas, the flowers averaging nine inches across. In one house he grows 1,600 cattleyas and lælias. He also has patches of cypripediums, dendrobiums, cælogynes and other orchids, which are in fine condition and reflect great credit on the grower. Mr. Peck is an enthusiastic orchid lover.

Cattleya Gaskelliana.

The usual blooming period of C. Gaskelliana is August and September, a period when cattleya are decidedly scarce, the summer varieties, such as Mossia, Mendellii, gigas and Warneri, being gone and it being too early for labiata and Bowringiana. The flowers resemble those of the well-known C. labiata, but are paler, as a rule, with somewhat narrower sepals and petals. The variety succeeds well treated similarly to C. labiata, of which it is really a form. The plant illustrated is one of a newly imported batch flowered by George Farquhar, West Barrington, R. I., and is in a 7-inch basket. W. N. CRAIG.

CATTLEYA CITRINA.

Cattleya citrina, which blooms during May and June, is a most distinct cattleya, commonly called the tulip orchid, from the fact that its three petals which form the outer envelope of the flowers, and the two petals which form part of the second series of three, never open as fully as they do in the other cattleyas, and in this way they resemble yellow tulips. The flowers are lemon-yellow and the crest of the lip is white. It has a strong odor of citron, hence the specific name. The whole plant has a pendent habit and can never be raised any other way. Its foliage and pseudo-bulbs are glaucous. It is a native of the high altitudes of Mexico, and it cannot be raised with a high degree of success unless it is given the shelter of a cool house.

The price of this interesting orchid is low, and one or two plants can be raised in the coldest part of the cattleya house during the winter, and hung under a tree in a moist place during the summer. In this way it may be kept in health for several years. The fleshy flowers last a long time and one blossom will perfume an entire greenhouse.

FERNS FOR NAME.

Enclosed I hand you four varieties of ferns and shall be glad to have you give me the names by number. C. J. J.

The specimens in question were not easy to determine, from the fact that they were not fully developed fronds, most of them being without spores.

No. 1 is an athyrium, or asplenium, possibly one of the forms of A. Filix-femina.

No. 2, Aspidium angulare.

No. 3, an asplenium, but cannot decide the species from this specimen.

No. 4, one of the maidenhairs, probably Adiantum diaphanum. W. H. T.

ENGLISH PRIMROSES.

What is the botanical name of the English primrose, and its culture? E. P. L.

The botanical name of the English primrose is Primula veris. Seeds should be sown in January or February in a greenhouse; 50 degrees at night is sufficiently warm. Prick off into shallow boxes, gradually harden and plant out in nursery rows about the first week in May. By keeping the ground well cultivated, the seedlings will make strong plants by fall.

If wanted for indoor culture, the primroses should be potted about the middle of October into 5-inch or 6-inch pots or pans and stood in a coldframe. After Christmas bring them into a gentle heat to send them along for spring flowering. They do well planted in coldframes and treated the same as violets. The plants after flowering can be divided and planted outdoors as suggested for seedlings.

For successful outdoor culture the plants require shade from overhanging trees. They are at their best if naturalized on moderately moist ground which contains a good proportion of leaf-mold. In full sunshine the flowers will wilt down badly. Plants set out here seven to eight years ago are still doing well and many seedlings spring up among them annually. If a severe summer drought ensues, it may be necessary to water occasionally. Plants naturalized here have, however, not needed any artificial watering this season, and there have been long dry spells. A light winter mulch of leaves should be given outdoor plants after the ground freezes. A heavy coating will cause injury.

Cattleya Gaskelliana Flowered by George Farquhar, West Barrington, R. I.

Cattleya Gigas Flowered by George Farquhar, West Barrington, R. I.

GOVERNMENT POSITIONS OPEN.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an examination on October 28, 1908, to secure eligibles from which to make certification to fill a vacancy in the position of laboratory aid (male), qualified in horticulture, in the Bureau of Plant Industry, at $40 a month, a vacancy in the position of laboratory aid in seed testing (female), in that bureau, at a salary of $600 to $720 per annum, and vacancies requiring similar qualifications as they may occur in the Department of Agriculture.

The commission says: "The position of aid in the various branches of the Bureau of Plant Industry offers many advantages to young persons who are desirous of taking up certain lines of special or scientific work either in the Department of Agriculture, the state experiment stations, or elsewhere. The preliminary training, practical, theoretic and scientific, to be obtained while serving as a laboratory aid will be valuable to any young person who has a taste for scientific work in agriculture or who contemplates taking a course at some agricultural college. While the pay of an aid is necessarily low, as in case of all inexperienced workers, in comparison with that of persons doing a higher class of work, yet opportunities will be afforded for advancement to more remunerative positions. Any ambitious young person who has had the advantage of a high school education or its equivalent and has a general knowledge of agriculture or horticulture will be eligible as an applicant."

Applicants should at once apply to the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., for Circular No. 688 and Application Form 304.

FEEDING VIOLETS.

When do you begin to feed violets? How often do you feed? How long do you continue? What do you feed them? How prepared? How do you kill red spider when you only have a good knapsack sprayer?

J. W. B.

The proper time to commence is in the right preparation of the soil, long before the violets are planted, but if you think that the soil is now too poor, the only thing that I should care to do would be to work in a light dressing of bone flour between the plants.

As for the red spider, prevention is worth pounds of cure and it is all a matter of spraying, with force, the underside of the foliage. Use cold water.

Of course the reader is unfortunate if he has not city pressure, but will have to do the next best thing. Care must be used at this time of year not to get the soil too wet, although with the weather we have been having, if it is well drained there is not much danger.

R. E. SHUPHELT.

SINGLE VIOLETS.

Answering several queries, I would say that it is yet too early to house Princess of Wales and other single violets. The doubles should all be housed before this time, as the heavy night dews seem to promote the spot disease, but with the singles it is different. From the beginning to the end of October, according to location, is sufficiently early to house. In Maine, where there are early frosts, the earlier date would be all right, while in Maryland or Louisiana a month later would be much better. The plants are benefited by some frost before housing. This seems to check leaf production, which is always too much of a feature on stock lifted early.

C. W.

CANTERBURY BELLS.

Are the Canterbury bells capable of forcing?

F. E. C.

Canterbury bells stand a moderate amount of forcing and make splendid flowering pot plants for spring trade. Pot up the plants now. Keep outdoors for another month, then stand in a cold pit or greenhouse until the new year, when you can start to force them gently at 45 degrees for a minimum, advancing to 50 and 52 degrees as growth starts. Give them plenty of light and sun at all times.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—John Walker is putting in two new boilers.

THE SOUTHERN

BULB STOCK....

Is It Unfair Competition?

No one was more surprised than I to see the statement credited to Edward Reid in the Philadelphia news letter in the REVIEW of September 17. I should certainly like Mr. Reid to explain in what way he considers our competition in the flower market as unfair. If we have found a cheaper way of producing bulb blooms, does not this rather redound to our credit than otherwise? And as regards protecting those growers who grow these flowers under glass, in the same way as American products are protected by a tariff against imported goods, it is a well-known fact that some of the leading men of the day are at variance on that very point and it is an open question whether the country at large really benefits by these tariffs. But this is going away from the point.

Mr. Reid says that the grower who has the courage and enterprise to erect glass houses and heat them, etc., merits the protection of public sentiment. This same argument was used years ago, when railroads gradually superseded the stage coach in the old country, and the same may be said today. Why let the Marconi system interfere with the present system of telegraphing, when we all know what a lot of cash has been expended in installing the present system? There is, in my opinion, but one answer to these arguments, and that is the word "Forward!"

Mr. Reid speaks of our flowers as cheaply grown. Has he any idea what these flowers cost to produce and place on the market? I think not. He is evidently basing his opinion on the prices realized during the rush last season, but this is no guide to him, for two reasons: First, it was not till the glut was over that we were informed of the state of the market, as, owing to the plans usually adopted by the wholesale florists, we generally get our account of sales about a week or ten days after the sales have taken place, and thus, as I explained to Mr. Reid at the florists' meeting, the wholesale florists are largely to blame for the glut. Second, we know that we are only feeling the market, and to get a trade together we must be prepared to sacrifice a little. In no other way can we get such an advertisement as by sending our flowers to the market.

I regret that Mr. Reid has gone so far as to state that he will do his utmost to discourage this work. As well may he try to stop the tides. We are here and only in our infancy, and I feel certain that if Mr. Reid is spared to watch the developments of this work, he will regret having made that remark. The time is not far distant when every family in the United States will insist upon having flowers on the dining table and every lady and gentleman will carry a button-hole of flowers. For these purposes flowers must be produced, and produced in quantities, and they will be grown right here in Virginia. What I think has, up to the present time, stopped the development of flower trade and incidentally caused the glut on the market, is the great difference between the price charged to the consumer and the returns sent to the grower, and nothing but placing large quantities of flowers on the market is going to stop it. J. GUILLE.

Mr. Reid's View.

In the REVIEW of September 24, under the head of "Marketing Bulbous Flowers," D'Alcorn & Sons take exceptions to some remarks I made in a previous issue. In the first place, I would state that any remarks I made were not with the intention of detracting from any special branch of the trade, but, on the other hand, to elevate and raise the standard of the business in general. I suppose it is safe to presume that everyone engaged in the florists' business commercially is in it for profit, and anything which is going to increase the profits of the business would surely be a benefit to those who are engaged therein. In saying this, I am leaving sentiment out, as far as encouragement to give to the general public a lot of cheap flowers at certain seasons of the year, to the detriment of the man who produces flowers under glass, who is the backbone of the business and on whom we have to depend for almost twelve months of the year for the product that goes to make our business.

The gentlemen say that they agree with Phil that the law of supply and demand regulates the production. That is very true in most cases, but, unfortunately, it does not hold good in this particular one, for various reasons, some of which I will state. In the first place, the gentlemen, if I am rightly informed, are in the business mainly to grow bulbs for sale and are not depending on the cut flowers for their profits, but, on the other hand, under said conditions every dollar derived from such sales of cut flowers might be set down as profit, as they have the bulbs to sell anyhow. Again, these bulbs can be grown from year to year and are multiplying all the time; also, they have an advantage on account of the cheapness of land compared to that of the florists contiguous to large cities. Then again, climatic conditions are in their favor, as what can be produced in open ground in that locality must be forced under glass here to be brought on the market at the same time, never speaking of the advantages of the cheap labor in that section.

Now look at the reverse side, or the man who grows under glass: He must first buy his bulbs, pay high prices for skilled labor and then comes the heating, which is not the least of the expense, and tell me, under these conditions, if this is fair competition; or would the gentlemen care to buy and grow bulbs for the prices they get for the cut flowers under their most favored conditions? I most certainly do classify southern grown daffodils as cheaply produced goods, when they come in competition under the conditions as I have stated.

As to the wholesaler being responsible for the glut, I think this is an error. He knows they are coming and if he don't have them come, someone else will. The writers also state that they paid one man over $100 commission in one week. I would just state that it was well earned money. I venture to say that had not that product been in the market his commissions on flowers grown under glass would be very much greater, and I know the producer under glass of various other varieties of flowers would not have found his product selling comparatively low, and often not sold at all. It is he who paid the penalty—the very man we ought to protect.

Next, they refer to England. It is only necessary for me to say that we do not care to see conditions exist here as they do in England. The best evidence of this is that we have plenty of Englishmen engaged in the business in this country, and I do not know of one American who has gone over there to follow the craft. I do not care anything about the tons that are handled—the volume of money is what counts.

It is stated that in the months of March and April there were over a quarter of a million bulbous flowers sold to the ladies in Norfolk, Va. What effect did that have on those engaged in the trade in that locality? I for one know the demoralized conditions that it caused at that time within a radius of some 200 miles or more of that city. Had this a tendency to elevate the business or raise the standard? If these conditions prevail, when, as they say, every city gets educated, I would say, God keep them ignorant!

The last paragraph is rather ambiguous. The gentlemen say the land is bought and the greenhouses erected. Do they mean to convey the impression that their bulbous flowers are raised under glass and not in the open field? If such is the case I retract all I have said, and as to my suggesting what they should do with their flowers, that would be presumption on my part, but would merely state that if bulbs are sold to be forced under glass in the face of this competition, that part of the business, as far as greenhouse men are concerned, will soon be a thing of the past, and the bulb producers will have to depend for their revenue entirely on the sale of the flowers.

EDWARD REID.

PRESIDENT LEMAN BRADFORD.

At the regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Springfield, O., September 14, the annual election of officers was held and Leman Bradford was elected president. The other officers chosen were: Vice-president, Frank E. Good; secretary, Geo. D. Leedle (reelected); treasurer, John A. Doyle.

The retiring president and the secretary, in connection with the entertainment committee, were instructed to prepare a suitable program and banquet for the installation of officers at the October meeting.

The president-elect is a son of Ashley Bradford, one of the wheel horses in the Republican party of some years ago, and the son has been a faithful worker in the same ranks, although he has never sought political honors. For many years Leman Bradford was well known as the local agent for the Wells, Fargo & Co. express and in this line of business he acquired much detailed knowledge, as to the shipping of floral stock, which has been of material advantage to him during recent years as secretary of the Springfield Floral Co., of which he is the active manager. Mr. Bradford has been particularly successful in devising new and original methods in cataloguing and offering his products. An excellent likeness of him is shown in the photograph reproduced on this page.

Roger Murphy, of Urbana, exhibited at the club meeting some exceptionally fine blooms of the new Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora, perfectly white and still in their prime, which was considered remarkable for such a late date in the season. Mr. Murphy gave a brief talk on this subject and the possibility of so cultivating this valuable shrub as to have it in bloom every month in the year.

Opha Jackson showed a beautiful vase of buds and blooms of the rose Helen Good, grown out-of-doors, and explained the methods by which he had obtained such splendid results.

DAHLIA AND GERANIUM SHOW.

The Annual Affair at Vincent's.

Forty Washington florists left on the 11 a. m. train, September 22, for Cowenton, Md. The Baltimore florists joined them at the Camden station on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, and it was a jolly crowd that filed into the wagon train to White Marsh. This place certainly should be called Vincentville, for it is Mr. Vincent's family and his employees that make and inhabit the place.

The exhibition proper was held in the long potting shed. This show was given in conjunction with the Ladies' Aid Society of the Ebenezer church, of Chase, Md. The Aid Society furnished a fine dinner, with the true a la Maryland chicken and trimmings. The attendance September 22 was estimated at 700. After dinner the show looked fresher and brighter. All the fine vegetables and fruit you ever heard about were there, even prize ducks and pickles.

The center of the building was taken up with dahlias, and they were there in all their glory. We saw Souv. de Gustave Douzon, bright red, measuring seven and eight inches, and Mme. Van Den Deal, extra fine large pink; Aegir, rich, bright crimson; Ambassador, pure white; Antelope, yellow, suffused bright salmon; Enreka, one of the best pinks and a good seller; Blush Queen, shell pink; Britannia, deep salmon flesh; A. D. Livoni, rich seashell pink, and hundreds of others of every conceivable color.

Leman Bradford.

One side of the building was devoted to geraniums. Here were to be seen all the latest varieties. Mr. Vincent expects to grow 2,000,000 geraniums during the season of 1909. There were plants of all the latest novelties, including Mrs. Annie Vincent, delicate pink with white center; Gen. Lamarque, between crimson and cerise; Lusca, red with white eye; Gen. Tarbel, heavy growth with heavy truss of bright red, and a large collection of Bruant's, Rozain-Bouchard's, Lemoine's, Cannell's, E. G. Hill's, and other 1908 novelties.

A trip through the houses was well worth one's time. One house had 100 different varieties grown for show; one had 400 varieties grown for trial; in another were to be seen 1,000 plants picked up by Mr. Vincent on his recent trip to Europe. They looked good to him and he is going to try them out. Among these is a beautiful variegated one, the leaves of which are white on the edge, with a red stripe shading to delicate green and a dark green center.

After a trip through the houses, the visitors assembled at Mr. Vincent's residence, where Mr. Seybold introduced Rev. R. Hoffman. In a neat address he told how much has been accomplished by the aid of the society, and by visitors at the summer meetings, as this is called the harvest home festival of the Ebenezer church.

Mr. Vincent then spoke of the success of the display last year, and the poor showing this year on account of the drought. At one time it looked as if there would be no show. He said they "did the very best they could, and it is hoped by the help of Providence that in another year they will have the best show ever."

Mr. Seybold thanked Mr. Vincent in behalf of the Maryland Horticultural Society and the Washington and Baltimore florists. He referred to what Mr. Vincent had accomplished for the benefit of horticulture throughout the country. He invited all the exhibitors to be present at the fall show December 1 and 2, in Baltimore.

William F. Gude, ex-president of the S. A. F., was introduced. Among other things he said: "This is a joint meeting of the horticulturists and florists from everywhere. Because there are not 1,000 horticulturists present, is no reason why they should not be here. If they knew what they would see and learn by coming to White Marsh, they surely would be here. It only shows how much a man can accomplish when he wants to, and the man is not among us who cannot profit by the lesson we have before us today, when we come to think that a few years ago this beautiful place, with all its ornamental shrubbery, vast greenhouses, lawns, and the neat homes of the workmen, was a forest filled with a rank undergrowth." He thanked Mr. Vincent for his kind invitation to the Washington club, and wanted all present to make a note that Mr. Vincent, with all his business and vast estate, still finds time to thank his Creator for the many blessings bestowed on him, as is evidenced by the fact of his giving the proceeds from the luncheon, fancy tables, etc., to his church, for the betterment of his fellowmen. Peter Bisset also made a few remarks on the work accomplished by Mr. Vincent.

Mr. Patterson, of the State Horticultural College, spoke of the good the college gets from Mr. Vincent's achievements and urged the boys present to stick to the farm and pattern after the man who had showed them what could be done; and let their ambitions rise higher than the average country boy, who wants to be a motorman or conductor on a trolley line. He also spoke of Maryland being first in the production of strawberries, first in tomatoes, and fourth in sweet corn and peas.

Among the speakers were also Mr. Walker, president of the Farmers' League of Delaware; Mr. Harris, and others.

After this the growers scattered all through the dahlia fields and could be seen everywhere with their notebooks, getting the names of the varieties that looked good to them. Eureka, in the field, attracted special attention, as it had an abundance of long-stemmed, beautiful pink blossoms of good size.

Mr. Smith, of the United States Forest Bureau, gave a talk on preserving greenhouse timber. He showed samples of pine and other wood, treated with creosote. His best authority on creosote treatment was Mr. Vincent himself, as he has used it with success for the last three years. All the posts under the benches were dipped at each end and, after three years' use, are perfectly sound. All the lumber used in the construction of Mr. Vincent's houses has been treated in this way. Just recently the benches in one house were treated with it, with no bad effects. He also spoke of other experiments, with different chemicals, now being conducted at the Agricultural Department.

Arriving in Baltimore, we were taken in charge by a committee of the Baltimore florists. After a good old German dinner, we were taken to the bowling alleys and we bowled until the wee hours. The score was as follows:

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Lilies.

The early batch of Harrisii are now two to three inches high and have the pots well filled with roots. From a frame they have been removed to a light, sunny house kept at 55 degrees at night. It is hoped to have a good proportion of these in for Christmas, but in the case of lilies there is ever "many a slip between the cup and the lip." A proportion of these will undoubtedly show disease. A few will be too early and others too late, but in the winter months cut lilies are always useful. It is better not to overwater these lilies. Have you ever taken notice of a batch where the plants which were allowed to become dry looked remarkably clean, and the moister ones the reverse? All the trouble with lilies is not with the growers in Bermuda and Japan, but with the man at home. Careless watering seems to spread diseases.

Cold storage L. speciosums for Christmas are now a foot high and should be in season. These are growing in a house kept at 50 degrees at night, and we prefer not to force them any more than we can avoid. Be sure that aphid is not allowed to get a footing in any of the lily shoots. A fumigation once a week will keep the plants clean.

Do not leave any longiflorum bulbs lying around in boxes or benches any longer than you can avoid. The scales will soon show a shriveled appearance if you do not pot them. If unable to pot at once, cover with sand and place in a cool shed or cellar.

Variegated Vinca.

There never appears to be much of an overstock of variegated vinca. While it does not mind a little frost, it will not be wise to risk it outdoors any longer in the northern states. Potted up into 4-inch and 5-inch pots and stood along the edges of the benches, they will make beautiful stock for vases next season. If your supply is not so large as you would like, get in a good, generous batch of soft cuttings. These, rubbed off with a heel, will root quickly and make nice, serviceable little plants for spring. This plant really wants to be planted out and grown a year to give it the size necessary for use in vases and window-boxes.

Lemon-scented Verbenas.

Do not forget a few cuttings of lemon-scented verbenas. No garden is really complete without one or two plants of it. The propagation of Aloysia citrifolia, as the plant is called botanically, is less easy than that of many other bedding plants. We always find it roots best where it can have a gentle bottom heat, and short, soft cuttings, taken with a heel, are the best. In a cold house the cuttings will rot off, but if placed in sharp sand and well watered once a day, there will be no trouble in rooting them in a temperature of 60 degrees. It is always well to lift a few old plants. These, if kept cool and somewhat dry over winter, will yield a fine crop of nice cuttings in March, which will make nice little stock for Memorial day.

Verbenas.

Verbenas are so easily raised from seed that few trouble to keep the old plants over winter. A better plan than lifting and heading back the old plants is to root a few cuttings of any specially desirable kinds it is desired to keep over. When rooted, place half a dozen cuttings in 5-inch pots. Pinch once or twice during the winter and they will make a nice, stocky lot of cuttings. Verbenas resent coddling and should be carried over in a cool but dry house. Too much moisture will mildew the leaves. They will carry over in a frame until the middle of November and could almost be wintered there if well protected at night. Dampness would be their greatest foe.

Lobelias.

In some localities the dwarf blue lobelia does well for bedding. To get a first-class strain, one that will come compact and not vary in character, cuttings are far preferable to seeds. The seedlings are a variable quantity and quite lack the neat, compact habit of those raised from cuttings. Lift a few old plants. Pot into 4-inch or 5-inch pots. Cut back and stand on a shelf where they can get plenty of sun. On a low bench an excess of moisture will speedily rot the whole plants. In late winter the plants can be cut back again and will then give a big crop of succulent little cuttings, which will make the best of plants for bedding.

Dahlias.

Frosts have already blackened the dahlias in some places and they cannot be expected to last long in the colder northern states. The undesirable sorts should be marked and any labeling done to prevent confusion another season. There are now really, far too many varieties of dahlias. The average commercial florist has little use for more than a few, and a dozen sorts of popular colors are preferable to trying single plants of a hundred or more kinds, many of which even an expert has trouble in detecting points of difference in. Do not cut down the plants as soon as frost has killed the tops. Let them get well dried first. Frequently we get spells of warm weather for a month after the first frosts, and this induces a second growth on cut back plants, which is not to be desired for the sake of the tubers.

Gardenias.

Plants in benches should not have any further pinching after this date, unless they are wanted for spring blooming. Ply the spray nozzle among them twice weekly to keep mealy bug within bounds and fumigate once a week for aphid, which will speedily disfigure the young, soft shoots. Be careful not to overwater the plants. Any sogginess or sourness will assuredly start the yellowing of the leaves, which is the bane of so many growers. If the soil is porous, there is less likelihood of this trouble, but if the compost used was not fairly rough, greater care will be necessary to keep the leaves from assuming a golden hue. A temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night just now is about right.

HARDY ROSES FOR FORCING.

I have a fine lot of roses. Some are hardy perpetuals, such as Ulrich Brunner and others of that class, and some are hybrids, such as Etoile de France, Helen Gould and others. I would like to have them in bloom for Decoration day. Please tell me how to construct a coldframe, when to put them in and what treatment to give them over winter in New Jersey. G. W. R.

You do not state whether the roses are being grown in the open ground or are in pots, or boxes. In the latter case they will not require placing under cover before the middle or end of November in your latitude. Give them full sunshine and gradually withhold water in order to check further soft growth and help to harden and ripen the wood. The plants should by no means become dust-dry, for that would cause shriveling and injury.

If the roses are growing in the open, they should be potted or placed in boxes about the end of October. This will allow them to become somewhat established before they are placed under glass for forcing. Keep them outdoors about a month after lifting them.

If you have a shed or cold cellar, you could pack the pots and boxes with leaves or straw, and it would be an advantage to have the temperature down to freezing each night or even below it. Otherwise you can construct a frame to hold them, on a sloping piece of ground, in order to be sure that no water will lodge there. Use 2-inch planks for the sides and give a pitch of six to eight inches for a 6-foot sash. Bank up loam around the sides of the planks for added warmth. Dig out the frame to the required depth after construction. The hybrid perpetuals should be all right with merely the sash covering, but the hybrid teas will be better off with a scattering of dry leaves among them. Air the frame during all mild spells in winter and use board shutters over the glass to keep snow from breaking it. If the soil in the pots is allowed to become fairly dry, there will be little probability of the frost breaking them. It would be as well, however, to pack between them with leaves.

If you prefer to wait until late winter before potting your plants, dig a trench outdoors and bury the plants, covering with a good coating of straw after frost has firmed the ground well. Take out the plants and pot them about the end of February. Results will not be so good in this case as if the plants had been potted in the fall.

To have the plants in bloom for Memorial day, start them in a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees at night, raising the night readings to 50 or 55 degrees later. It takes a good deal of nice judgment to time these roses exactly. If the month of May proves hot, it may be necessary to move them to a cooler house. Ten to twelve weeks should suffice from the time the plants are started until they are well in bloom. The hybrid teas will come in rather earlier than the hybrid perpetuals and could be started two weeks later. C. W.

VENTILATION.

attended to when the temperature rises quite high, so as to prevent a draft from coming in? E. P. L.

This querist omitted to state whether the house was provided with ventilators on both sides. The best method would be to find out by experiment, as it is almost impossible to answer such queries without being on the ground to see conditions, lay of land, etc. RIBES.

BURNT SPOTS ON FOLIAGE.

Would you kindly advise me as to the cause of spot on the inclosed Beauty foliage? This appeared last fall, but to no great extent, and as it was confined to a few plants in the middle of the house, I concluded that it was scorching and that it originated from the sun's rays penetrating through a defective piece of glass while the plants were still wet from syringing.

This year it has made its appearance again and is distributed all over the house, though not to any alarming extent. I may add that watering, airing, syringing, cultivating and tying get first-class attention, practically the same as is advised in the REVIEW from time to time. Except for this trouble, the plants are in splendid condition. A. M. R.

The spots are caused by imperfections in the glass. These imperfections are frequently so small as to be practically invisible, and to locate them requires patience and time. During bright sunshine the bright, burning spots, as shown on the foliage, can by the shadows be traced to the defects in the glass. A small brush, dipped in boiled oil and attached to a long handle, can then be applied to the defects.

This scrutiny should be made during every hour of sunshine, so that all the spots may be located and obscured. RIBES.

THRIPS.

I am sending you four American Beauty buds. We have had some discussion as to what is the trouble with these buds, and would thank you if you could tell us what the trouble is and what would be the best remedy for same? E. N. S.

These buds are infested with thrips. By pulling one of the buds apart you will find the little pest at the base of the petals. They are lively and it requires a quick eye to detect them.

There are many remedies recommended from time to time. None of them are effective unless persisted in. Hydrocyanic acid gas, one ounce to each 1,000 cubic feet of space, will destroy (so it is claimed) ninety-two per cent of the pests. If this is persisted in for a few weeks the logical conclusion is that the few remaining in a few weeks will be past doing much damage. Fumigating with tobacco to which has been added some red pepper, once a week, has kept them from giving trouble with my roses. This has been the remedy practiced for years with good effect. RIBES.

NAME OF PLANTS.

Please give us the name of enclosed cuttings of geranium, also bloom and leaf of another plant, which we would like the name of. C. J. A.

The geranium appears to be Alphonse Ricard, but specimens were badly wilted. The other plant is Echeveria secunda glauca. C.

LATE PLANTED DAHLIAS.

It is significant that those who planted dahlias late this year are less annoyed by lack of bloom, on account of blighted plants, than are those who planted early.

To take my own case, for example, I had about 100 plants growing splendidly early in June, which a month later were a sorry looking spectacle. On the other hand, the ones I planted as late as the middle of June grew without hindrance and are now in full bloom, while those first planted, and almost wholly blighted, are only now coming into bloom. WM. F. KASTING has been appointed a park commissioner for Buffalo.

THE latest thing in launching new ships is to christen them with flowers instead of the traditional bottle of wine.

CANNA J. D. EISELE, scarlet shaded with orange, is said to have been one of the best green-leaved cannas at this summer's Franco-British Exposition.

THE automobile has not helped the flower business. Flowers are not needed for automobile parties, even if one has the price after providing for the upkeep of the machine.

BEGINNING October 1, the postage rate applicable to letters mailed in the United States for delivery at any place in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland will be 2 cents an ounce or fraction of an ounce.

LESS than five short weeks remain before the presidential election and thus far the political excitement has not been sufficient to interfere with business, although without doubt in many lines buyers are holding off till after the result is determined, which has an indirect effect on the flower trade.

H. H. GIRVIN, Paradise, Pa., has applied for a patent on a stem-clipper, a knife to be worn on one finger and operated by pressure of another. It is designed for the use of retail florists, or for growers of carnations, grapes or any stock with soft wood which is better cut than broken from the plant.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The executive committee for the National Flower Show had its meeting in Chicago September 25 and received reports from all sub-committees and took important action.

The secretary was instructed to have

2,000 copies of the final premium list printed and mailed by October 10. President Traendly was requested to offer the gold medal of the S. A. F. for the most interesting and educational exhibit in the show. Chairman Poehlmann, of the reception committee, reported that elaborate plans were being made for the entertainment of visitors to the show.
 Chairman Koenig, of the special features committee, reported that an exhibit was being planned which would show the evolution of floral designing in the last twenty-five years.

Action was taken fixing the general admission at 75 cents for adults, and 25 cents for children of school age; fixing the price of trade tickets at 35 cents.
 The action offering a season ticket for $1 to florists not members of the S. A. F. was reconsidered and rescinded.

J. H. BURDETT, Sec'y.

WHY LIMIT YOURSELF?

Are you content with a business among your neighbors? Do they buy all the stock you raise, or could raise? Do they buy steadily, all the year around, or do you find yourself pushed for cash to meet your bills except, perhaps, in the spring?
 Do your local customers pay cash, or expect you to wait a year, more or less, for your money?

Why don't you grow stock that other florists buy—advertise—and branch out?
 Others in small towns have done it—why not you?

See what this wholesale florist writes from a retail town:

"Please discontinue my adiantum, dracæna, cyclamen and primrose advertisements in the Classified Department of the REVIEW and insert the inclosed until further notice. Stocks are getting badly broken. Sales have been first-class.

Cash comes with the order to the known advertisers in the REVIEW. Why not branch out?

OBITUARY.

Samuel Pieser.

Samuel Pieser died quite suddenly
 September 24, at his home in Chicago.
 He had been in his usual health up to September 19 and had been about as usual at an even later date. The physicians said his death was due to abdominal poisoning. The funeral was held September 25, with interment at Rosehill cemetery.

Mr. Pieser was 48 years of age, a brother of G. H. Pieser, president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, and E. E.
 Pieser, treasurer of that company. For many years Samuel Pieser ran a retail flower store on North Clark street in Chicago, up to about three years ago. Then he was with the Kennicott Bros. Co. for a time, afterward going into the tobacco business, in which he also was interested while running the retail flower store.
 Recently he has been manager of one of the stores of the United Cigar Stores Co.
 Mr. Pieser leaves a widow and two children, Edward E. Pieser and Mrs. A. G.
 Perretz.

Gordon Wolf.

Gordon Wolf, proprietor of the Denver
 Floral Co., Denver, Colo., died September 11. He was well known in the trade.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It is worthy of special remark the difference the change in the weather has made in the general atmosphere of the market. So long as the midsummer heat continued there was a feeling of lassitude, but this had given way Monday, September 28, to a spirit of optimism due to the invigorating temperatures. Trade had been making steady advances, and September 25 and 26 were excellent days, but Monday brought the first real indications of autumn and the genuine revival of business.

Even before the unseasonable heat wave had passed there was an increase in demand. Local business was light and largely confined to funeral and wedding work, but shipping trade was active because there was so little good stock throughout the country, the same as in Chicago. Of course the change in the weather resulted in a cutting down of supply. Practically all outdoor flowers are gone and there has been a reduction in the receipts of roses and carnations. This, with the increase in demand, has made a brisk market. There has been no special advance in quoted rates, but selection is less close and the lower grades are producing much better returns than heretofore. One wholesaler estimates that the average advance in prices compared with last week has been about twenty-five per cent.

There is a strong demand for chrysanthemums and the supply has not increased as rapidly as was expected. It is possible to fill all advance orders, but so little stock is received which has not already been spoken for that the man with the sudden call has some difficulty in making connections with the stock. It is generally stated that the mums are a week later than last year and the quality is not specially good, although a few good Monrovia and October Frost are seen.

The Beauty crop was on the wane last week and prices have advanced. There continue to be first-class Beauties, but none too many of them, and those who still are cutting in fair quantity are finding a fine market. Other roses will shortly show improvement as a result of the change in the weather.

The quality of carnations is steadily improving and now that outdoor flowers are gone there is a better market. The short-stemmed whites have specially been benefited.

The daily receipts of violets from Rhinebeck have begun. The weather thus far has been too warm and the stock has been poor; so poor, in fact, that the wholesalers have not ventured to offer it for reshipping, but now that we have seasonable temperature again we may expect a rapid improvement.

The list of flowers available is short just now. There is plenty of valley, but hardly any other lilies than longiflorum. Asters are gone, gladioli are on the wane, and the few dahlias are slow sale. Some sweet peas are seen, but they are not good. Orchids are more abundant.

There is a fair market for strings of asparagus and for smilax, but other greens are not yet moving to any great extent.

Sunday, September 27, the thermometer registered 86 degrees, and the next morning 40 degrees. September 28 and 29 were 10 degrees colder than normal for the season. The weather man says the cold snap has passed and that seasonable weather may now be expected.

The Thompson Affairs.

The Thompson affairs at Joliet appear to be becoming more tangled, rather than being straightened out. At a recent meeting of the stockholders of the Thompson Carnation Co., J. D. Thompson was re-elected president and manager, but legal action was instituted to set aside the election. The Joliet Herald says that "Charles Fish, who was restored as president and general manager of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., September 23, following the ousting of J. D. Thompson as head of the corporation by an order issued by Judge A. O. Marshall in the circuit court, through his attorney, John W. Downey, has filed a suit of replevin against Thompson to regain possession of a horse, buggy, bank account book, and several vases and cups won at flower shows, which he claims are unlawfully being held by the defendant."

The Joliet News says: "Albert C. Rott states that he has acquired the ownership of the Thompson floral business at 110 North Chicago street. Mr. Rott states that neither J. D. Thompson, as an individual, nor the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., has any financial interest whatever in the Chicago street enterprise. The business will continue to be conducted in the name, Thompson, Florist, until further notice."

National Flower Show.

The executive committee for the national flower show held a meeting in Chicago September 25, afternoon and evening. Chairman W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, presided. He was the only out-of-town member present. A large amount of routine business was up for consideration. It was decided to increase the admission price from 50 cents to 75 cents, and make trade tickets 35 cents.

Various Notes.

The death of Samuel Pieser, known to practically all the florists in Chicago, is recorded in the obituary column this week.

Miss Nell M. Sisler, who retired last spring, after many years with E. H. Hunt and later the corporation of that name, of which she was secretary, has returned from a summer's vacation spent in the west. She has been greatly benefited by the rest and is ready to make a fresh connection in the flower business.

The Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting at the Union restaurant this evening, October 1.

George Asmus reports that the Schiller business is this week being installed in its new store on West Madison street.

Phil Schupp, of Budlong's, in company with Harry Manheim and Joe Dunn, made a visit to a number of growers in the north end September 27. He says it will be some little time before the full cut of mums is on.

Scheiden & Schoos in two weeks sold 43,000 asters for White Bros., of Gasport, N. Y., and secured steadily advancing prices.

Wire Work

We think it beyond question that we have made and sold more wire work this summer than any other house in the west.

By virtue of Good Goods and Right Prices, we propose to hold the trade we have gained. Try us and we'll try to hold you.

Several years ago Fred Lautenschlager invented a fumigator, which he now has arranged to have put on the market by the Wilson Plant Oil and Fertilizer Co., Chatham, N. J. W. J. Badgley, secretary and treasurer of the concern, was one of the exhibitors at the rose show at Chicago last March. The device vaporizes tobacco stems.

Gordon Wolf, proprietor of the Denver Floral Co., who died at Denver September 11, was well known in this market.

Some of the large growers north of town are suffering seriously from the depredations of the "bug" that has made so much trouble in previous seasons. This is a little understood pest that affects all roses, but Beauties especially. Hydro-

October 3, and half a dozen smaller ones for the same date. Not many cut flowers are to be used at Field's this year, except several wagon-loads of hydrangeas cut from their nursery.

The employees of the A. L. Randall Co., and their friends, to the number of about seventy-five, had a fine time at Riessig's big red barn Saturday night, September 26. There was an abundance of refreshments and dancing continued until 1:15, when there was a special car to bring the merry-makers back to the city. Some of the costumes were highly original.

Wietor Bros. are beginning to cut October Frost. N. J. Wietor says it is lucky they gave this variety and Monrovia benches with plenty of head room, because the warm September sent them up to a prodigious height, and they are flowering one to two weeks later than last year.

At E. H. Hunt's, C. M. Dickinson says the supply business is also enjoying the stimulus of autumn.

The A. L. Randall Co. is mailing out its new, enlarged supply catalogue this week.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is putting in a line of the Wittbold watering apparatus, and also a line of the Skinner system for test on carnations.

Peter Reinberg is still cutting quantities of the Mrs. Marshall Field rose, although summer is its best time.

Percy Jones figures that there will be fair business this month, but no great rush until after we see which Bill is counterfeit.

E. E. Pieser acquired about a pound a day in additional weight while on his vacation.

Zech & Mann are receiving Mrs. Marshall Field from one of their growers.

The Market.

For a few days last week business showed signs of improvement in the cut flower line, but not sufficiently to say that we are busy. Window displays among the uptown florists are being increased, showing that there is more life in the business. A good, all-day rain September 27 cooled things considerably, and frost will, of course, put an end to most of the outdoor stock, which has been coming in quite heavily. Prices on first grade stock went up a little September 28. Roses are good in all varieties. Brides and Maids are better, as well as Richmond and Killarney. All grades of Beauties sell well. Carnations are improving each day and some extra good blooms are now seen, but not extra long-stemmed. Enchantress is among the best. Asters are about over for this season, only a few small ones coming in. Extra fine valley is in the market, also a few good white chrysanthemums, but not many as yet. Smilax is in good demand, also asparagus and fancy ferns.

Various Notes.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, spent a day in the city last week and says he will be at the Springfield fair all this week, where he will welcome all in the trade who visit the fair.

Mrs. William Ellison reports that since her return from her vacation trip they have been busy. They furnished a golden wedding last week, which was a $500 job, and made a $100 casket-cover on Saturday, September 26, of smilax and white carnations.

Adolph Brix says he is undecided as to holding a free flower show next month. If he does, he will show only stock from his own plant in the northern part of the city.

The Market.

Up to noon on Monday, September 28, the long drought had not been broken. The forest fires in the Adirondacks and Catskills were raging, and the air was so laden with the smoke and ashes that navigation was dangerous, and the health of the community threatened. The long promised showers and cooler atmosphere arrived just in time. Market gardeners, agriculturists, and every department of the horticultural business, have greatly felt the strain. The revival in the florists' trade has been slow to come, and disastrous in its tardiness. With the frosts, that cannot long be delayed, must come a change for the better. The depression during the last week is all the keener because of the unexpected halt in the coming of the anticipated better times. Never in the memory of any florist in the wholesale district has the revival been so long postponed.

Some of the violet growers have gathered sense with experience, and are holding their products until the season opens. The few pale samples that are coming are only a parody on the reality. In a couple of weeks the genuine article will be here and I venture to predict that it will win back this season some of its old-time popularity.

that is, the select. As high as 30 cents is obtained for those that merit it. Of the smaller, short-stemmed Beauties and of No. 2 roses of every kind, the better way to indicate their results is silence. Thousands of mildewed roses have been sent in. No use; this is not the market for them. The best or nothing, seems to have expressed the condition of the demand during these weary weeks of waiting.

The asters have appeared in the last act and the curtain has been rung down. Sweet peas have joined the vanishing host and the days of the gladioli are numbered. Now come the chrysanthemums upon the stage. The vanguard is already here and some beautiful Monrovia and Pacific are among them. Dahlias are abundant and beautiful. The exhibition last week gave them such distinction as they have never before enjoyed, both in the wonderful perfection of the new varieties, and the large crowds that attended the institute show. The officials realize how much room is needed for these displays and are already arranging for a big hall uptown for the regular chrysanthemum show in November.

Orchids grow in beauty, variety and numbers and in popularity. Many are the October weddings announced, the fashionable events, to be consummated in the great ball rooms of the Plaza and St. Regis hotels, where the roof gardens and floricultural decorations are featured as never before. Society is now rapidly returning from the seashore and the mountains, and the gloomy days are nearly over. Before another week the tide will turn and after the excitement of the election has passed, there seems nothing to prevent a recurrence of the good times, so rudely interrupted a year ago. Optimists look for steady progress and the best winter the trade has ever known. Conservatives think the wave of economy has gathered such force that enterprise will be hard to awaken and improvement will be slow. In any event consolation may be had from the fact that worse would be impossible.

Good crowds attend and the variety of stock offered is large and prices satisfactory. Every Tuesday and Friday at 11 a. m. these offerings will continue until further notice. Some large decorative palm stock and splendid evergreens imported are among the latest announcements. The Fruit Auction Co., that tested the possibility of a profitable daily auction last season, seems to have decided New York is hardly ripe for the European innovation and no sales of plants there have been made this fall.

Totty's Monrovia a week ago, it was said by one of the Twenty-eighth street wholesalers, brought $6 per dozen.

The agricultural fairs are all around us and the October flower shows come in a bunch. At Mineola, L. I., the attendance averaged 20,000 daily. Stumpp & Walter Co. made a fine display of bulbs, seeds, etc. John Lewis Childs was paramount in palm and floral decorations and Hicks & Sons and Adolph Jaenicke had splendid exhibits of nursery stock. Mr. Jaenicke showed his new scarlet daisy and Mr. Hicks illustrated large tree moving and retinospora in great variety. Mr. Jaenicke reports a wide demand for his specialty. Weinberg had his usual assortment of cacti. But Henry Eike said the racing ostriches created more enthusiasm than the vegetables, and the horse exhibits drew better than the flowers. Nevertheless it is the crowd that tells the story of profit or loss, and the lesson of necessity as to novelty and excitement is not lost upon those who have in hand the coming exhibitions in and around New York. It is the only way in this rapid age. Satiety is death. Humanity is hungry for the novel and the practical and the flower show manager who realizes this will always win.

The first impression, when you open a box of cut flowers, usually establishes its quality. The price paid for the goods should not regulate the care in the selection and packing of your orders. We know of only, and permit only, one kind of packing—and that is the best years of experience has taught us, and it's acknowledged to be the BEST.

The next item of utmost importance is PROMPTNESS. That has always been a hobby with us. Your order, from the time we receive it until delivered to the transportation company, is under the direct supervision of a competent and responsible man. That means you are getting the best attention and prompt deliveries. We are not infallible, human as you are, but our system permits few mistakes; they are the rare exception with us.

A shrewd buyer always aims to get the best value for his money. That we have the goods is an acknowledged and established fact, and along with our complete and varied stock, we offer you the NIESSEN service we have told you about. PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

September has closed with slightly improved conditions in the cut flower market. The weather has been bad, so warm that it is almost impossible for flowers to retain their color and crispness for any length of time. The heat has also brought in an unusual quantity of stock, even for this usually productive season of the year. Fortunately, however, rain has improved outdoor conditions, which were becoming serious.

The dahlia is the leading flower of the day, and, despite the drought that has just ended, it has been as fine a season for this autumnal flower as we have ever had. The demand for dahlias is improving and, while it can never be said that the demand equals the supply of a flower that can be shipped by the wagon-load, the demand sometimes equals the supply of certain varieties, and often consumes a large part of the supply of all the varieties.

Asters are waning rapidly. There are nothing like as many asters in the market as there were a week ago, and while there is still a fair demand for fancy white and soft pink, it is not always easy to obtain the stock to meet this demand.

Roses are extraordinarily plentiful, with only the higher grades bringing satisfactory prices. Carnations are improving, though it will take cooler weather to make them what they should be. There is quite a brisk demand springing up for the divine flower, due, probably, to the decline of the aster. Violets are improving. The singles are now shippable, which means that stems, size and fragrance are such that they will not reflect discredit.

Cosmos is plentiful in all the colors. Valley has been selling better than for some time past, with excellent prospects. Orchids, owing to some special demands, have sold well. Considering weather and business conditions, the improvement in the market is gratifying. A few early chrysanthemums have made their appearance.

What Philadelphia Can Do.

It is generally conceded that Philadelphia, yes, sleepy Philadelphia, is facile princeps in florists' supplies, in foliage plants, in seeds and bulbs, and in the wholesaling of cut flowers. But what Philadelphia can do in this last respect has never been exactly measured. An opportunity arose last week, when it became noised around that Chicago and Philadelphia were bidding against each other for a certain out-of-town cut flower order. There were rumors, and counter-rumors, and finally, it was positively stated in wholesale circles that the order had gone to Chicago, and Phil was definitely instructed to say nothing whatever about it, just to let Chicago do the crowing. When, presto! it was officially announced that Philadelphia had secured the order and filled it! But, you will ask, what in the world does all this palaver mean? Simply that W. E. McKissick sent 5,000 American Beauty roses and some peas in one order out of this city last week. What do you think of that?

A Good Device.

Israel Rosnosky, who has just returned from a business trip in the interests of the Henry F. Michell Co. to Maryland, Virginia, and the District of Columbia, says that while at Richmond, Va., he saw an interesting device for sterilizing soil. It was at the establishment of Mann & Brown. It seems that the firm was troubled with pests in the soil and decided that it must be sterilized to get rid of the nuisance. Accordingly, they arranged a trough, so to speak, between their houses, where the carts were dumped and the wheelbarrows filled with soil for planting the houses. Into this trough they introduced a steam pipe, dividing it and running two pipes at right angles and then continuing them with an ell something in a U-shape. The steam was allowed to escape through outlets at proper distances and the soil dumped in the trough on top of the pipes before being wheeled into the houses. It was allowed to lie there until as dry as punk. Mr. Rosnosky considers the device invaluable, and believes that each grower can work out the details to suit his own individual case.

Death of Mr. Paul.

James W. Paul, Jr., president of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, died at Hot Springs, Va., September 25. The Market.

Such improvement as there is in the market is slight. With continued warm weather and an abundance of outdoor flowers, better conditions are out of the question. An early frost is about due and fervent prayers are heard that it may come soon. Asters continue abundant, but less so than a week ago. We never remember to have seen so many of them, nor of finer quality than this season. Gladioli and sweet peas are each growing less. Of indoor flowers, roses are more than enough for all needs and do not advance in price. Carnations are more plentiful daily, but sell rather slowly. Violets are seen in good numbers, mostly singles. Of lilies there is a small but steady supply, ample for all needs. Lily of the valley remains much the same. There is no change in prices of asparagus, adiantum and smilax.

Quite a few Cattleya labiata are now seen at the better stores.

Various Notes.

Much sympathy is being expressed for Mrs. E. M. Gill, the well known Medford florist, who lost her daughter, Miss E. F.
Gill, September 21. Miss Gill had for a number of years been a teacher in the Medford schools.

The Brockton fair is the great attraction for many of the craft this week.
The gates opened September 29 and an attendance approximating 200,000 is looked for on the four days during which it will be open. Dahlias make a big showing.

F. W. Fletcher Co. has leased for five years the Seaverus Lane greenhouses, just a thorough overhauling, the houses will be filled with the firm's specialty, marguerites.

The annual fruit and vegetable show of the Massachusetts Horticultural So-fine show is anticipated.

P. J. Van Baarda, of J. Breck & Sons, is back from his European trip. He secured some desirable novelties for his firm. Much of his time was spent in Holland.

Recent visitors included David Smith, of Thomas Smith & Sons, Stranraer, Scotland, and D. Wallace, representing Hosea Waterer, of Philadelphia.

The present month has been a busy one with the growing body of New England dahlia specialists. The numerous fairs are incomplete without their complement of the popular fall flower and all make good advertising for the exhibitors.

The Market.

Rain has come at last and with it much colder weather. The rain was one of the slow, soaking kind, and a good deal of water fell. It was certainly a relief, too. Now the dust is settled for the first time in two months and the atmosphere is cleared. The cool weather will also help the flower business. It will start the public buying as nothing else will and it will give the growers a chance to get their stock into good condition. It will work wonders for the mum, especially in the way of keeping qualities.

As a matter of fact, for the last few days business has been good. The home trade has been lively and there has been a decided increase in the shipping trade. It all goes to show that business is beginning to stir itself again, and before we know it we will be in the midst of fall business and the trade papers will be reporting it as good as ever, in spite of the presidential year and all of those other things which the pessimist is constantly bringing forward to make us believe we are all going to ruin. Just attend to business and keep things moving and you will have no kick coming when you foot up the season's business.

Flowers are coming in heavily, with a noticeable improvement in the quality.

There has been quite an improvement in trade. While there have been no specially large orders, there seems to be an improvement all around, which seems to indicate better things. There is still plenty of stock, for while gladioli and asters have about disappeared, there are quantities of Beauties, roses and carnations, with chrysanthemums well in sight, so there will be no scarcity, even with the improvement in trade.

it did not come up to expectations, nor up to previous years, so far as the use of flowers is concerned. Mrs. E. A. Williams, however, had several good orders for social affairs during the week.

Various Notes.

This is sesquicentennial week and the city is handsomely decorated with flags and bunting, beautiful columns and arches along the route of the parades, the electric display at night being worth a trip to see. The florists will be represented through the club by a very beautiful float. It will be twenty-four feet long and will represent an Indian maiden in a canoe coming out of the wild shrubbery and flowers of the past into the garden of cultivated roses of the present. Best Atmosphere for Keeping Flowers is inside a McCray Refrigerator. They are built with the patented system of circulation of cold, dry, fresh air, which preserves the beauty and fragrance, prevents wilting, and uses an astonishingly small amount of ice. This saving of ice pays for the refrigerator itself, as many florists have actually demonstrated. There is no stagnant air in the McCray.

McCray Refrigerators

with their elegant finish will give your store a very attractive appearance. They can be furnished with mirrors, and are lined with white enamel, tile, opal glass, marble, etc., to suit your taste and pocketbook.

A McCray Refrigerator will last more than a lifetime, and will save ice for you daily, and will keep your stock in fresher condition than any other refrigerator on the market.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The dahlia exhibit of the Connecticut Horticultural Society in lower Unity hall far surpassed the expectations of the members, in number of varieties and quantity of flowers, every available space being occupied. Besides dahlias, there were asters, cannas, gladioli, anemones, coxcombs, and others. A bank of palms occupied the center of the hall, and palms, ferns and Japanese grasses encircled the posts in the room, the walls being covered with green and white bunting. The awards in the professional classes were:

Show dahlias, 18 blooms, named varieties, Elizabeth park first.
Cactus dahlias, 18 blooms, named varieties, J. F. Huss first.
Twelve cactus dahlias, Elizabeth park first, J. F. Huss second.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.;
First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.;
Sec'y and Treas., O. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

THE real status of the bean situation is not yet known.

PEAS are turning out about as short as the most conservative estimators predicted.

BULB trade is fair; what is needed is a good frost to start the demand for outdoor planting.

ONION seed is apparently as scarce as the grower who could not land a contract order hoped for.

VISITED CHICAGO: Lester C. Morse, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Cal.; Arthur Clark, of E. B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.

THE onion fields of the central west have not panned out as well as was expected some time back, but the growers have had weather to harvest it in that would be a credit to California.

At Chicago the onion set crop has for the most part gone into winter quarters. No rain from harvest time until the time of putting them into the warehouses means a great deal added to the keeping quality of the product.

W. J. MACK, secretary J. C. Robinson Seed Co., Waterloo, Neb., says they have not yet been able to complete inspection of squashes, pumpkins and corn. He says they will be able to make very fair deliveries on watermelon, but cucumber and muskmelon are practical failures.

IN general, all of the seed crops are short, vine seeds especially so, not excepting the cucumber. Turnip beets and a whole lot of other standard European crops are getting less as each statement of probable delivery is sent out. It will be necessary to advance prices all along the line to keep things even.

P. J. VAN BAARDA, of Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston, has returned from his European trip.

A. C. ZVOLANEK reports that the season has been a good one in the sale of sweet pea seed and many of his varieties are nearly sold out.

THE Western Packers' Canned Goods Association will hold a meeting at the Sherman House, Chicago, October 15, at which a large attendance is expected.

D. V. BURRELL, Rocky Ford, Colo., is shipping cantaloupes to market in crates of standard length and width, but only deep enough to contain one layer of melons.

THE United States court at St. Louis has set October 7 as the date for consideration of the application of the St. Louis Seed Co. for confirmation of its composition with its creditors at 33 1-3 cents on the dollar.

It is reported that J. A. Everett, Indianapolis, has begun suit against the publishers of the Equity Farm Journal for $100,000 damage for expressing a doubt as to the authentic character of some of Everett's seed novelties.

ROGERS BROS., Alpena, Mich., report: "Only a small part of our crops have been delivered so far. They are mostly running below our field estimates, which is on account of the severe drought and hot winds. Think our yield will be below 1907."

G. S. CREGO, the originator of the Crego aster, who removed last spring from Maywood, Ill., to Portland, Ore., says that his field of asters is in fine condition and promising a moderate crop of good seed. He says the cool, moist climate is conducive to slow but normal development.

At Richmond, Va., the T. J. King Seed Co. has been granted a certificate of incorporation with from $50,000 to $100,000 capital stock. The officers are: President, T. J. King; vice-president, C. W. King; secretary and treasurer, C. W. Winn; J. D. King, D. R. Midyette and J. J. Addison, all of Richmond.

THE European seeds are coming in earlier this year than last.

DAMAGING rains are reported from the lima bean district in southern California.

TOMATO is another of the seed crops about which discouraging reports are heard.

THE prospect for an adequate crop of seed of most varieties of sweet corn has been measurably improved in the last few weeks.

CONNECTICUT SEED CROPS.

Frederick M. Clark, secretary of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn., wrote as follows, under date of September 26:

"Our seed crops at the present time have all been harvested, with the exception of sweet corn. Our onion seed, the last week before harvesting, experienced two severe storms, one a wind and rain storm the other a severe rain storm. This caused blight to affect a great many fields to the extent that the yield will not be over fifty per cent of normal in this section. Our sweet corn is curing down abnormally early and will be of excellent quality. The yield and breadth, however, will not be heavy."

AS RICE SEES THE SITUATION.

Writing under date of September 22, the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., discussed the seed crop situation as follows:

"In regard to crop prospects as we view them at the present time, appearances are for more shortages in the catalogue than before in many a day. Among the crops which are short we can mention peas of the garden varieties. At present it does not appear what the crop is really going to give us, but enough peas have been delivered to show us that the growers did not produce a surplus.

"Beans, the garden varieties, are also a short crop, but as there has been a considerable stock of the 1907 crop carried over, we do not think any serious shortage will be experienced.

"The weather for ripening sweet corn has been good, and, while the yield and the acreage are not excessive, yet the crop is going to get well ripened up and in all probability there will be enough to go around and prices must be moderate.

"Vine seeds of all kinds are on the short side. The red onions are also short in supply and those that grow on contract are not filling their contract orders.

"Beet seed is a short crop and many other articles on the list will also be known as short items before the season goes by. Prices are bound to rule strong on everything above mentioned."

NEBRASKA SEED CROPS.

Wm. Emerson, manager of the Western Seed and Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb., has made a tour of the district on crop inspection. Writing September 23, he said:

"The writer has just inspected our melon crops, and regret to state found them even poorer than anticipated. The prospects, therefore, are very unfavorable for anything like one-half an average crop of muskmelon and watermelon, and in a very large number of cases the crops will not pay to harvest, and we will not be able to secure sufficient seed for our own planting.

"Pumpkin and squash will also be rather light crops, but we believe in most cases somewhat better than the cucumber and melon.

"Sweet and field corn crops are maturing nicely, and while some of the later crops are quite badly worm-eaten, we hope to have, generally speaking, fair yields and good quality to apply upon our orders. We believe, however, that some of the very late crops of replanted corn will prove to be somewhat light and chaffy, on account of the very hot weather ripening these late crops too quickly, and which, of course, will have a tendency to reduce the yield."

THE CROP OF FESCUES.

Conrad Appel, Darmstadt, Germany, wrote under date of September 10, in part, as follows of the several varieties of festuca:

"Festuca elatior, the guaranteed true Rhenish product, which is only grown in a small district, yielded much less than last year. Consequently a higher price had to be granted for the rough seed; therefore the re-cleaned qualities, specially the superior grades, will demand higher figures. The new crop produced a seed of first-class quality, and I can only advise everybody, who knows the advantage specially of this true Rhenish product, to commence buying in his stock now. Some parties try to use Festuca pratensis as an equivalent for this sort, because in former normal years the latter reached double the figure which had to be paid for the other kind; but Festuca pratensis cannot at all replace the true Rhenish tall fescue, the latter having a much higher value for agriculture. This year, owing to the enormous price of Festuca pratensis, everybody should prefer Festuca elatior.

"Of Festuca duriusecula and Festuca ovina, at the beginning of the season there were hopes for a good crop, but in July before the harvest started we found out that many fields had been thickly covered with clover and in consequence have been used to make hay. The grounds left for seed production represent only a small percentage of the whole acreage, so that the result is much behind last year's yield. The buying prices, particularly for cleaner, better qualities, went up rapidly and reached the limits we had in 1901. Many lots of the new crop are intermixed with sorrel, trefoil in shells and seradella, which makes it costly to clean them and raises the prices for the fancy and still more for the superfine grades; the same situations and sale prices we had already in 1901, as mentioned before.

"Festuca ovina angustifolia yielded somewhat better than last season, but the great competition in this seed, which only

BULB GROWERS IN HOLLAND.

Jubilee Bulb Show at Haarlem in 1910.

The Dutch Bulb Growers' Society is organizing an important flower show in commemoration of its half-centenary.

It is well known that this society till now has organized shows of forced bulbous plants every five years. The last exhibition of this kind was held at Haarlem, March, 1905, and although the quality of the exhibits was of a high standard, the show as a whole was not a great success. All the visitors, and especially the foreign members of the jury, were unanimous in declaring that a show of flowering bulbs in the open ground was to be preferred in future. The general meeting of the society decided that the next quinquennial show should be held in the flowering season of the bulbs, from the first day of April till the middle of May in the year 1910. The Haarlem city council, recognizing the high economical importance of bulb culture, has consented that the most picturesque part of the city park shall be disposed of as a site for the show, and consequently it will be possible to prepare a floral exhibition of a quite disinct and new character, situated in landscape scenery of rare beauty.

The flowering season of hyacinths and tulips every year attracts large crowds of visitors, not only horticulturists wishing to inspect and to control stocks and growers, but also tourists for pleasure, who have always been highly delighted with the unique floral beauty of picturesque Holland in April and May.

The proposed exhibition will doubtless be a true floral fete, and Haarlem during the days of the show will become the rendezvous of horticulturists and amateurs from all parts of the world.

The Dutch Bulb Growers' Society has every reason to celebrate its half-centenary in this way, considering its prosperity and the importance of its present position. Having been founded in 1860 with about 150 members, the society has now become a mighty organization, including a membership of 2,800, divided
